CALLS GERMANY ANOTHER CARTHAGE TO BE DESTROYED

Warsaw, Aug. 10.— (AP) —Kurjer Polski, Warsaw newspaper of big industry, apparently freed from official restraint, today editorially compared Germany with ancient Carthage as a "nest of contagion" which must be "destroyed".

"Twenty years ago one hesitated to march on Berlin", said the editorial in language of unprecedented violence. "One did not want to beat a man who was down. . . . This mistake will not be committed a second time. . . . "Carthage must be destroyed."

However, the Italian military refuses to divulge any reason for the halting of the war games.

Major League Pennant Races Tighten Considerably As Both Reds and Yanks Lose

Dutch Leonard Chalks Up 4th Win at Expense of Champions Winning 7-5

GIANTS ADVANCE

Reds Are Humbled by Cubs 6-4 but Best Baseball of Day Played by Tail-Enders

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Instead of trying to legislature New York Yankees out of the world championships, Clark Griffith the foxy old owner of Washington Senators, ought to share his club's formula for beating New York with the rest of the American League. The Senators medicine did the trick again yesterday.

Washington shook a run out of the Yankees on one hit in the first inning. Then every time New York scored, Washington cancelled the runs in the same inning until by the fifth frame the Senators had it won 7-5.

Dutch Leonard ,the 39-year-old knuckleballer, got credit for his fourth victory without defeat against the Yankees this season although he allowed all New York's runs and had to be removed for a pinchhitter in the fifth. This was all right with Leonard however, because Bobby Estalella, who batted for him, singled with the bases loaded for the winning runs.

The combination of New York's defeat and Boston Red Sox' fifth straight victory reduced the Yankees' lead to five and half games, the shortest margin since July 13.

Boston came from behind again in beating Philadelphia Athletics, 7-5 getting three runs on six singles in the sixth inning.

Bridges a Winner

Tommy Bridges hurled Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 triumph over Chicago White Sox with a seven-hit six-strikeout performance which shut out the Sox until the ninth.

Like the American League leaders, Cincinnati's pace-setters in the National circuit also were spanked, 6-4 by Chicago Cubs. Three of the runs which caused Paul Derringer his seventh setback were unearned as the usually faultless keystone combination of Lonnie Frey and Billy Myers ran into a bad day.

Cliff Melton of the Giants returned to form with a five-hit pitching show which stopped Boston Bees, 6-3. He had one bad inning, the fourth, when Boston got four of its hits and all of its runs, including a homer by Al Simmons. Melton had ample batting support, however, with Mel Ott, Joe Moore and Alex Kampouris hitting home runs.

Bottom Clubs Split

The best baseball came from the bottom of the standings as Brooklyn Dodgers and Philadelphia Phillies divided a double-header. In taking the first game 3-0 Luke Hamlin of the Dodgers had to pitch three-hit ball to better a four-hit effort by Walter Beck. It was Hamlin's second straight shutout.

The Dodgers started out to win the second game, too, but the Phillies' pent-up batting instincts burst out with seven runs in the sixth inning for an 8-3 triumph.

WINGS ADVANCE ON LEADERS IN INT. LOOP

Rochester Crushes Jersey City 26-1, While Chiefs Win Twin Bill

LEAFS LOSE AGAIN

Jersey City Giants, who have led the International League parade since June 26, are a bewildered looking lot today after the beating they received last night at the hands of their most persistent rivals, Rochester Red Wings.

The Wings really went to town on the hapless pace-setters, scoring in every inning to crush the Little Giants, 26-1, and move within one game of first place.

Si Johnson recorded his 19th victory of the season by holding Jersey City to nine hits while his mates pounded Hy Vandenberg, John Wittig and Pete Sivess for 26 safeties. The Jerseys committed six errors.

Rochester wasn't the only club to benefit by the Little Giants' downfall. Syracuse Chiefs, by sweeping a twin-bill with Montreal, 2-1 and 14-8, took sole possession of second place, only half a game out of first.

The Chiefs came from behind in the seventh inning of the twilight opener to tie the score and won out in the second extra inning. Johnny Gee went the distance for Syracuse giving up 10 well scattered safeties for his 17th triumph.

Warren started the Chiefs off in the right direction in the nightcap with a homer in the first inning with the bases loaded. The Royals came back with three runs in the second, sending Ted Kleinhans to the showers, but never were able to catch up. Gene Schott, Montreal starter, was charged with the loss.

Newark Bears captured the series opener with Toronto, 7-6, in 10 innings to move closer to a coveted playoff position. After trailing six runs going into the eighth, the Bruins came to life and knotted the count scoring three runs in that frame and three more in the ninth. Tommy Holmes singled with one out in the 10th and raced all the way to third on a passed ball. He scored with the winning run when Judnich flied to Manush.

The Buffalo-Baltimore game was postponed.

HURLERS' BATTLE SEEN AS LOCALS TIE FLYERS 1-1

Chuck Barriage Whiffs 13 Airmen in Tidy Struggle

ALLOWS 6 HITS

Both Runs Are Earned in Best Game of Current Season

In a sterling pitchers' duel the Belleville "Orfuns" battled the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" to a 1-1 eight inning draw in the final scheduled game of the Bay of Quinte League played at the Air Port last evening when Chuck Barriage, hurling for the Belleville nine, gained a moral victory at least over "Spider" Webb ,the Airmen's pitching ace. Darkness terminated play in the eighth inning.

Belleville opened the scoring in the top half of the sixth as Little, Weeks, and Carson singled in succession to have Little score from second on Carson's hard drive. The Air Force retaliated in the last end of the seventh to knot the count after Crawford doubled and raced home on Smith's fluky single over the infield.

The Scoring

Barriage limited the Flyers to six scattered hits, only one being of the extra base nature, while the best Belleville could do from the offerings of Webb was to collect seven safeties, Carson getting a double in the second to lead the Orfuns with the willow. McQuaid counted a brace of singles for the locals, while Crawford, a former Kingston ball player, led the hitters of the night to count three of the Flyers' six hits, a double and two singles.

Barriage was in rare form striking out 13 and issuing but one base on balls, while Webb whiffed four, but his control was superb as he failed to give a base via the four ball route. The tie necessitates a replay of the game, prior to which the Flyers will play a postponed game with the local nine at the Fair Grounds on Tuesday evening next.. The lineups:

Belleville: McQuaid 3b; Pointer c; Collins 2b; Empson rf; Little ss; Weeks lf; Carson 1b; Riggs cf; and Barriage p.

R.C.A.F.: Lecompte 2b Gibson 3b; Lockyer ss; L'Heureaux c; Behan cf; Crawford rf; Smith lf; Oleskivis 1b and Webb p.

New York, Aug. 11 (AP)—Broadway bookies can't see those 1-4 prices Philly is quoting on Billy Conn to beat Gus Dorazio .... Three other National League managers have joined Casey Stengel in the belief the Reds may blow their lead....Dick Hanley, former Northwestern football coach, says Bill De Correvant is the best ball toter the big ten will have seen since they turned Red Grange loose.

The Dodgers are expected to buy either Jake Mooty, Syracuse southpaw, or Carl Doyle, Memphis righthander before the week is out.... The familiar maps of Walter St. Denis, Lionel Levy and Rivington Bisland are popping out on Detroit sports pages these days ....They are respectively Mike Jacobs' press agent, his architect and his box office expert.

Memphis friends of Doc Prothro, Phillies manager, gave him a "lucky horse shoe" at St. Louis the other day....That's the way it goes—his friends give him horse shoes, his players give him horse collars and the fans give him the horse laugh....The Frosty baseball club of Richmond, Va. is that and then some....It has lost its last 20 games.

GOLF TITLE WON

London, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP)—The Canadian intermediate golf championship, competed for only since 1933, was held today by capable, 21-year-old Shin Neal of Windsor, Ont.

Neal won the title yesterday after a stiff, three-hole play-off with anohter Windsor golfer, 18-year-old George Sillitch. Both finished the 36 holes of tournament play with scores of 150—10 strokes over the London Hunt and Country Club's par-70 layout, and Sillitch carried his older opponent to the third hole on a play-off before conceding defeat.

Cool, Calm and Collected Is Sports Announcer at Fire

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 11 (AP)— A fight announcer's presence of mind averted panic and possible tragedy in a fan-packed sports arena gutted by a near $1,000,000 fire which blazed into the early hours of today.

Hero of the blaze which burned $750,000 worth of civilian conservation crops equipment, was James Allen, sports writer of the Nampa (Idaho) Free Press for 17 years.

During the third round of the semi-final event of a boxing card, Allen smelled smoke.

The arena was in a sprawling. wooden building owned by Mrs. H. H. Bryant of Boise sister-in-law of Henry Ford, the Detroit automobile manufacturer, and her son, Melvin Bryant.

Light began to flicker, smoke rolled in through the dressing room.

Five hundred spectators rose like a wave.

A plainclothes fireman slipped to Allen's side and whispered for him to clear the arena—that the situation was serious.

"It's just a paper fire in the dressing room," Allen told the fans and they settled back in their seats.

Then he added:

"I think we'd better clear the arena until the smoke clears out—then we'll continue with the fight."

Quietly the spectators moved out.

Minutes later the arena was an inferno.

LOCAL LIFTER PLACES SECOND IN CONTEST

Jack Cooper Out-Lifts Ontario Champion However

EDWARDS BEST

Cooper Hoists 720 Pounds as Edwards Gains 735

Jack Cooper, Belleville's promising heavyweight aspirant in the art of weightlifting, finished second to Jack Edwards, Toronto senior weightlifting champion in an exhibition of the art of lifting presented at the Y.M.C.A. last evening. Cooper defeated Bill Milne, Ontario junior heavyweight champion in a three-man lifting contest, however.

Edwards totalled 735 pounds for three lifts, while Cooper's total lift was 720 pounds and Milne's an even 700 pounds. All contestants are members of the Toronto-York Weightlifting Club, under whose sponsorship the contest was held. At the conclusion of the meet, Norm Miller, Chairman of the Canadian Amateur Weightlifting Association, and who also acted as judge praised the efforts of the 18-year-old Cooper, who has only recently pursued the art and spoke in glowing terms of Cooper's future possibilities.

Equal Records

Although both Edwards and Cooper equalled their respective maximum lifts, which border upon the Canadian records, Milne was below conventional form. J. E. Shortt introduced Mr. Miller, the official of the evening, with the latter subsequently explaining the fundamentals of the art to some 100 spectators.

The weights of the contestants were officially given as Cooper 191 1-2; Milne 194 1-2 and Edwards 179 pounds. The officials of the meet were Referee, Norman Miller, Toronto. Judges, Jack Edmunds and Ed. Sunderland, Belleville. Scorer, Herbert Mowatt, assistants, Leon Shortt and Victor Mason.

The official lifts of the contestants were given out as follows:

Milne, press 230, snatch 210 and clean and jerk 260, total 700. Edwards, 226, snatch 220 and clean and jerk 290, total 735. Cooper press 215, snatch 230 and clean and jerk 275, total 720.

Cooper's snatch lift was the best of the evening.

HOCKEY PLAYERS MUST OBTAIN THEIR TRANSFERS

Eight Canadian Pucksters Slated for Edinburgh Club in Scotland

Edmonton, Aug. 11 (CP)—Proper transfers must be obtained by eight hockey players from Ontario and Quebec if they intend to do their playing next winter with Edinburgh Rockets in the newly-formed Scottish amateur hockey league, Dr. W. G. Hardy, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced last night.

George Kelly of Galt, Ont., who played last year with Hershey Bears in the Eastern United States amateur hockey league, said he and seven other Ontario and Quebec players had been signed by Edinburgh.

If the eight go overseas without first obtaining proper transfers they will be suspended by the C.A. H.A., Dr. Hardy said. This would mean automatic suspension in organized amateur and professional hockey everywhere.

Transfers of Dick Kowcinak and John McCreeds from Trail, B.C., to Northern Ontario have been approved, Dr. Hardy said.

Old Country Soccer Is On Horizon

Glasgow, Aug. 11 (CP Cable) — Scotland's footballers have finished pre-season training and tomorrow the 38 clubs that make up the Scottish League's two divisions start the long campaign that ends late in April.

Interest again centres on Glasgow Rangers—one of the world's greatest soccer clubs. During the close season the light blues bolstered their playing staff and experts expect them to again set the pace for league honors. Last winter the Rangers won their 24th title in a canter, finishing 11 points ahead of Celtic, runner-up.

Relegation of Queen's Park, famous amateur aggregation, to the second division along with Raith Rovers, is deplored throughout the country. The club will play in junior football for the second time in its long history. The amateurs played in the second division in the 1921-22 campaign, regaining senior status the following year.

Coming in to the major league are Cowdenbeath and Alloa. The teams who pack plenty of strength on the attack, have played in senior football previously. Cowdenbeath was in the first division as recently as 1933-34 but its partner in promotion played with top ranking clubs back in the 1920s.

Several Scottish players have been affected by the compulsory military service draft but only two outstanding men have been called up thus far—J. McKennan, Patrick Thistle and J. Galloway of Rangers.

And they wonder why there's unemployment in Canada. Yesterday the Athletic Board of Queen's University announced selection of a head coach of Queen's 1939 senior Intercollegiate football team. There had been some wild guessing as to whom the person to replace Teddy Reeve might be, but none suspected that an American would be the ultimate selection. The appointment has been made in Frank Tyndall, of Syracuse, N.Y., former Toronto Argonaut player from 1933 to '36 inclusive. Tyndall is at present employed on the official staff of the New York State penitentiary and after being appointed coach at Queen's obtained leave of absence for the football semester. The Queen's Athletic Board also announced they had invited Frank "Pep" Leadley, Hamilton, Joe Breen, Toronto and Dr. Harry Batstone, of Kingston, to act as honorary coaches. With the recent announcement that Queen's would be minus six of last year's squad it would seem their 1939 rugby squad will need more than honorary coaches to shine on the Interscholastic firmament.

President Lorne McDougall of the Bay of Quinte League, has a few choice problems on his hands today. Last evening at the Airport the Belleville "Orfuns" terminated the Quinte loop schedule with a 1-1 draw with the Flyers in an abbreviated eight inning struggle, which means little towards solving the third-place play-off berth confronting these two clubs. Chuck Barriage hurled for the "Orfuns" and limited the Airmen to six hits and struck out 13 for good measure. "Spider" Webb, on the hilltop for the Flyers, was touched for seven safeties but only struck out four giving Barriage a wide edge on the slab. Belleville opened the scoring in the sixth, the result of three successive singles by Little, Weeks and Carson, while Crawford, a former Kingston ballister, scored for the Air Force on Smith's single in the seventh to knot matters. The Air Force have tie games with Picton, Napanee and Belleville, as well as a postponed game with the locals, which will be played here on Tuesday. In the meantime President McDougall is confronted with the problem of declaring a league winner by Aug. 26th, during which time the league play-offs must be concluded.

The Flyers presented a rather questionable line-up last night, insomuch as Lockyer who has been playing for Picton all season Crawford and Behan, who recently came to the Air Force from Kingston, all were in the lineup. The locals are not complaining, but we wonder what stand the league might take if the Airmen terminated in a playoff berth. Louie Lecompte, of Flyer hockey fame, was at second base for the Airmen yesterday.

Frankie Collins former Peterboro and Toronto senior O.H.A. centre ice puckster is now residing in Belleville. Frankie, who played for the National "Sea Fleas" a few years ago when that club won the Allan Cup, was moved here by his employers, the Imperial Oil Company. Last night he was seen talking to Milton "Dutch" Speidelberg, Belleville's latest hockey addition, who hails from Waterloo. Incidentally Collins would prove a handy man in coaching the local hockey teams next winter, if his employers leave him here.

The City Softball playdowns get under way with two games this evening. Corbys at Point Anne and Shell "Oilers" versus Dracup Tires at the Flats. The ultimate goal is the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy, emblematic to the senior softball championship of Belleville. The draw for this series was made by virtue of the final standing of the City Softball League schedule, it being ruled that the first and fourth placed clubs should meet in a best-two-in-three series while at the same time the second and third placed clubs should clash in a similar series. As Shell finished first and Dracups fourth, naturally the other two finished Corbys A.C. and Point Anne in that order. In the meantime the Citizens' Juniors have not been idle and they have been drawn against the Oshawa junior winners by the O.A.S.A. The dated alloted, so says, Convener Harry Rollins, are Aug. 22nd at Oshawa and Aug. 24th at Belleville. Other major O.A.S.A. provincial softball dates will be released most any day now for Point Anne in the Intermediate "C", Shell "Oilers" intermediate "A" and possibly Corbys A.C. in the senior "B."

Just how to figure out the two major league races is a tough problem today. Both the Yankees and the Reds lost yesterday having their respective leads cut to 5 1-2 and seven games, which isn't too great an advantage at this time of the year. Errors proved costly to the Redlegs as the Cubs beat them 6-4 Derringer being credited with the loss. Down in Washington the Senators humbled the Yankees, as the veteran Dutch Leonard knuckle-balled the champions into submission. It begins to look as though the Giants have at last struck a winning combination. The Terrymen swept their recent series with the Bees and today are in fourth place, playing their best ball of over a month. The Red Sox won yesterday to help their cause and make Mr. Yawkey happy.

Elsewhere in today's issue will appear the O.A.S.A. play-off draw as suggested by Convener Harry Rollins to Secretary Verne McIlwraith. All classes from junior to intermediate "C" are listed. Incidentally Mr. Rollins telegraphed to the parent association last night requesting a senior "B" rating for the Corbys A.C. No reply had been received at noon. Of course this request is a post entry and can be rightfully rejected, but the Barriage-Barnett outfit have their fingers crossed and are hoping for the best.

Sport Hash — Ray Schalk, that veteran White Sox catcher, says present-day ball players are cream-puffs....Hartnett, of the Cubs and Bill Dickey of the Yankees are the only big time catchers today, Schalk is quoted as saying, and mebbe he should know....Al Schacht, the Clown Prince of baseball, will be the added attraction at the Maple Leaf Stadium on Saturday night ....The first time we met Schacht was in 1924 in Binghampton, N.Y. when he was trying his luck without much success, as a pitcher for Bud Weiser's "Triplets"....The next year Schacht was teamed with Nick Altrock at Washington as a funmaker....How times change.

ARGOS SITTING PRETTY WITH OLD GANG

Toronto, Aug. 11 (CP)—It's rolling around to the football season again and Toronto Argonauts, senior Dominion champions, are sitting pretty, according to Manager Herb Boynton.

"The old gang will all be there, with the exception of Bob Isbister and Jim Palmer," Boynton said last night, thus denying rumors of last spring that the Scullers' old guard was breaking up.

During the spring two huge gaps were left in the Argo backfield and line. Isbister, whose booming punts shattered the good work of many an opponent's front trench and Palmer, line coach and veteran wingman, announced their removal to Hamilton. Palmer will coach Tigers of the Interprovincial Union and Isbister will kick.

Rumor also had it other players were leaving the Argonaut camp, notably Red Storey, plunging and running half who dynamited the Winnipeg defence in last December's Dominion final; Annis Stukus, quarterback and kicker, and Teddy Morris all-star flying wing and plunger.

To bolster the Canadian champions' line and abckfeo pions line and backfield several notable university stalwarts will be tried this fall, the manager said.

Among those Boynton mentioned were George Willis, University of Western Ontario's all-star eastern snapback of last autumn and Jimmy Farmer, brilliant plunging half from the same university. Frank Serdevan, University of Toronto's hefty middle wing of last season will be trying for the wingline.

AUSTRALIANS WIN

Seabright, N.J., Aug. 11 (AP) —

The Australians have done it individually, so today they will try to take the measure of the Cuban Davis Cup team in pairs and a victory in the doubles at the Seabright Cricket Club will clinch the American zone finals for the Aussies and qualify them to meet Yugoslavia in the interzone finals.

Adrian Quist and John Bromwich, victors in the singles matches yesterday pair fof against Ricardo Morales and Lorenzo Nodarse in the doubles match this afternoon and in view of yesterday's proceedings anything but an Australian victory would be an upset.

Bromwich was away to a wobbly start in the opening singles match yesterday, but finally steadied to dispose of Jose Aguero in straight sets 8-6, 6-0, 6-2. Quist then followed with brilliant exhibition, disposing of Marales, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

MOON ON THE WATER
by Ruby M. Ayres

"May I go on?" Hallard asked.

Jane nodded silently, and he said quite quietly, and as if it were the most natural thing in the world:

"I should like to marry you, Jane—it would give me great happiness if I thought that some day you would marry me. I know, of course, that you are engaged to Montford, and that therefore I should not have spoken as I have, but I wanted you to know; I wanted to tell you that my most earnest wish is to make you happy—to take care of you, to—make it impossible for you ever to look as you did an hour ago when you pushed open that door."

Jane closed her eyes; she felt like a child who listens to a fairy story, knowing it to be unreal and impossible, and yet utterly carried away by the beauty of the story, and its idealism. When at last she spoke, there was a little quiver in her voice, perhaps of happiness, because in spite of her amazement, she knew that this man was speaking the truth—she knew that he had thought of her, did think of her, and that he was sincere when he spoke of his wish to make her happy.

And it was so wonderful to be wanted—to be thought about, although until now she had never realized it. She had believed that she could build happiness for herself on the sands of a man's wavering affections until this moment when she had been brought face to face with the rock of another man's sincerity.

But the only thing she could find to say was, "And—Dulcie?"

Hallard smiled. "My dear, she cares nothing for me," he said, and then the silence fell again until he asked a little diffidently, "Of course you will marry Montford?"

Jane's answer was to spread her bare left hand on the table beside his. "No," she said. "That was all—finished—before I met you today."

Jane had no sooner spoken than the enormity of what she had said seemed to rush over her like a burning wave.

All finished? Her love for Gavin and her dreams of the future? What possessed her that she could dream it was finished? No matter what he did, or how indifferent he was to her, she loved him with all her heart and soul.

She had thrown his ring away, but that was only an empty symbol of the thing which was so much part and parcel of her existence that she could not imagine life without it.

In the moment of silence that followed she felt as if her pride and her love were warring one against the other in a desperate struggle for supremacy. Could she bear to go on and find contentment in a half affection? To know that there was another girl who attracted Gavin more strongly than she did, or could she face her life without him?

She looked up at Hallard with a faint smile. "You don't believe me?" she asked.

He answered. "I knew you were not happy."

"Happy?" she echoed ruefully, and then with sudden passion: "I don't believe in happiness—it's just a myth; something you want to believe in and try to believe in, when all the time you know that you're only humbugging yourself." She tried to laugh. "I'm afraid I'm not a very cheerful lunch companion," she said with an effort.

She glanced up at a queer little painted clock which was tick-tocking on the opposite wall.

"It's nearly three—I must go."

They were the only two left in the restaurant, but Hallard said quietly, "There is no hurry, and it's still raining."

Jane said again, "I must go—they will wonder where I am," and she began to pull on her gloves.

Wonder where she was? Who would wonder? Not Gavin, certainly, for no doubt he would be enormously relieved at her absence—not Dulcie either.

"When shall I see you again?" Hallard asked, and Jane remembered what she had completely forgotten—that this man had just said he loved her. It only showed of what little importance it was, and she felt sorry.

He asked again with gentle insistence, "Is there no hope for me, Jane?"

INSTALMENT 23.

Jane shook her head.

"I'm sorry—I don't love you....I wish I did," she added, and for a moment she felt as if by those words she had deliberately shut the gate on a fair road of which she had caught only a fleeting glimpse.

This man had so much to offer—his love—unlike Dulcie, she put that first—riches and a position in life; and then she suddenly remembered how, when they were all young, her mother had sometimes given her a grey powder in a spoonful of jam, and how quickly she had discovered the subterfuge.

"But you're so fond of jam," her mother had protested.

Funny to think of that now, and yet in a way she felt that Hallard was offering her a similar subterfuge—only not with the intention of deceiving her, for what was the use of being rich and a somebody when the greyness of wanting some one else was always present in her heart?

"I must go," she said again; touched his arm. "I don't know how to thank you for being so kind to me; and please forgive me if—because——"

He smiled then. "Forgive you for not loving me?"

"I wish I did," she said again.

They went out into the dismal afternoon; the rain was still pouring down, but Hallard's car was waiting—Dulcie's car, Jane thought wryly, and for the first time she wondered what her sister would say could she know of the amazing things Hallard had said to her.

"I'll drive you wherever you want to go," he said when she would have bidden him good-bye. "That is, if you are sure you will not spend the rest of the afternoon with me."

"Thank you, but I must go home—so if you will take me to the station——"

It was a silent drive. Jane stole a little look at Hallard's quiet face, wondering if he really minded, whether he was really in earnest, whether once again she had blundered by not accepting all he had offered.

"I never seem to do the right thing," she thought hopelessly, but it was so difficult to know which was the right thing!

"If ever you want me—or there is anything I can do for you, Jane—" Hallard said when they reached the station, and she answered simply, "If there is, I will ask you."

He went with her on to the platform and stood at the door of the carriage till the train started.

Jane racked her brains in vain for something to say, something commonplace and yet kind, but all she could manage was, "It looks as if it means to rain forever."

Hallard smiled then. "It won't," he assured her. "Perhaps by the time you get home the sun will be shining."

Perhaps he meant that metaphorically, Jane thought, but there was no hope in her heart, for she knew surprisingly that at last her pride had proved to be stronger than her love, and that she would keep her pride, no matter what it might cost her, and what else she lost.

Hallard took her hand in a warm clasp.

"Don't forget that if ever I can help you——" he said again, and Jane answered, "I will not forget."

He shut the door and the train moved slowly away from the platform.

How it rained! Jane shivered as she watched the big drops beating against the windows. She took off her hat and pushed back her unruly hair—closing her eyes.

She must have dozed a little, for when the train suddenly stopped at a station, she opened her eyes with a start. They were only a few miles from home, and the rain had ceased.

She caught up her hat; she would get out here and walk the rest of the way. A walk would do her good, and it would put off for a little longer the inevitable meeting she dreaded. Not that it made any difference whatever Gavin might say; she gave up her ticket and walked out into the country road.

Trees and hedges were sopping wet, there was a freshness in the air, and the clouds were breaking overhead.

Jane was a good walker, but it was dark long before she reached home, and as she turned in at the gate, the rain began to fall once more.

Jane slipped in at the side door and took off her damp coat, but although she hardly made any sound, Pamela immediately appeared in the hall.

"Where have you been? Gavin has been in a frightful state about you. You didn't tell him you were going out—where have you been?"

"To London," Jane said calmly.

"To London? What on earth for?" her sister demanded. "And look at your shoes! You never got all that mud on them in London."

"I walked from Searly Halt," Jane explained.

"Well!" Pamela said blankly.

Jane followed her into the drawing-room; she knew now that she was very tired, and that her head was aching.

"Every one out?" she asked.

"Every one?" Pamela echoed. "When there is only Dulcie to be out? She went off somewhere soon after lunch, I don't know where—and Gavin came, and he's out, too, looking for you—he seemed to have got it into his head that something had happened—an accident or something. She eyed Jane with suspicion, but Jane only laughed.

"Nothing ever happens to me," she said. "I'm the bad penny that always turns up." And then after a moment she asked indifferently, "Where is Gavin?"

"He went to the station to meet the six-forty; we thought perhaps you might be on it."

"Oh," Jane said. "Well, I'll make myself look respectable."

But as she turned to go, there was a step in the hall, and a moment later Gavin appeared in the doorway.

"She's not on the six-forty," he said, and then stopped as he saw Jane standing there. "Where have you been?" he demanded hoarsely.

Jane smiled. "I've been to London—to visit the King," she answered mockingly.

He came forward, his face pale with anger.

"You did not tell me you were going to London—you knew I was coming for you this afternoon——"

Pamela said a little anxiously, "Well, if you two are going to quarrel, I had better go," and she walked out of the room, closing the door behind her.

"Have you a cigarette?" Jane asked; she felt perfectly self-possessed and indifferent, and when he did not answer, she even smiled faintly.

"Well—what have I done now?" she inquired.

"What you done? Why did you rush off to London like that—Pamela says she had no idea you would not be in to lunch; you might have left a message—you might have known I should be worried——" He broke off sharply as Jane laughed.

"I think that's funny," she said. "You worried!"

She had found a cigarette and was calmly lighting it, and suddenly Gavin's eyes fell on her bare left hand.

"Where's your ring?" he said.

She looked up at him. "I've thrown it away—I always throw things away when they are no longer of any use to me."

"Thrown it—away?"

"Yes—out of the railway carriage window into a field."

There was a dreadful silence before Gavin said in a stifled voice, "You must be mad."

Jane shook her head. "No, I think perhaps I have been—for the past few weeks, but at the moment I feel particularly sane—sane enough at any rate to tell you that you are quite free—that I no longer consider myself engaged to you."

Gavin stared at her blankly, and then he laughed. "My dear, what are you talking about? Of course we're still engaged, and, as a matter of fact, I have some very important news for you—this is partly why I was so—distressed to find you were out when I arrived this afternoon; you see, I wanted to tell you that the business is all fixed up and that——" He stopped again perhaps as unconvinced as she was by the sincerity of his words.

But Jane only said evenly, "Go on—you say everything you wish to say first, and then it will be my turn."

She saw the color rising in his handsome face, and she thought pityingly: "Oh, Gavin, why need you pretend any more! Why can't you be honest and face the truth as I can—at last?" But after a moment he went on with an effort:

"The details are all settled and the partnership is mine—subject to payment of course, and so—there is no reason why we cannot be married—as soon as you wish."

INSTALMENT 24.

Jane turned away and walked over to the window. It was too dark now to see anything except the blurred light of the street lamp, and yet it seemed to her that she could see everything with painful clarity. Her own blind hopes from which the veil had at last been torn away and the broken threads of a dream which must be gathered up and joined somehow if she were to go on living at all. And then, as if from a great distance, she heard her own voice saying quite calmly, even kindly:

"There is one very good reason why we cannot be married, Gavin. I am glad about the partnership for your sake, and I hope it will be a great success, but—you see——" For the tiniest fraction she was conscious of a stabbing pain, but it was quickly gone as she continued, "The trouble is that I don't want to marry you—not now. I can see that it would have been a mistake, and I hate mistakes, though I have made so many. That's why I threw your ring away—just to make sure of myself." And then very slowly she turned to face him. "You're quite free—we'll just be friends—if you care to, I mean, but all the rest is finished. Please believe I am quite serious—that I mean what I say."

And then her hands suddenly clenched as he came towards her, but she managed to meet his eyes steadily.

"Don't talk nonsense, Jane. I don't know what has happened to make you behave like this—but you have only to tell me and I will do my best to put it right. Of course we are still engaged—nothing is altered—Jane!" He took her by the shoulders, gently shaking her, "Wake up—you look half asleep—wake up!"

"I am wide awake," Jane answered slowly. "Very wide awake, and it's no use, Gavin; nothing can make any difference now, because my mind is made up. You don't want to marry me—you never did—and now I don't want to marry you—that's all; it seems simple enough to me."

He made an exclamation of impatience. "But what has happened? What have I done? You were all right yesterday—you seemed quite happy and satisfied."

"Did I?" She smiled a little wistfully. "I'm sorry, because I've never been happy—at least, only just at first—when I first knew you——"

He broke in impatiently, "But the other day when we talked, you said we would start again with no more misunderstandings; we agreed to be good friends—to be quite frank with each other——" He stopped helplessly.

Jane said unemotionally. "I haven't forgotten—but I think you did—very quickly." She threw the half-smoked cigarette into the grate. "It's all so useless, talking like this; it can't lead anywhere. Please believe me and let me go."

But when she would have passed him he barred the way to the door.

"You can't go without giving me a chance to explain or to defend myself—for whatever you think I've done; if some one has made mischief between us—at least I have the right to know what has been said. It's not like you to be so hard—and unjust, Jane."

Her lips quivered a little, but she answered at once.

"I don't feel hard—I don't think I feel anything, and that's something to be grateful for—not to care any more. It seems to me that that's happiness—just to go on with nothing really mattering—only I didn't realize it before."

He said again impatiently, "But what have I done? You must give me some reason for—for throwing everything away like this—our future together—the partnership——"

And then for the first time Jane felt as if a knife had been turned in the coldness of her heart. The partnership! Of course, that was the chief thing, but she forced herself to answer him unemotionally, "It will make no difference to the partnership—that will be just the same. I don't want the money—I shouldn't know how to spend it—so please——"

"What do you take me for?" Gavin asked savagely. "What sort of man do you think I am to—to accept money from a girl who calmly throws me over without giving me a reason—or the chance to explain! Jane, for heaven's sake—"

She flung his hand away when he touched her.

"Leave me alone—leave me alone!" And then as he fell back from her, flushed and mortified, her unnatural calm seemed to give way and she cried out:

"Very well—I'll explain—I'll tell you why I don't care for you any more. I know that you've lied to me—even after we agreed to be friends and to trust each other. I know that last night—when you said you could not see me—you were out with Dulcie." She drew a long harsh breath. "But it doesn't matter, and that's the queer part of it—it doesn't matter at all, so please don't trouble to deny it—or to explain anything. I don't want to hear; I only want you to go away and leave me in peace."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for pop's health and Puds Simkins's father was sitting on Pud's front steps smoking a cigar with a unsattisfied expression, and pop said, Lovely day.

I wouldn't like any day, I'm depressed Mr. Simkins said, and pop said, I dont blame you, with the things you see in the papers every day. Wars and roomers of war, undeclared wars and peaceful purges, lies and counter lies, concentration camps and secret police. Yee gods what is the world coming to and where is it going from? You're right, Simkins, I dont see how anybody can feel contented today, he said.

Twenty years I've had that watch, and in all that time it never lost a second, no not a quarter of a second, so will you tell me why it should suddenly decide just today of all days to lose 4 and an 8th minutes? Mr. Simkins said, and pop said I wish I could tell you, I'm sure. I'm pretty good at taking a watch apart, but when it comes to putting it together again I always get a little confused, he said.

I've always had it oiled and cleaned religiously every year, as regular as a visit to the dentist, Mr. Simkins said. My friends all set their own watches by that watch instead of waiting for the noon whissle. I was proud of that watch, mighty proud, he said, and pop said, Did you make it yourself?

Well hardly but it cost me plenty 20 years ago, plenty, Mr. Simkins said and pop said By gollies that's tuff luck, old chap. I guess there's even more trouble in the world than the newspapers give us any idea of.

Wich maybe there is.

CORN ON COB

Among several other things that make us glad we're living is corn on the cob.

A Frenchman may be a fine judge of red wine and baked snails, but he gets no corn on the cob. A Britisher may carve himself a fine joint of beef, but he gets no corn on the cob. A German may delight in a cutlet and red cabbage, but he gets no corn on the cob.

Think of all those Russians, Rumanians, Turks, Laplanders and Patagonians going without corn on the cob—and at this season of the year, too! It's enough to break your heart.

And none of your silly silver cob-stickers to eat it with, either. We'll take ours right in the fingers as nature obviously intended, and gnaw it off the cob just like a busy squirrel. Please pass the butter!—Kitchener Record.

CANADA'S CAPITAL

"City of sawdust and Civil Service," that is how a visiting Englishman described Ottawa as it seemed to him something like forty years ago. For his own information and the widening of his view-point it is a pity he cannot revisit the place which he summed up so mistakenly. For Ottawa has become a mecca to strangers because of the charm of its site, the beauty of its buildings, and the good taste that goes to the planning of what must ultimately become one of the most attractive cities on this continent.

Nature has been lavish with what once was Bytown. And man is making the most of that generosity. Fortunately Ottawa's growth has not been of the mushroom variety, and no boom has helped to build it. Slowly it is expanding and doing it gracefully and well. From the city—resting so happily beneath the shadow of its Peace Tower—stretch invitations that are a command. Broad tree-shaded roads leading to mountain and lake where, pleasantly removed from the centre of things, life retains its rural air. And if vacation days mean absence, for a time, of many from accustomed places, this objective of the tourist-minded is always well filled. Pedestrians there are in plenty, while cars licensed from every state to the south, and all provinces, east or west, find parking places where they can.

To strangers, Ottawa is an historic spot deserving study because of its associations and its ever growing beauty. But to Canadians it should mean much more than a city of charm and dignity. To them it should become a shrine, and held worthy of its high place as Capital of the great country to which they are proud to belong.—Ottawa Journal.

FADING JULY

The poets have been sadly neglectful of July. Hardly one of them has failed to find inspiration in the rebirth of nature in spring, in the glory of the richness of the harvest of fall, in the deep meaning and promise to be found in the somnolence of winter and in the beauty of the full-blown rose in summer. Every season has had its due share of praise and every month its champions But July deserves more than it has had of the eloquence and imagery of the poets.

A day in June is innocent and leafy and rare, May is a merry month and full of flowers, April laughs its girlish laughter, January is first and sees into two years, October has its bright blue weather, December is mirthful, and so on and so on, but what of July? Too little does one find in the lines of favorite poets. We do recall that Winthrop Praed celebrated his memories of childhood "in the warmth of its July", but his was almost a lone voice.

It is lovely to be knee-deep in June, but it is lovelier to be shoulder deep in July. It is the month of the ripening of many fruits and grains, of the coursing of the life-blood of nature in preparation for the great harvest, of the vision of deepest color of flowers at their summer peak; it is the first of the two traditional months in summer.—Buffalo Courier Express.

EMPLOYEES' PURCHASE

The employees of a foundry company in a small Illinois city have put up $175,000 working capital to keep the company from moving out.

And the company has agreed on its part to stay in business in the city for at least ten years and not to make any wage reductions during that period. The money will be used to promote new business.

The willingness of these 300 employees to advance approximately $583 apiece in order to keep the business going in their city, and thus protect their own jobs, shows that they understood what it means to have an industry move away and leave its workers jobless and wageless.

When, as a result of lack of cooperation by its employees or of other factors, an industry is forced to go out of business or to move elsewhere, those who suffer first and worst are the wage-earners.

They cannot pack up and follow it.

They are left high and dry.

And the loss of their wages, a serious blow to them, also is felt throughout the community in reduced buying power.

The country and its people would be more prosperous and contented if the same enlightened self-interest, which these foundry employees in Illinois showed, were prevalent everywhere.—Detroit Free Press.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York, Aug. 11.—(AP)—The stock market nibbled at a rally today and leaders recovered as much as a point or so before meeting with selling interference.

Dealings slackened appreciably after a fairly active start and top prices were chipped down or cancelled near the fourth hour.

Best share performers—some eventually slipped—included Chrysler, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, U. S. Gypsum, Eastman Kodak, Southern Pacific, United Aircraft, Anaconda, American Telephone and Western Union.

Backward were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Kennecott, Douglas Aircraft, Texas Corp. and U.S. Rubber.

C.P.R. and Distillers slipped a bit in the Canadian group while McIntyre added a major fraction. Dominion 4s were neglected.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET

Toronto, Aug. 11 (CP)—Partial recovery of Thursday's losses were boarded in the early session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today and by noon the mining indices were up .40 to .45 while the industrials added .20 and the Western oils stood practically unchanged. The market turned decidedly slow in the second hour and only 127,000 shares turned over in the first three hours. Some of the early gains were dropped in the early afternoon period.

A drop in the New York export copper price was slightly discouraging for the Base Metal group. Noranda, Nickel, Hudson Bay and Smelters held only part of their morning gains but Waite-Amulet retained its advance of 25 cents. In the gold group prices were up for Buffalo-Ankerite, Macassa, Northern Empire and a few others.

Mild strength in the industrial groups appeared chiefly in the senior oils, steels and miscellaneous issues. Eastern Steel Products traded some heavy blocks at 13 1-2, unchanged. In the western oil group prices were a little firmer for Home, Okalta and Calgary-Edmonton.

Slight Advance in Price of Butter

Toronto, Aug. 11.—Butter prices advanced fractionally on the Toronto open produce market yesterday while top-grade eggs continued to weaken, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Cheese was steady in quiet trading.

Receipts of butter were light. The market developed a firmer undertone in the morning, when offerings of first-grade butter were easily cleaned up at 21 1-2c. The price then moved upward to 21 3-4c in the afternoon, and the market became steady, if not very active, at this level. Western butter sold at 22c lb.

Egg receipts were far in excess of consumer demand, and trading remained light. There were no price changes in the ungraded section, but A-large eggs in the graded group eased to a range of 25c to 26c and A-medium eggs to a range of 24c to 25c. Retailers' prices were steady.

Little business was done in cheese. New, large paraffined current make stayed unchanged in price at 11 1-2c lb., in very dull trading.

Quebec Butter Shades Up

Monteal, Aug 11.—Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter firmed slightly on open produce markets here yesterday, while cheese eased narrowly, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Potatoes ruled unchanged and eggs were steady with demand improving a bit.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2 to 3-4 cents a pound, and solids for 22-22 1-4. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21 1-2. Receipts— 21 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11 1-4. Quebec white and colored were both quoted at 10 1-2. Receipts: 2,552 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27-27 1-2 cents a dozen for A-large, 25-25 1-2 for A-medium, 19-20 for B-large, 14 1-2 to 15 for C. Receipts 2,097 cases, including 587 export.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE IS GIVEN GIRL

She is Also Deprived of Privilege of Driving Car for Three Years

A girl of 15 years of age residing in this city, was given a three years suspended sentence when she appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in special police court held at the Court House today where she appeared on three charges of infractions of the Highway Traffic Act.

The cases were a sequel to a motor accident, which happened in Matthews' barn dance, near Cannifton, on June 27th last when a motor car, driven by the girl, crashed into the dance hall. Eleven persons are said to have sustained injuries. The girl was charged with reckless driving, driving without a permit and being a minor under age in charge of a motor car contrary to the Highway Traffic Act.

Besides being given a three year suspended sentence, the girl was deprived of the privilege of driving a motor car for a period of three years, she must be at home in her parents' abode every night before 10.00 p.m. and also was instructed to report periodically to T. D. Ruston, C.A.S. inspector.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., conducted the prosecution and urged a severe penalty, while Robt. Pringle, counsel for the accused girl, pointed out it was the first time his client had ever been in trouble.

PLANE TAKES OFF

Sydney, N.S., Aug. 11—(CP)—Officials at Cape Breton airport near here said two New York fliers, Alex Loeb and Dick Decker, took off from there this morning for Point Michaud Beach, about 50 miles away. A truckload of 50 gallons of gasoline was sent to the beach.

The pair later hopped off from the south Cape Breton Island beach announcing their destination as Eire.

William MacMillan, caretaker at the airport, said the fliers would not say "definitely" they were contemplating a transatlantic flight.

An official said their plane was 'old' but in fairly good condition. He estimated the load of gasoline would keep them in the air for 35 hours.

Previously Planned Flight

New York, Aug. 11—(CP)—Alex Loeb and Dick Decker, New York aviators who took off from St. Peter's, N.S., today on a trans-Atlantic flight to Eire, recently planned a non-stop flight from New York to Palestine.

Loeb was grounded at Floyd Bennett Field July 3 by air officials who said tire blow-outs had prevented him and Decker from attempting an unauthorized flight to the Holy Land. Loeb said he had been merely "load testings" his plane.

Picton Man Swims 1½ Miles After Boat Upsets in Bay

Sudden Squall Capsizes Craft—Boat Drifts Until Bob Jamieson Negotiates Difficult Swim for Help

Picton, Ont., (Special)—Hurled into the water when their sailing dinghy capsized before a sudden gust of wind, Bob Jamieson of this town and George Cowan, New York, spent several anxious hours clinging to their upturned craft in the Bay of Quinte near here, yesterday.

Despairing of help after the dinghy had drifted considerable distance down the bay, Jamieson, a strong swimmer, struck out for the shore one and one-half miles away to summon help, leaving the non-swimming Cowan clinging to the boat.

Meanwhile their plight had been noticed by Mrs. G. H. Bolton, resident of the High-Shore who immediately telephoned Prince Edward Yacht Club officials.

Ralph Warren and Edward Allen sped to the rescue in a speedboat and brought the exhausted Cowan ashore. Jamieson by this time had reached land and had telephoned for help. Later Fred Vandusen arrived in his cruiser and took the two young men to the harbor along with the overturned boat.

"We were heading for Glen Island," Jamieson said later. "As we neared the cliffs of the High Shore, a sudden gust of wind upset the boat dumping us into the bay. Cowan is unable to swim but he managed to reach the boat. We thought it might drift ashore but the wind carried it farther out into open water."

PRIMA FACIE CASE IS FOUND

Calgary Magistrate Refuses to Reduce Charge Against Mrs. Allen and Daughter

Calgary, Aug. 11—(CP)—Magistrate D. Cameron Sinclair declared Thursday a "prima facie case" has been established against Mrs. Ethel Allen and her daughter, Betty Allen, charged with assault occasioning actual bodily harm. The charge was laid after roofing paint and feathers were poured over Miss Alice Knowles, Calgary nurse, on July 18.

"I feel that the evidence for the prosecution constitutes a 'prima facie case against the two defendants," said Magistrate Sinclair. His statement followed an hour-long argument from J. McKinley Cameron, K.C., defence counsel.

Remand is Granted

Mr. Cameron then requested — and was granted—a remand until next Wednesday, Aug. 16. During the interim, the defence counsel will consult medical experts as to what effect certain statements made to Mrs. Allen, and the accompanying circumstances, may have had on the mind of the accused at the time the alleged offence was committed.

The defence counsel pointed out that evidence submitted by Dr. I. H. Brodie regarding Miss Knowles' condition when he attended her following the alleged assault indicated the nurse had sustained no burns, skin eruption or serious discomfort to her eyes. He asked that the charge against the Allens be reduced to one of common assault or any lesser charge.

He also contended there was no evidence of noxious elements in the liquid poured over Miss Knowles.

"I think it is a matter where there must be some substantial injury....otherwise it is a common assault." maintained Mr. Cameron.

Magistrate Sinclair, however, refused to reduce the charge against Mrs. Allen and her daughter.

Monkey Gland Shots Given Actor Deposition States

Los Angeles Aug. 11 (AP)—Victor McLaglen portrayer of virile screen roles has been taking monkey gland "shots" for a long time.

The information was contained in a deposition disclosed yesterday by S. S. Hahn, Attorney for Dr. S. G. Sonneland.

The physician is suing McLaglen for $2,789 for medical services to the actor and to members of his "Light Horse Brigade," a semi-sports riding group, known as McLaglen's "Private Army."

Dr. Sonneland asserted McLaglen needed the "shots" to build up his strength and they had been administered since 1935.

In the deposition, however, McLaglen declared he took them mainly because the doctor was a good friend and he wanted to see him make some money.

2 MEN ATTACKED, CONDITION SERIOUS

Toronto, Aug. 11—(CP)— Two victims of mysterious, apparently unconnected attacks lay in hospital today, both in serious condition and both reluctant to talk to police of the assaults. One admitted he knew his attacker but remained close-lipped as to his identity.

"I know who he is, but I'm no squealer," Ralph Barber, 42, spoke defiantly from his hospital bed after he had been taken from his west-end home with serious knife wounds on his scalp and forehead. "I'm not going to say anything. It's all right, all right."

William Young, 32-year-old cook, lay in the same hospital, his left ear torn off, his nose dislocated and with injuries to his right eye which may leave it permanently impaired. He told police he had been attacked by three men as he sat in a west-end park but divulged little other information.

One Held as Witness

Police held as material witness to the assault upon Barber a man whose name they refused to divulge. They said the man had told them he saw Barber fighting with a "big man" in the kitchen of the Barber home and that the victim kept crying, 'don't do that, Harry, don't," as he sought to evade swings of a big kitchen knife.

Blood pouring from his face from seven deep scalp wounds and two gashes over the eyes, Barber collapsed as the attacker ran from the room. He was in a semi-conscious condition when taken to hospital where all he said of his assailant was: "I'll tell you his first name, it's Harry."

Just as mysterious was the attack upon Young. Passersby found him lying in High Park, his face covered with blood. Young was covered with cinders and his face appeared as if he had been dumped and rolled in the cinders. No cinders are in the section of the park where he was found.

Young told police only that he had been assaulted while sitting on a park bench and that he had $5 before the assault and did not have it later.

FIRST BRITISHER

In Royal Irish Dragoon Guards

He was a member of the 1st troop of the 4th (Royal Irish) Dragoon Guards, having enlisted in July, 1912. Bandsman Thomas, who on Aug. 22, 1914, fired the first British shot was with the troop and its sergeant was William (Pat) Hartnett, now resident of Windsor, Ont. Thomas died in England this year.

Trooper McLeod almost started the British fireworks. His unit left for France Aug. 15 and three days later the Dragoons started across Belgium to try and contact the enemy. But they didn't brush with the Germans until Aug. 22, on the Mons-Charleroi road.

On the evening of Aug. 21, McLeod recalls, the 1st troop was beyond Mons. Interpreters were sent out to learn something of German movements from Belgium villagers. "They're all around" reported the Belgians and the troopers were ordered into action.

Cavalry Silhouetted

"We galloped for miles but there was no sign of the enemy," said McLeod. "We dismounted and sentry duty was ordered. I was on the second watch and it was about 1 a.m. when I heard muffled hoofbeats. We were the most advanced outpost in that area and as it was under martial law with no civilians supposed to be wandering abroad we had instructions to shoot on sight.

"In a few minutes, I saw cavalry silhouetted against the sky. I dropped to one knee, my rifle ready, and as they came along the road I heard them talking and joking. It was in a foreign language, but from what I could see of them I thought they were French Cuirassiers. So I held my fire, and as I was alone at the time I couldn't send word back to the main body of men.

"If I had fired the first shot of the war at that time I probably would have been the first casualty as well."

Germans Drop Lances

At dawn, the troop moved on to the Mons-Charleroi road. Dust was noticed in the distance and the order was given for action. Troopers raced through a village and began to overtake the enemy cavalry. Dismounted Germans had been posted along the road and the British lost a few horses. Then the main body of Germans faced about for combat.

"But to our surprise, they dropped their lances and raised their arms," McLeod continued. "There were 30 or more of them and we were outnumbered. The surrender came so quickly that we thought this war would be easy."

As the 1st troop was returning with its prisoners, two other troops, including that commanded by Sergt. Hartnett, went into dismounted action in the same area. And it was in this skirmishing that Bandsman Thomas fired the shot that really opened the war for Great Britain.

FOUR CHINESE

Japanese authorities in Tientsin accuse the four of complicity in the killing of a Chinese customs official of the Japanese-dominated North China regime. British refusal to turn them over after they were seized in the British concession at Tientsin brought on the Japanese army blockade of the British and French concessions which has been in force since June 14.

China to be Notified

Sir Robert Craigie, Ambassador to Japan, has been instructed to convey London's decision to the Tokyo government. The Ambassador to China, Sir Archibald Kerr, also has been instructed to inform the Chungking government of the decision.

Tokyo, Aug. 11—(AP)—Although the United States and France have demonstrated an interest in the future of the Chinese central government's currency, a foreign office spokesman said today, Japan does not consider that evidence of a united American-French-British front.

War Unlikely; Britain Strong, Says Beaverbrook

Quebec, Aug. 11—(CP)— Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born British newspaper publisher, told newspapermen here today as he arrived in the liner Empress of Britain that he does not "believe there will be war in Europe."

"I would not be out here if I did believe war was imminent," he said. "Great Britain, however, now is strong enough to face war—her strength is tremendous.

"The people are psychologically prepared for war. If war is inevitable, they are prepared for it."

Lord Beaverbrook, who said he was in Canada for "a holiday" praised Britain's air arm and said its personnel was "very well trained."

"They're spending $10,000,000 a week on the air branch," he said.

The publisher said he expected to remain in Quebec City for several days and that he would then fly to Bathurst, N.B., for a visit to an old friend, Sir James Dunn, head of Algoma Steel.

Hitler Welcomes Ciano, Ribbentrop To Mountain Home

At Foreign Ministers' Meeting at Salzburg Revision of Treaties of St. Germain and Trianon Discussed

BERLIN SURPRISED

Robert Ley, German Labor Leader, Says World Would Have Peace If It Heeded Hitler

Berchtesgaden, Germany, Aug. 12—(AP—Chancellor Hitler and the Foreign Ministers of Germany and Italy held a lengthy conference on Rome-Berlin axis policy today in the Fuehrer's mountain chalet near here.

Hitler gave Count Ciano, the Italian Minister, a hearty welcome when he arrived by motor car from Salzburg.

There was a roll of drums from the Fuehrer's black-uniformed body guard as Ciano's car rolled up in front of the Berghof. Stepping out on the terrace the Fuehrer, accompanied by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, greeted his guest and personally conducted him into the house.

Salzburg, Germany, Aug. 12—(AP)—Foreign Minister Count Ciano of Italy drove today to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's mountain retreat for an important conference after a slight delay in leaving the scene of preliminary talks with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany.

It was believed that the Count delayed his start on the 35-minute drive to Berchtesgaden for a last-minute telephone conversation with Premier Mussolini. Von Ribbentrop went to Berchtesgaden direct from his summer residence at Castle Puschl.

German and Italian spokesmen remained tight-lipped on the subjects of the Ciano-Von Ribbentrop talks, which opened yesterday. The silence apparently was out of reference to today's meeting with Hitler when, it was taken for granted, all important decisions would be made.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Forecasting by the clouds! "Men judge by the complexion of the sky, the state and inclination of the day," says William Shakespeare. Many believe that a meteorologist can look at the sky and read a forecast of coming weather, or ought to. There is an immense amount of weather lore passed down to us in which rules are given for foretelling the weather. Only a few of those rules are trustworthy. The scientific forecaster formulates his forecasts by considering his weather map in connection with previous ones and using all other available data which include the clouds, their amount, kind and direction, at stations all over the country. But he seldom peeks out of the window.

FORGET HOLIDAYS AS STAFF TALKS OPEN IN MOSCOW

There is No Time to Lose Says Defence Commissar Voroshiloff

SOVIET'S DEFENCES

Exchange of Views on Possible Defence Coordination of Three Defence Forces

Moscow, Aug. 12—(CP Hafas) — Spurred by increasing world unrest, British and French military missions today began staff talks with Russian army, navy and air chiefs in an effort to pave the way for the Soviet Union's entry into the anti-aggression front.

The visiting military experts, who arrived yesterday, abandoned the usual practice of foreigners of looking leisurely around Moscow before getting down to business, while the Soviet representatives ignored the national custom of setting Saturday aside as a day of rest. Defence Commissar Klementi Voroshiloff said there was no time to lose and that holidays had to be forgotten.

The talks are designed to familiarize the experts of the western nations with the Soviet's specific defence problems and permit an exchange of views on possible coordination of the three defence forces in the event of aggression. It was hoped that the conference would clarify the diplomatic issues still blocking a mutual aid past, which has been in negotiation for many months.

RING OF FIRE ABOUT VILLAGE

Spirit Lake, Idaho, in Midst of Million Dollar Forest Blaze

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 11—(AP)—Spirit Lake, Idaho, a mill village of 900 persons, was half-encircled today by a $1,000,000 forest fire that roared up to the town's edge last night, only to be turned aside by the fickle wind that had been its ally.

Fifteen hundred fire fighters formed a protective cordon around the town.

The fire, which smouldered for several days after roaring down from Mt. Spokane to blacken 70,000 acres 45 miles north of Spokane, was whipped to new life yesterday.

It blazed down a mountainside toward Spirit Lake, destroying 40,000,000,000 feet of stacked lumber in the Panhandle Lumber Company yards, and burning a partially abandoned Milwaukee Railroad Company warehouse. Losses were estimated at more than $1,000,000.

London, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP) — Harry Staffelle, London taxicab driver, received the biggest tip of his career yesterday, but couldn't keep it.

But Staffelle had to hand the tip over to the police. The bandit took $1600 from the bank.

London Seems Group Of Small Villages In Blackout Tests

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 12—(CP Cable) — High officials today weighed the results of three days of mimic sky warfare over Great Britain and concluded that the defenders could whip invading air raiders.

The Air Ministry said the manoeuvres, in which 1,300 planes figured, showed that "fighter aircraft is more than a match for a raiding bomber if it succeeds in engaging it."

The statement added that a "high proportion" of the 700 raids that were launched by the attacking "Eastland" planes were intercepted by the "Westland" defenders.

The manoeuvres provided the sternest test of Great Britain's readiness to deal with an attack from the skies since the crisis period began.

London Like Cluster of Villages

Authorities expressed themselves as pleased with the blackout over half of England. The Air Ministry said that London without lights resembled a cluster of small villages instead of the world's largest city.

Opinions differed sharply, however, over the effectiveness of the blackout. Pilots of some raiding planes said they were able to find their bearings by tell-tale gleams of railway lines, and by cars illuminating highways coverging on London. Others confessed they couldn't find the landmarks.

September Blackouts

Further blackouts on a smaller scale will be held in September. Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal who is in charge of air raid precautions plans to start them earlier than midnight when more people are about. The danger of even a single overlooked light was shown by the blackout and dousing of lights may be made compulsory in the future.

The spectacular exercises by the Royal Air Force are ended and the youthful pilots are catching up on lost sleep. But the intensive air defence training continues.

In other sectors, too, Britain's preparedness drive is being continued with undiminished vigor. At sea the gigantic home fleet and the newly-commissioned reserve fleet are starting manoeuvres. On land, militiamen are being put through their paces in camps and September will see the biggest peacetime war games in Britain's history.

Interest in Holidays

Meantime the average Englishman is holidaying, more interested for the moment in cricket scores and whether the sun is going to be warm enough for bathing than in Europe's latest crisis and the steps Britain is taking to meet it.

Thirteen fliers were killed in place crashes during the manoeuvres.

The Air Ministry said that during the greater part of the exercises bomber and fighter aircraft had flown in weather which 'tested to the utmost their mechanical and structural reliability and the skill and endurance of the crews."

BOMBER CRASH PROBE IS OPENED

Nine Men Die as Bombing Plane Crashes After Leaving Field

Langley Field, Va., Aug. 12—(AP)—A three-man board of inquiry probed today into the fire-seared wreckage of a United States bombing plane that crashed during a take-off killing two commissioned officers and seven enlisted men.

The plane developed trouble shortly after it left the field about 2:30 p.m. EDT yesterday and plunged to the ground from a low altitude.

Witnesses said the big plane had just cleared the field when one of the two motors sounded as if it were "cutting-out." The pilot, Second Lieutenant Homer Mackay, apparently in an effort to bring the ship down saftly, put it into a steep glide toward the waters of Back River, a short distance away.

The plane however, went into a dive and crashed, bursting into flames. Witnesses said there was an explosion as the plane hit the ground followed by a series of six lesser explosions.

Commissioners Take Care and Custody Of Giant Seal

London, Aug. 12—(CP)— While Lord Maugham, the Lord Chancellor, and his wife are in Canada on a visit of several weeks, commissioners have been appointed for the 'care and custody of the great seal of the realm.'

Lord Maugham, a brother of novelist Somerset Maugham, has several engagements to fulfil in Canada. He landed this week in Quebec.

The great seal is used only for sealing documents of major importance such as treaties or writs for summoning parliament. Wafer great seals made of embossed paper or wax are used on documents of lesser significance.

The commissioners are the Earl of Onslow, chairman of committee of the House of Lords, Sir Wilfrid Greene, Master of the Rolls, Sir Frank Boyd Merriman, President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, Mr. Justice Cassels and Mrs. Justice Hallett.

Young Democrats Urge Third Term

Pittsburgh, Aug. 12 (AP) — The Young Democratic clubs of America today turned to election of officers and resolutions after an uproarious meeting marked by ovations for speakers advocating a third term for President Roosevelt or nomination of some one who will carry forward his program.

The gathering also staged a ten-minute demonstration last night after a speech by Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, outlining a future course for "Modern Liberalism."

CONTEMPT CASE IS ADJOURNED

Legislature Will Consider Situation in Doukhobor Sections

Vancouver, Aug. 12—(CP)—Pending consideration by the British Columbia Legislature of the situation in Doukhobor-settled sections of the West Kootenay district, Mr. Justice Denis Murphy yesterday adjourned until Nov. 1 hearing of the Sun Life Assurance Company's application for committal for contempt of court of Sheriff M. E. Harper, Nelson, B.C.

The Justice ordered the adjournment in Supreme Court Chambers here after Attorney-General Gordon S. Wismer, opposing the application on Harper's behalf, said he would submit the matter for consideration at the approaching fall session of the legislature, for which no exact date has been set.

'Unparalleled Situation'

The Sun Life Company sought the committal order on grounds the sheriff had failed to evict Doukhobors from lands around Nelson, Brilliant and Grant Forks, mortgaged to the company for more than $200,000 by the Doukhobor business organization, Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood.

The company granted a foreclosure order early this year.

"There is a situation here unparalleled in history—at any rate in British Columbia," Mr. Justice Murphy said, after H. A. Bourne, counsel for the company, pressed for an order to compel the sheriff to carry out the evictions.

Judge's Comment

"The Attorney-General — the chief law enforcement officer of the crown—says he will carry out the law if this court so orders. But the carrying out of the law may result in a serious situation in the Doukhobor areas.

"The Attorney-General asks that this matter be adjourned until the legislature can take cognizance of the situation."

About 4,000 Doukhobors live on the several thousand acres of land foreclosed by the Sun Life Company.

Plan Cash Prizes To Raise Birthrate Among French

Paris, Aug. 12.— (AP)— The newspaper L'Ordre applauded today the French government's plan to give cash prizes in an effort to increase the birthrate.

But it observed that Maginot line military service for thousands of young husbands who sit deep under ground—away from home—might be a deterrent to realizing the objective.

So the newspaper suggested that Premier Daladier allow young married men without children to do their army service nearer the family hearth and not in tunnels below the Rhine valley.

Montreal Mayor Reveals Hope That Federal Gov't. Will Assume Provincial and Municipal Debts

'SOMETHING TO HAPPEN'

Royal Commission Report to be Made Public in October of This Year

By D. E. BURRIT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Aug. 12—(CP)— On the eve of his 50th birthday, Mayor Camillien Houde let down what he calls a strict rule against interviews long enough today to predict a pleasant surprise lay in store for financially-harassed provinces and municipalities of Canada.

Consenting to be quoted only after prolonged urging by reporters, the Mayor expressed the hope and expectation that publication of the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations may reveal a recommendation that the Dominion Government assume all Provincial and municipal debts.

"Not only do I hope and expect the report will recommend that the Dominion government pay the debts of municipalities of Canada, and the different debts of the provinces, on conditions acceptable to the different governments," said the Mayor, "but I feel that if the report fails to be as drastic in solving certain municipal problems, the existence and the labor of the commissioners wont have meant much to the people of Canada."

Civil Service Fund Not Affected By Changes

Ottawa, Aug. 12 (CP)—Present contributors to the Civil Service Superannuation Fund will not be affected by changes indicated in the Government's plan issued yesterday by Acting Finance Minister Ilsey, it was said here today.

The increase in contribution will apply only to new contributors, those "temporaries" who are to be blanketed in as "permanents" and to all others who may enter the service, within the provisions of the Superannuation Act, in the future.

The "temporaries" will be little affected since the increase will be imposed only on those receiving in excess of $1,200 a year. The majority of the "temporaries" are paid less than that.

Beyond $1,200 a year and up to $1,500 the rate will be 5 1-2 per cent of the salary. Above $1,500 the new rate will be 6 per cent. The present general rate is 5 per cent of the salary.

SQUALUS RAISED AFTER 3 MONTHS

Three Pontoons Break Surface of Water With Wild Flurry of Foam

Portsmouth, N.H., Aug. 12 (AP)—Apparently climaxing successfully the most difficult phase of a salvage operation, the United States Navy today lifted the flooded submarine Squalus from the ocean floor that has gripped her almost continuously since May 23.

The three pontoons attached to the tremendously heavy water-filled stern of the craft broke the surface amid a wild flurry of foam, indicating the after compartment had been lifted 80 feet from the bottom.

Aurora Borealis of Unusual Type Most Brilliant Display in Years

New York, Aug. 12—(AP)—Northern lights of unusual brilliance flickered in rainbow banners across the sky last night, treating thousands of observers in Canada and the United States to a rare color display.

The lights were visual manifestations of earth currents which raised hob with the communications systems and sent a recurrent splutter over telephone and radio loops.

Director William Burton, Jr. of the Hayden Planetarium said the aurora borealis resulted from a periodic concentration of sunspots, causing the sun to project to the earth an unusual amount of electric energy.

The lights, last observed here April 24, were said by amateur astronomers to be the most brilliant in years.

In addition to the usual banners of yellow, green and red, a broad beam of light crossed the central sky from east to west. Superintendent George Dimitroff of the Harvard Observatory described the display as "a type not often seen."

Report States 3 Youths Plotted Against Officials

Confirmation is Lacking That 2 Persons Planning Attack on British Ambassador Craigie Had Been Arrested

EXTREMISTS WATCHED

Japanese Say Plot Against Advisers of Throne Was One of Hot-Headed Youths Stirred Up by Propaganda

Tokyo, Aug. 12—(CP-Havas) — Fragmentary reports in Japanese political circles today indicated discovery of plots to assassinate British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie and officials of the Japanese court.

Well-informed Japanese said the plot against advisers of the throne was not a serious one, but rather an adventure of hot-headed youths stirred up by extremist propaganda.

For some time Japanese police have been watching extreme Nationalists. Reports said that on July 15 three youths arrested at a Tokyo railroad station for carrying arms confessed they intended to take part in an anti-British demonstration and then attack persons close to the throne.

Most prominent among these, it was said, were Marquis Tsuneo Matsudaira, Minister of the Imperial Household and former Ambassador to Great Britain; Kurahei Yuasa, keeper of the Privy Seal, and Count Nobuaki Makino.

No Confirmation of Arrest

No confirmatoin could be obtained of rumors that two persons planning an attack against the British Ambassador had been arrested following an anti-British demonstration.

PREMIER STATES MANION FAILS TO GRASP POINT

Replies to Statement Government Used Governor-General's Warrants

Ottawa, Aug. 12—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King issued a statement last night in reply to Conservative Leader Manion's declaration yesterday that the Dominion Government had used Governor-General's warrants to raise money on several occasions for relief purposes.

Dr. Manion referred to remarks the Prime Minister made on Thursday to Premier Duplessis of Quebec and a number of Quebec Mayors and cabinet ministers who had suggested funds for relief in Quebec be raised by Governor-Generals warrants. Mr. Mackenzie King stated such warrants should be used only in event of unforeseen contingencies.

The Prime Minister's statement follows:

I have just read in the evening paper Dr. Manion's statement regarding the observations which I made yesterday at the conference with the delegation from the government and municipalities of the Province of Quebec on the use of Governor General's warrants.

Says Point Not Grasped

It would appear from Mr. Manion's statement that he has entire the Province of Quebec on the use statement. Put briefly it was this.

REFUGEE SHIPS TOLD TO LEAVE

Two Tramp Steamships With Jewish Refugees Must Leave Turkish Port

Smyrna, Turkey, Aug. 12 (AP)—Two tramp steamships loaded with Jewish refugees from German-ruled Bohemia and Moravia anchored today at Fenike, small port on the southern coast of Anatolia, but Turkish authorities prevented the passengers from landing and ordered their immediate departure.

One of the craft grounded and those aboard were taken off, but when she re-floated the passengers were forced back aboard.

The steamship Parita, carrying 500 Jews who rioted yesterday when the Turkish authorities ordered the captain to sail, was still at Smyrna today with her passengers, refugees from Czecho-Slovakia, again quiet.

Three other boats loaded with refugees were reported to be sailing in the eastern Mediterranan, unable to land at any port.

Dares Goebbels To Publish 'News Letters' To Germans

London, Aug. 12—(CP) — Commander Stephen King-Hall, in a full page advertisement in the Daily Telegraph (Conservative) printed the text of a critical letter from the German Propaganda Minister, Joseph Goebbels, today and challenged him to give similar treatment to one of King-Hall's "news letters" to Germans.

Letters King-Hall has been mailing to Germans, as a "private individual," have drawn charges from the German government that they were officially inspired. The British government has disclaimed such responsibility.

In the advertisement, King-Hall asserted he was reproducing Goebbels' "reply to British propaganda" at his own expense in answer to Nazi complaints that the British press had not published it.

At the Propaganda Ministry in Berlin it was indicated officials were in no mood "to dignify" King-Hall by accepting his challenge and publishing one of his letters in full.

Engaged in cutting pulpwood in the bush near L'Amable, Thomas Chamberlain of L'Amable Lake received a severe gash on the side of his face and neck this week. The axe he had been using caught on a limb above his head and was deflected. The inured man was attended by Dr. Lumb of Bancroft.

CAMPBELLFORD BOARD TO MEET AT SEVEN

Notice was served at a special meeting of those connected with the dairy industry in the warehouse of James Cook last evening that the Campbellford Cheese Board would in future meet on Thursday evenings regularly at the hour of 7 o'clock. This was decided by vote of the board on Thursday evening.

In the past it has been the custom of the board to meet at 11 o'clock for the purpose of cheese boarding, but in view of the statement of the secretary of the Montreal Trades and Provisions Association that it would b impossible to have buyers attend meetings so late in the evening, it was decided to advance the hour of trading.

CROP SURVEY SHOWS IMPROVEMENT IN AREA

Crops of oats and barley will be about 25 per cent less than a year ago in Lennox-Addington counties according to the report of the agricultural representative there. Crop harvesting is well along, and yields have been reported smaller.

Reports from the district of Prince Edward County, according to the crop bulletin have been conflicting as to yield and quality. Some sections have reported a fair harvest; in others the yield has been small. Rains during the past week or so have helped corn and tomatoes and berries, but pastures and second crop grains are still showing the effects of the earlier dryness. In some tomato fields the tomato worm has done considerable damage, and heavy spraying has been resorted to.

Hastings County crop reports indicate that milk flow is returning to normal and pastures are rapidly greening out after the heavy dryness. Fall grains have been practically all cut and late oats are being harvested.

'Greenies' Play Leapfrog As Women Shriek And Run

Pedestrians stepped high and warily and many of the more timid fled precipitately with little feminine shrieks on lower Front street last evening when the water-soddened bottom of a paper bag clutched by a small boy suddenly gave way liberating an even two dozen active green frogs which promptly sought shelter in nooks and crannies of the buildings. The lively frogs hopped impartially with long leaping jumps between the feet of passersby who indulged in leaps of almost as startled nature in an effort to avoid the batrachians.

About to enter a store in an apparent effort to dispose of the catch by sale, the small boy retrieved three or four of the hoppers as they were about to disappear under a convenient show case. Other small boys lured by the excitement of the chase loaned their effort toward recapture, and after diligent search, all but a few of the frogs were again rounded up.

CHEMICAL UPSET IN BODY STUDIED

Treatments Found for Headaches Due to Over-Indulgence and Other Causes

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH
(Associated Press Science Writer)

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—Three physicians of the Mayor Clinic at Rochester, Minn., reported today they had discovered a method of treating certain severe headaches which are due to extensive alcoholic indulgence and other upsets in the body's chemistry.

The headaches in question occur when persons developed a condition in which the chemical content of the blood is thrown out of balance, Dr. B. T. Horton, Dr. A. R. MacLean and Dr. W. Mck. Crain explained.

One of the natural chemicals in the blood is known as histamine, and apparently either too much or too little of it will cause the violent pains. This is due, the physicians said in a report in the journal, "Modern Medicine," to the fact that the blood vessels in the head expand.

Causes of Unbalance

The causes of this unbalance and the resulting headaches have not been determined exactly, except that alcoholism is known to be one factor, it was reported.

Histamine headaches are different and often more severe than migraine or any other kind.

"The pain is so severe that many patients contemplate suicide," the physicians said. "It is limited to one side of the head, and is of a constant excruciating, burning, boring type, involving the eyes, the temple, the neck, and often the face."

The headaches develop and disappear very quickly, they added, sometimes within a few minutes, but they may last as long as several hours. They usually occur with clock-like regularity at a particular hour of the night and, as a result, persons who suffer from them cannot lie down. They are forced to get what sleep they can while sitting up.

The only successful treatment found is to give the sufferer doses of histamine, Dr. Horton and his associates said, in the same way that a hay fever sufferer is given small doses of pollen until he develops an immunity to it. The histamine is given to "desensitize" the sufferer to it, regardless of whether his headaches are caused by too much or too little of the chemical.

With this treatment 65 patients have been given permanent relief from their headaches, 10 have had no benefit, and nine could not be reached afterward for a check-up.

Picton 'Ghost' Opens Doors Knocks and Throws Spikes

"Pale Green Light" Visible in Attic of Residence — Doors Open With Bang—Weird Noises When Investigated by Police Reveal Nothing — Residents and Officials Baffled by Mystery

Picton, Aug. 12—This town has a first class "ghost" story and eight persons are willing to vouch for the fact that it is not all imagination, but that all the facts are accurate.

At the hour of midnight on Thursday, as Mrs. James Ackerman, her nephew, Willet Brough, 20, and her 14-year-old niece, Elda Brough, lay sleeping, a loud knocking according to the story began on the door leading to the attic. This aroused the sleepers and an investigation by the family and by the police failed to reveal any reason for the racket which aroused the families residing on either side of the Ackerman home.

The same occurrence two weeks ago Thursday night is reported by Mrs. Ackerman, but the family did not report it and neighbors did not hear anything. Mrs. Ackerman, who is 86 years of age, resides alone with her niece and nephew. She is very active for one of her years and refuses to get upset by the strange occurrence.

The house is a large frame one and was built by Mrs. Ackerman's husband fifty years ago and she has since resided there.

Not only was there also heard the sound as of pounding on the door, as if by human hands, but the door was knocked open several times and efforts to make it stay shut failed.

Green Circle of Light

Efforts to solve the mystery have so far been unsuccessful. Though a watch was kept last night, the "ghost" did not put in an appearance, and the noise which on Thursday at midnight, was so loud it aroused the neighbors, was not repeated.

"About midnight, I was aroused from sleep by the door leading to the attic rattling as if some one were pounding rapidly on it with their two fists," related Mrs. Ackerman. "As I watched, the door swung open with a bang and a pale green circle of light appeared on the side closest to the short flight of stairs which lead up to the attic floor. As the door shut again, the light disappeared. The noise kept up for more than an hour, but we were not able to find any cause for it."

Willet Brough, who was also aroused by the noise, said that the pounding was very rapid and loud. "The whole door shook and as I was about to open it, the knob slowly turned and the door went open with a crash. I was too scared to move but I did not see anyone on the stairs. There was no draft of any kind to make the door fly open and even if there had been this would not account for the knocking, for which Constable Smith vouches. We were all asleep when the noise began."

Elda Brough said that she first thought the noise was caused by her aunt going downstairs to get a drink of water but she found her in bed. "Two weeks ago to the very night, we heard pounding on the same door and though we searched we could find nothing. It lasted two hours that time," she related.

Search Futile

Constable John Armstrong stated that he had been called to the home by Carman Welbanks, well known athlete, who believed from the noise that Mrs. Ackerman was in trouble. It was quiet when I arrived so I made the family go on the verandah while I went upstairs. I put out the lights and stood by the door ready to grab anyone there might be. Soon the knocking began and I pulled the door open suddenly and flashed my light but there was no one there.

"I then turned on the lights and searched the attic but there are only three trunks there and no one was there. I could see nothing which might have caused the noise. It certainly sounded like human hands pounding on the other side of the door when I was there, and I know it was not made by human hands. I made a search in daylight yesterday but could find no clues to solve the mystery. I do not believe in ghosts but this is very unusual."

After the noise had been continued for a time, a pair of scissors was put out to hold the door shut but the knocking threw these across the floor. The same thing happened when a spike was used, Brough related.

As the noise had occurred on two Thursday nights around the midnight hour, it is planned next Thursday night to lay in wait for the ghost or whatever it may be.

Windows in the attic were closed and there was no clues as to what caused the pounding which shook the door. No marks were left on it.

HEAVY OFFERING OF PRODUCE SEEN ON CITY MARKET

Variable Display Attracts Large Crowd of Shoppers —Prices Generally Firm

The city market was a riot of natural color today when one of the heaviest most variable offerings of produce was displayed by a large crowd of city and district vendors. Farm and garden truck headlined the produce with chicken showing noticeable falling off from the quantity offered last week.

Price tones were generally firm, with little or no change noted from last week's quotations.

Eggs maintained their former high level with "A" selects of good quality selling at twenty-seven and twenty-eight cents the dozen. Mediums were quoted at twenty-four and twenty-five cents with some ungraded stocks offered at twenty-five cents the dozen.

Young weighty broiler chickens were scarce with the small quantity offered ranging in price between seventy-five and ninety-five cents the pair. Spring birds were offered at from seventy-five cents to as high as one dollar each, with a small amount of fowl moving slowly at from fifty cents each.

The outside market was filled to near-capacity with farm and garden produce. Home grown tomatoes, of splendid quality were plentiful and sold at thirty cents the large basket. Bushel-lots were quoted in places at one dollar each. Potatoes were steady with bushels selling at one dollar and peck lots at twenty-five and thirty cents.

CORN PLENTIFUL

Sweet corn, by far the best quality sold as yet, proved popular with Yellow Bantam offered at fifteen and twenty cents the dozen ears. This vegetable was plentiful and did a brisk business during the early hours.

New onions, beets, carrots, and radishes were offered in bunch lots at five cents each and generally at three bunches for ten cents. Good quality new cabbage and cauliflower sold from five cents per head. Cucumbers sold at ten cents the dozen.

Imported peaches and plums formed a bulky part of the fruit offering today with a lot of vendors displaying stocks for sale. Peaches sold at thirty-five and forty cents the basket, with plums and cherries at forty-five and fifty cents the six-quart lot.

Raspberries, scarcer than usual held steady at two boxes for 25c. Canteloupe also imported could be had as low as five cents the melon.

"Yellow Harvester" apples headed this variety of fruit selling at 20c cents the basket with "Red Astrachans" varying in prices from twenty to thirty cents the half peck according to quality. A few "Duchess" were offered at twenty cents the basket.

Huckleberries sold at ten cents the box as did Missouri currants and those of the red and white variety.

Whitefish and lake trout at seventeen and twenty cents the pound respectively headed the fish display.

Playground Notes

Thursday afternoon the East End Senior Boys won the Playground Volleyball Pennant. They won two out of three games and each was played clean and hard right from start to finish, the scores being as follows: 21 to 10; 18 to 21; 21-10.

Both East and West End are preparing their Handicraft work for the Belleville Fair. So everyone get in there and work and show the rest of Belleville the kind of Fair the coming Mr. and Mrs. Belleville will put on in the future.

Pennants are not won by fooling around playing in a game. That's how the West End lost their game Thursday evening. With a superior team the West seemed a sure winner. But they put on too much acting and lost by the score of 12 to 7. Players: West—Burns, Bennett, Austin, Mills, Sword, Anderson, Rose, Hibbard, Rudder. East—Kerr, Clark, McBride, Peets, Correll, Mills, Moore, Griffin, Mills.

Friday afternoon the East Hill Girls won the volleyball penant with superb playing of D. Evans, D. Lazenby and N. Maker making the game a cinch for the East Hill. The score, were 21-12 and 21-5. Players: East—M. Donovan, E. Allison, N. Philbin, N. Maker, D. Lazenby, D. Evans. West—H. Thompson, L. Gibson, R. Thompson, D. Rose, B. Barragar, J. Brockway, R. Morden.

25 WAR VETERANS ARE SWORN IN

Duty Will be to Guard Bridges, Plants, Along Trent River

Twenty-five war veterans from the vicinity of Trenton were sworn in as special constables, for emergency precautions only, before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the conclusion of the Trenton Police Court proceedings yesterday afternoon.

The men were selected by Chief Constable Wm. Bain and Inspector Hammond of the Provincial Police. Their duties will be to guard bridges, Hydro plants along the Trent River and public buildings in any case of emergency, was the only meagre information the authorities would reveal after the men had taken their oath. "For emergency duty only", was the only information given out.

Police Blotter

Considerable property damage resulted to the automobile of Norman Duetts, Ameliasburg, when it ran into the rear of a truck driven by Sidney White of this city, just west of the city limits on Highway No. 2 early last evening.

Provincial Constable Carl Fisher investigated and was told the White-driven truck had slowed down owing to an approaching cyclist. Duetts, following in the rear, failed to observe the retarding of the speed of the truck and collided with the rear of the heavier vehicle. The lighter car was badly damaged about the radiator and front. No injuries were sustained.

Jack Hegan, local delivery boy residing at 16 Harriet street, reported the theft of his bicycle to local police yesterday. The bike had been left parked on Front street from where it was stolen.

Late last night P.C. Evans recovered a bicycle left abandoned at the upper end of Front street. It was not the bike lost by young Hegan, however.

Only one transient has sought sleeping quarters at the police station during the past two nights, sleeping conditions being ideal out-of-doors these fine summer nights.

Says Canadian Missionaries Referred to America as Home

Japanese States Reference to America Caused Misunderstanding That U.S. Citizens Were in Difficulty

Peiping, China, Aug. 12—(CP)—A Japanese army spokesman said tonight that Canadian missionaries, by asserting they came from America, had created the impression that Americans—citizens of the United States—were in difficulties in Kaifeng.

He said this information was furnished by Rev. Francis Clougherty, of Swissvale, Pa., who telegraphed that misunderstandings were responsible for reports that Americans at Kaifeng were in difficulties.

The telegram stated, the spokesman said, that among missionaries driven from Kaifeng by the anti-British campaign were Canadians who usually referred to America as their home, thus creating the misunderstanding that they meant the United States.

When the Canadians departed, announcing they were going home, this probably led to reports of anti-American activities in Kaifeng, the spokesman said.

No Communication With Kaifeng

American authorities, however, were still trying without success to communicate with Clougherty, a representative of American Benedictine Catholics, and other Americans at Kaifeng.

Kaifeng was the headquarters of the Canadian Missionaries in Honan Province and five Canadians were stationed there, Greta M. Clarke of Peterborough, Ont., May Watts of St. Catharines, Ont., Rev. G. A. Andrew of Arichat, N. S. and Mrs. George E. Simmons and Frances E. Howard whose home addresses are not known.

Bill Dairs Secures 30 lb. Grey Trout At Papineau Lake

Bancroft, Aug. 11 (Special)—"Papineau Bill" Davis of Papineau Lake caught a real big fish yesterday. The grey trout weighed 30 pounds 4 oz., girth 25 inches and tail 12 inches across and measured 40¾ inches long. Mr. Davis was over an hour landing the large fish but succeeded in pulling it into shallow water.

Two softball games were played here in Bancroft Wednesday evening when Hubbelville beat Bancroft 11-8 in a twilight game. The Bancroft girls' softball team defeated Coe Hill softball team 12-3 also in a twilight game.

Coe Hill defeated New Carlow nine at Coe Hill, 8-5, which makes the baseball standing, Coe Hill first, New Carlow and Bancroft tied for second place.

Chile is planning to boost taxes to raise funds for reconstruction and economic development.

Cheesemen Gather to Discuss All Phases of Cheese Industry

Director of Dairying, C. E. Lackner, Speaks of Changing Trend — Sees Benefit in Amalgamation — Two Hundred Attend Open Forum in Cook's Warehouse

Cheesemakers, producers, buyers and instructors from throughout the Central Ontario district gathered in the Albion Street warehouse of James Cook last evening to engage in one of the most comprehensive and productive discussions of the dairying industry.

The open forum meeting presided over by Grant Anderson, Campbellford, President of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, had as its guest speaker, C. E. Lackner, Director of Dariying for Ontario, assisted by John Murray, Campbellford, instructor; W. R. McCreary, Belleville, buyer; Jas. Cook, Belleville, buyer; Richard Hart, Belleville, buyer; Patrick Murphy, Enterprise, buyer; Geo. Pollard, Stirling, instructor; Geo. Weaver, president of the Belleville Cheese Board; Charles Fraleigh, Bloomfield, buyer; J. E. Kiser, Lansdowne, and J. L. Irwin, federal dairy grader of the Belleville office.

Professional Title Suggested

Grant Anderson, chairman of the evening, in his welcome to the more than two hundred present extended his congratulations to the excellent work by makers of the district during the present season. To the makers of better grade cheese, makers who were consistent in their production of 93 and 94 score cheese under the new bonus system, Mr. Anderson suggested they be classed in future as professionals, with the privilege of better wages when hired by factories.

To the Ontario Government he extended his congratulations also on the choice of Mr. H. B. Sandwith as chief dairy instructor for the province, citing the new instructor as one of practical nature "who was not afraid to take off his coat and get on the other side of the vat with the maker and turn out a good run of cheese."

Director of Dairying Speaks

Mr. Anderson introduced Mr. C. E. Lackner, director of dairying for the Province as one who has also been a singularly successful choice for the high position of director, an appointee of practical nature who has been of great assistance to the industry since his taking over of the position.

Mr. Lackner in his address reviewed lengthily many features of the industry as it affected the eastern district, which district, it was well known, supplied the greatest percentage of cheese of the Province. Eighty per cent. of all cheese made in Ontario is produced in factories east of Toronto, while 70 per cent of the butter of the Province is made in factories west of Toronto, it was shown.

The director of dairying was well aware of the discouragement felt by cheese producers of the Province this year due to the low prices, and declared that for years past the majority of farmers had been engaged in fighting an agricultural depression which was not over yet. "All through the real depression he has managed to keep going at a loss and is still doing so, which must mean the height of patriotism or exemplify the adage of "the survival of the fittest," he declared.

Milk Prices Not Encouraging

"A price of 70 and 80 cents the hundred pounds on milk is not much of an inducement for farmers to keep and winter feed stock,"' admitted the speaker, "and the present price of cheese has certainly led many to wonder how he can keep going at all."

Unless a reversal of the present trend of dairy production is experienced, it was pointed out by Mr. Lackner, Canadians might well have to turn to the manufacture of butter for export and the manufacturer of smaller quantities of cheese for home consumption, for during the past five years the make of butter has shown a yearly increase, while cheese production has been correspondingly lowered. This has led to lower prices for cheese and a chaotic cheese market experienced this year.

"Paradoxical as it may appear," emphasized Mr. Lackner, "we of Ontario produce the best cheese in the world, yet we eat hardly any of it. We make the poorest butter, and we do eat that.

"And there is another factor which has been disturbing to the cheese market. Year after year we have been making more lower grade cheese. This year so far we have had more slightly rancid cheese than ever before, but no one can apparently tell us why it is. Some of the best factories this year have experienced this situation."

Rancidity To Be Studied

Two young scientists of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, considered, according to Mr. Lackner, two of the best research men in their line on the continent, will tackle this matter of tracing down rancidity through the eastern section of the Province next year, and preparations have already been made by them to spend their time right in the field; they will be concerned only with this single matter of rancidity research, it was stated.

A question at this point by John Hall, Foxboro cheesemaker:

"Is the increase in second grade cheese due to the cheesemaker or the patron?" brought the reply from Mr. Lackner that it was a hard one to answer. "We do know this, that our cheesemakers are better than ever this year, so perhaps the trouble can be traced to some chemical or bacteriological factor."

Whether the producer should depend upon the production of cheese or butter for the greater return was a question which was solely up to himself, stated the speaker. But, in his opinion the return from cheesemaking would be greater than the returns from buttermaking.

Profit Division Seems Wrong

"Anyhow," stated Mr. Lackner, "the whole question resolves into the fact that the agricultural producer does not get his proper share of the consumer's dollar. I have had the same report from a cherry orchard owner. He told me that he was lucky to get four and a half cents a basket on his cherries. What the middleman makes, I don't know. But the system to me appears all wrong. Until the farmer can get proper pay for his services he will naturally suffer the same discouragement.

It had been suggested by Grant Anderson in his opening remarks that the cheesemaker who was consistently producing 93 and 94 bonus scoring cheese be conferred the title of professional cheesemaker, with the privilege of obtaining higher pay for his service when hired by the factory. Mr. Lackner was not prepared to go this far, but he was prepared to admit that the better cheesemaker should be given a medal.

"The man who can make 94 cheese deserves that medal, but the man who makes that poor stuff we run across now and then shoud be given no consideration at all. And we meet some dandies in this business," he admitted.

Would Favor Amalgamation.

The matter of smaller factories was brought up, and Mr. Lackner expressed the decided conviction that amalgamation of many of the smaller factories in the province would tend toward the making of a better product. "I firmly believe in amalgamation. As it is now we have some factories which make only three or four cheese a day. They can't make any profit on that, nor have they the proper equipment to produce good cheese; there are too many of these little fellows which are not much use to the industry."

As a parting suggestion Mr. Lackner advised owners of factories to concentrate more on cleanliness of utensils and factories as an aid toward fighting the rancidity which has been so prevalent. "Keep your hog pens away from the milk supply," he warned producers. "They don't go together."

John A. Murray, Campbellford, instructor, declared in his own area this year considerable attention was being paid to mechanical defects which were almost as numerous this year as last season. He revealed that Mr. Sandwith (chief dairy instructor) had visited the section recently and had assisted some of the factories in the actual production of cheese. "He helped us turn out one vat there that looked real fine, and we hope we can keep this up," stated Mr. Murray.

Mechanical Defects Improved.

W. R. McCreary, Belleville buyer, in tendering his congratulations to makers of the central area this year declared it was a pleasure to observe some of the cheese being received due to the decided improvement in mechanical defects previously experienced. Rind, boxes and other defects have all been improved, and damaged cheese have been practically nil, it was reported. Cheese being sent out by the Cook warehouse were a credit to the district, congratulated Mr. McCreary.

One of the factors this year which has led to lower prices received by cheesemakers was the rate of sterling exchange in effect. Producers are losing an average of three quarters of a cent a pound on cheese through this adverse exchange, it was pointed out.

Mr. McCreary's advice to makers and exporters was to concentrate on the matter of creating more goodwill among English buyers. Any effort made to boost prices has always in the past been detrimental to the trade and the better way to accomplish results was to cooperate with the firms such as W. S. Cook and Son, he stated. Mr. McCreary also interjected a good word for the Montreal buyers and trades who have done much to keep the name of the industry up. "No one is getting rich in the business of cheese buying, and the buyers are just as anxious to co-operate with you makers as they can be," he said.

Expressing regret at this year's low prices for cheese, Mr. McCreary declared he would not be satisfied until country factories were being paid an F.O.B. price of 15 cents the pound. Not until then would the maker really feel he was being paid a worthwhile price for his product.

Cheesemakers Really Trying.

Mr. James Cook supported the sentiments of Mr Lackner that insufficient prices were being paid for cheese this year, but recalled that many years ago a price of five and one-half cents a pound was paid "and we lost money on them at that."

To the cheesemakers Mr. Cook extended his congratulations on the good work being performed through the district in spite of adverse conditions and factors. "Every one of them is trying to put up the best cheese and the best finished product they are able, and this has been shown in the consistent high scoring cheese received right in this warehouse," he stated. "Importers are quick in their appreciation of this and hope the good quality continues."

Mr. Cook referred to the matter of rancidity as a factor which has always been present, but not under the same name.

"Years ago we called it yeasty or off-flavor cheese. There was one year it was particularly bad and all the factories were forced to install big circular cans through which the milk was run and aereated. In that way we got rid of the yeast, but the only way we can do now is to keep on doing as good as we have been this year. Now we are getting good cheese which is better finished, better boxed and better cared for, and I believe the new bonus has been directly responsible," he stated.

Considerable discussion followed the leading question by John Hall of Foxboro addressed to Mr. Lackner regarding the matter of pasteurization and rancidity.

Why Not Pasteurize?

"If pasteurization is good for milk for human consumption, why would it not destroy the factor responsible for rancidity?" asked Mr. Hall.

In the opinion of the director of dairying, pasteurization would. "But whether the country is ready for this is another question," stated Mr. Lackner. "If this were adopted, it would put many of the factories out of business and it would also lose some of the finer cheddar flavor of the cheese."

"New Zealand cheese does not bring the price of Canadian cheese on the British market because it hasn't the flavor of our cheese," offered Mr. Cook. "Over there they have to pasteurize their milk, and incidentally lose the flavor."

Neither producers, makers, buyers or graders were in accord with any suggestion of Ontario pasteurization, it was evident from the discussion.

Mr. McCreary told of thousands of pounds of New Zealand cheese purchased for processing by a large company which later had to be thrown into the sea due to its non-keeping qualities.

Firing of Instructors Protested.

Patrick Murphy, Enterprise, buyer, who described himself as one of the older group of one time cheesemakers declared himself associated even yet with a business of which he was extremely proud. He had one question to ask the gathering, the question of why Herb Bailey, "one of the best instructors of the Province of Ontario" had been let out of his position in Madoc district shortly after the government changed last time, and why so many other "good men" had also been let out and replaced by others.

"Maybe," said Mr. Murphy, "the reason Mr. Bailey was let out will never be satisfactorily explained, but when an industry gets a good man, it should keep him. When I had a good cheesemaker, I wanted to pay him a little more and be able to keep him because nothing was saved by having one not so good at cheaper wages.

"Herb Bailey was one instructor who always had high grade cheese in his district, and why men like him have been let out has never been satisfactorily explained. I like to see an instructor take off his coat and dig in one side of the vat with the maker on the other side and really demonstrate how good cheese is made. There are many instructors today who won't do this. I know Mr. Lackner is anxious to get the best men he can to help him with his work and I don't blame him for this, because he has nothing to do with it," stated Mr. Murphy.

Wild Flavors In Milk.

George Pollard, instructor of Stirling district, told of the difficulty experienced by makers of his section during the recent period.

"The past two weeks have been just about as hectic as any we have ever experienced. Rancidity has been intensified by the severe drought and cattle have been eating all sorts of foreign food, wild grape vines, wild cherry brush and all sorts of feed. This has undoubtedly something to do with the flavour."

One of the most noticeable things this year he has observed is the advantage some makers equipped with cold storage facilities have had over other factories not so equipped. Consistently higher scoring has been given cheese which had this advantage, it was stated. Without such storage cheese has tended to become "springy" and "off". The premium this year has put makers as well as instructors "on the spot" and has resulted in better grades of cheese than ever before, it was stated.

In his own defence, Mr. Pollard, who stated he had taken over the position vacated by Mr. Bailey, declared he did not know the reason for the change, but added that fewer cheese had been "picked out" during his first year as instructor than during the last year Mr. Bailey had acted as instructor.

"I don't say that I was responsible for this, but that is the way it happened," added Mr. Pollard.

"And, as far as taking off the coat and jumping into the work, I might add that I helped stir curd out of the whey in three different factories in one day."

Welcome Extended By President.

Mr. George Weaver, president of the Belleville Cheese Board, also expressed his welcome to the many present, and his delight at the size of the meeting.

"These meetings are really productive and worth attending, and it is my opinion they should be held oftener," stated Mr. Weaver. He recalled in contrast cheesemaking of today with conditions of years ago when he was employed and stated that 325,000 pounds of cheese in a season in the old factory was common place. Today a good season's output would reach about 235,000 pounds.

Charles Fraleigh, Bloomfield buyer, gave an insight into the industry from both the maker's and the buyer's point of view. "I am a producer, a secretary, and a buyer whenever I get the chance," he informed, stating that his sympathies were all with the maker who was trying to produce good cheese out of 95 per cent. good milk and 5 per cent. poor. As a buyer he declared that the present season was one of the worst in many years in which firms tried to do business.

Some are blaming the English buyers, but the real fact is international conditions are to blame. The importer has to buy cheese and hold them a year in speculation. If war breaks out the price of cheese will be pegged. And no on knows at which price cheese will be thus fixed. So the buyer naturally is not keen on stocking up. We need a Moses to come and tell us what to do."

Bonus Is Debatable Point.

Whether the new bonus was an actual benefit to the industry was a debatable point, stated Mr. Fraleigh. "The English buyers have a reputation of not buying on a bonus market."

This year another factor which has tended to upset the market is the fact that there is no outlet for undergrade cheese. "Last year we could not get enough of this to fill the demand This year we can't get rid of it," stated Mr. Fraleigh.

Mr. J. E. Kiser, manufacturer's representative, of Lansdowne, in a suggestion to the meeting declared that factories might survey the possibility of making cheese during certain months for home consumption. It was a well known fact, he stated, that many buyers would prefer buying directly from the factories rather than the retail stores due to the fact cheese might be better handled. Central Ontario cheesemakers and buyers, in his opinion ,were always highly co-operative toward each other, and nowhere else in the province was this so marked.

Mr. Kiser related the experiments of his company in the production of a new mould-proofing process for cheese, and offered the distribution of the chemical to makers who contemplated showing their cheese at the British Empire Exhibition in Belleville November next.

More Co-operation This Year.

"This year's bonus system has resulted in the definite undertaking of producers, makers and buyers all working together for the common end of better quality cheese, in the opinion of Mr. Richard Hart, local buyer. This was in contrast to the lack of co-operation often noted in previous years when not so much interest was generally taken in better scoring cheese.

"We see every cheese we buy and pay for, and cheese which is not in good shape is not accepted by us, because it is not of market value," added Mr. Hart. "Those we cannot accept we send back in the hope that it will be accepted in the same spirit by the factory which should be glad to have its attention called to the defects."

Chief defects this year have been cheese which are split and damaged, and mouse-eaten cheese.

"We believe the cheesemakers this year are doing a better job than they have ever done, and this in spite of the adverse conditions being experienced," said Mr. Hart.

J. L Irwin, grader of the local office explained at some length many factors contributing to lower scores on cheese. Chief of these was the matter of storage and it was fully revealed that lack of proper controlled storage has been responsible for the low grading of many cheese.

Cold Storage Important.

"We can't grade cheese which is kept in temperatures below 50 degrees or above 70 degrees," explained Mr. Irwin, "and factories should make arrangements to get their cheese into cold storage at least three or four days before warehousing. Any cheese warmed to 70 degrees will cool only four degrees in 24 hours, so it can be seen how important this matter of storage is."

Mr. Irwin explained the matter of pasteurization in New Zealand as being due to the fact that an enormous number of mechanical milkers were used there, but this pasteurization was employed to the detriment of cheese flavor. The only reason for pasteurization in this country would be to stop a disease epidemic, but in this heating all the beneficial organisms would be destroyed.

Mr. Irwin paid tribute to Mr. Lackner and his efforts at promoting the welfare of the industry. The present times were strenuous ones for the whole industry and low prices paid this year for cheese were little encouragement to makers. He recommended taking advantage of the offer to the government to share one half the cost of cheese factory improvements, and declared that the premiums from better grade cheese which would naturally follow would take care of the expense involved.

Cheesemaker Becomes Important.

"Bonus is found money," declared Mr. Irwin, expressing his conviction that the premium given has resulted in better quality cheese this year.

"The cheesemaker has become a pretty important man since the new bonus went into effect, but what is he going to get out of it. No body of men would appreciate having a share in this money than the cheesemaker, and even if only 10 per cent. of this bonus was passed along to the maker, it would mean a lot more to him. There are some factories which do this now," stated Mr. Irwin.

A vote of thanks for the splendid accommodation offered by Mr. Cook and for the lunch of genuine old cheese, crackers and coffee with which the evening was concluded was moved by Mr. Patrick Murphy, seconded by Mr. Hart.

PREMIER STATES

The government is justified in using Governor General's warrants to meet expenditures for calamities and for other purposes which cannot be foreseen when parliament is actually in session. The use of such warrants was not only proper to meet the unexpected charge imposed by the unprecedented and unforeseen drought in Western Canada; it is, in fact, to meet such a situation which cannot be provided for by parliament that warrants exist.

I am sure Mr. Manion will agree that the unemployment problem has not arisen since the prorogation of parliament. Indeed, unemployment, as the recent figures show, has been declining steadily in recent months and the problem is not quite so great today as it was during the session.

At the last session, parliament made an unprecedentedly large appropriation for federal assistance to the provinces to aid in relief of unemployment.

It would be the grossest disregard of the expressed will of parliament were the government to set aside the decision of parliament ,and arbitrarily adopt an entirely different method of meeting the situation.

It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the only effect of Mr. Manion's statement will be the promotion of dissension and the fostering of sectionalism.

ROBBER MAKES HAUL OF $1,800

London Bank Visited by Lone Bandit Who Escapes Bullets

London, Ont., Aug. 12—(CP)—Two men found in possession of unlicensed revolvers were in custody today as police made a check-up of all unregistered guns following London's first holdup in 18 months, when a lone gunman escaped with $1,600 in cash from an East London branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Police said neither man was connected with yesterday's robbery. The arrests were made as a precautionary measure by London police, determined to overlook no possible clue to the identity of the bandit, believed responsible for two other bank robberies this summer in Windsor and Toronto.

Posing as a businessman the bandit ,about 30 years of age, hired a taxi and entered the bank unsuspected. He handed teller Stanley G. Finn a note ordering him to "hand over the cash." Finn complied at gunpoint and the gunman fled in the waiting cab.

Fired at And Chased

Finn fired two shots after the fleeing taxi and two service station employees gave brief chase before being outdistanced. Harry Staffelle, the cab driver, told police he drove the man at gunpoint to a downtown intersection where the bandit jumped out, tossed Staffelle six $2 bills and disappeared.

Police were baffled by the man's quick disappearance after he left the car. No witnesses had been found at a late hour last night, though scores of persons in the district at the time were questioned. The gunman left no clear fingerprints on the car.

A detailed description of the man, which tallied with that of a bandit who took $1,000 from a Windsor Provincial Bank June 30 and with another who held up a Toronto bank early last month, has been sent to police throughout Western Ontario.

Arrested last night on charges of illegal possession of guns were Harry Vronsky, 48, and a war veteran whose name police withheld. Police said all persons with unregistered revolvers would be taken into custody as a precaution.

NO DEARTH OF GRACE AND BEAUTY ON FEMININE TENNIS TEAM

No sooner off the boat than away to the tennis courts went the fair members of the British Wightman cup team that will attempt to wrest international feminine tennis supremacy from United States at the end of this month. Here are two of the members of the squad in action at Rye, N.Y., and they certainly would never lead one to apply the "muscle moll" appellation to the racquet and greensward game. ABOVE, Miss Nina Brown awaits a ball to her forehand, a picture of grace and rhythm, and alongside Miss Freda Hemmersley, a trifle more vigorous, is ready to send one back over the net.

THE COMING FAIRS

Not far off are the annual fairs known throughout all parts of the world. With August fairs begin in this country, September sees them in full swing and October closes the scenes which demonstrate the importance of man's tillage of the soil and industry.

Fairs naturally come around about the time of harvest, though harvests extend over many weeks from early in the summer until the autumn. They therefore fittingly express the season. They are likewise associated with the industries as well as agriculture. For the fairs bring together many human activities and the handicraft of man and of woman is revealed at that time of the year when people are in the mood to look into the progress of the year's effort in every line.

In the fields goes on that steady progress of nature, which provides so much of the appeal of the fairs. Here are the growing cattle and horses, there are the sheep and swine, the fields have ripened or are ripening, the orchards have begun to yield their wealth. The busy housewife plies the industry of the home, cans the fruits and is ready to make the confections which fairs expect.

Happily industry has taken a large share in fairs, for it is realized that society is a unit, that while there may be demarcations along the urban and rural lines, there is unity under all.

Exhibitions have been recognized down the ages for fairs are very ancient and being such are less likely to pass than things not so old. They are old because they demonstrate the primal interests of man. The men and women who went to the early fairs in history were the same in type as the men and women of today. Method of transportation has changed but human interests are largely unchanging. Interest in livestock, poultry, dress, has endured down the ages.

There may be a change in style of garment, but even that is adjusted to human needs and requirements. The fairs are the great showwindows of these perennial interests of man in his needs, his surroundings, his ambitions.

Fairs should be all-inclusive for there seem but few interests which cannot be incorporated in them. For instance, no one ever thought of a fair without a band without means of enjoyment and pleasure, without thrills, without competition and rivalry. These fairs besides can only be fairs if they have the co-operation of every dweller in the community which seeks expression through its fair. The fair is the reward of industry and enterprise.

At this time most of the work making for the success of these annual shows has been done. Directorates know about where they stand with regard to the great perennial events.

OVER IN EUROPE

The publisher of the New York Daily News is convinced that war is not imminent. A five weeks' tour abroad has given him that impression. For ten days he was in Germany and sought several times to interview the German Fuehrer but naturally without success.

Many men back from Europe believe there will not be war. Some, however, can see no way out of the present dilemma of an armed world.

Opinions as published that Germany cannot wage a war successfully because of the natural internal weakness of a country which has been strained to militarisms, how world opinion is changing There has been a great change in the past ten months and for that matter in the five months past which have seen the growth of a potent democratic lineup.

What has given this new confidence and determination to the world, but the British and French rearmament developments and the attitude of the democracies and smaller countries?

There is the feeling that militarism and threat to peace must disappear or be forced out. The world outside of a few countries has come to see that the menace cannot go on forever.

The New York Times sees a very critical time ahead. "The world's resentment against the war maker was never so powerful as it is today, when the one common sense of all mankind is a sense of the sheer futility and insanity of a contest in killing and destruction. Whatever Herr Hitler is contemplating on his dark mountain, whatever 'voices' he hears, he cannot escape that universal voice warning him of the terrible retribution awaiting the man accused of sounding the signal for war. The forces of exasperation make a mightier mobilization than all the armies."

WHEN TWILIGHT COMES

When twilight comes and nature stills
The hum that haunts the dales and hills,
Dim shadows deepen and combine
And Heaven with its crystal wine
The cups of thirsty roses fills.
Blithe birds with music-burdened bills
Hush for a space their tender trills
And seek their homes in sheltering pine
When twilight comes.
Soft melody the silence thrills
Played by the nymphs along the rills,
And where the dew-kissed grasses twine,
The frogs and crickets tattoo fine
Drums to the fife of the whip-poor-wills.

NEXT BIG ATTRACTION toward which many residents of Belleville and district are looking with pleasurable anticipation is the Belleville Fair, 1939 edition, which we are assured will be Bigger and Better than ever. The big Rotary Club regatta has passed into history and left a splendid taste in the mouth as a good clean sporting event, well staged and admirably carried out, giving the best of satisfaction to all concerned and linking Belleville up with many of the best sport centres in the United States and Canada as successfully promoting and carrying out an international event of continent-wide importance in the sport world. Belleville Kinsmen staged their annual Kiddie Kar Derby for the benefit of growing boys and scored a success as usual, sending the Canadian champion to Akron, Ohio, for competition in the world championship contest on Akron's splendid specially built Soap Box Derby Hill. Now public attention is turned to Belleville Fair, staged as usual in the handsome fair grounds and buildings, provided at considerable expense some years ago as a fitting setting for a Bay of Quinte Exposition and the directors of Belleville Fair this year promise that the slogan "Bigger and Better" than ever will be fully lived up to.

JESSE JAMES MADE TRAIN ROBBERIES POPULAR, at least with the younger generation who loved the nickle and dime weekly releases of Beadle and Street and Smith, but the heyday of train robberies has long since passed and train robbery as a profession is no longer profitable. A recent attempt to stage an elaborate train robbery ended in fiasco for the bold, bad, imitators of Jesse James and Al Jennings. The robbery was staged on the Illinois Central Railway on a train carrying an army payroll of $75,000, near Champaign, Illinois. Two bandits boarded the train at a small station, from the opposite side of the station, and when the train gained headway, entered the mail and baggage car, whipped out revolvers and ordered the mail clerk to reach for the ceiling. One of the bandits stood guard over the mail clerk while the other ransacked the car looking for the payroll sack. Watching his chance the mail clerk grappled with the bandit, and another member of the train crew entered the car and dropped behind a pile of mail sacks opening fire on the bandits, wounding one who was captured by the crew. The bandits returned the fire and mail clerk Guy O'Hern, was hit. O'Hern crawled out to the engine cab, told the engineer what was doing and asked him not to stop the train at the next scheduled stop, but to continue to a larger town where the police force could cope with the bandits. This strategy was spoiled by a passenger who pulled the bellcord when he saw that the station was being passed. One of the bandits made his escape here and was picked up by a motorist who had been racing his car alongside the track. The wounded bandit was captured by the train crew, but his companion made a clean getaway, for the time being—and this great train robbery failed to function as per Beadle's nickle library or Street and Smith's nickle and dime dreadfuls.

OUR SCHOOL'

The Following Poem Was Written by the Pupils of S. S. No. 16, Sidney School

Amid the trees there stands a school
Of course grey and brown;
A lovely spot both bright and cool,
Here S.S. No. 16 is found.

At the back a garden and flower-bed lie
To make a sweet odour for those who pass by,
And on the east corner people will spy,
A little red church right out of eye.
—Douglas Prest

If you walk into our school you'll find
Six blackboards and an organ too,
And a cross teacher to make them mind,
And boards are full of work to do.
—Buddy Campbell

Our teacher is short without a curl,
And she is called Miss Reid
Nineteen boys and five wee girls
Are plenty in number indeed.
—Geraldine Campbell.

There are five little girls
And they're all terribly sweet
They all have quite a few curls
And their clothes are always neat.
—Frank Smith

Nineteen boys are in the school;
Some are lazy and some are bright.
They're forever forgetting the golden rule
And teasing the girls "just right".
—Floyd MacInnes

We have a little rhythm band;
We like it every dearly,
Bell and drums and tin cans
Make us bright and cheery.
—Allan Faulkner

One day when Douglas was writing with his pen,
And over an exam he tarried,
He wrote, "The more you love your fellowman
The sooner you will be married".
—Evelyn Bleecker

Most all of us have peculiar ways
For Jack chews his tongue instead of gum,
And Floyd reads books from day to day,
And Kenneth's work is never done.
—Maurice Faulkner.

Now in ending this our little rhyme,
We want each pupils to remember
That we'll never forget until the end of time
Our school days and each class member.

Other Cheesemakers I Have Known

As I was passing the old cheese-factory that is on the corner of my farm, the other day, something recalled to my mind the years of half a century ago when this same factory had just been built and the first cheesemaker had come from up in Western Ontario to operate the business for the owners. He was a somewhat unbalanced, harum-scarum sort of a fellow and was continually worrying about losing his wages in case he had the bad luck to make some second-grade cheese.

One day he called a passing farmer into the factory to get his opinion on what was the matter with the curd. Taking up a handful of the stuff he put it under the man's nose and said: "Smell that!" The farmer thought that he was being blamed for sending bad milk and turned on the cheesemaker and almost frightened him out of a year's growth. "The trouble with you," he said, "is that you don't know good milk or cheese when you see it. My grandmother could tell you more about making cheese than you ever knew."

That kept him from asking any more advice from outsiders, but he never was quite satisfied unless he had somebody or other in the factory to talk to. I was about 12 or 13 years old at this time and used to spend as much of my time as I could in the factory learning to make cheese, as I thought. And if my father had given me some work to do he would come to the far end of the farm to get me to come and help him "mill the curd." This went on all that Summer, although my father wasn't very well pleased at the way I was wasting my time, as he called it.

One day in October, as the season was coming to an end, the cheesemaker told me that he was going to pay me for helping him all Summer. "Oh, never mind," I said, "that's all right."

"No, sir," he replied, "do you think I would keep you here working for me all that time for nothing? Here take this," he said, putting his hand in his pocket and pulling out 25 cents. "You've earned all this, anyway." And he made me take it. I often wish that I had kept it to show to some of the young fellows I hear complaining about the low wages of the present time.

He used to come over to the house in the afternoon, whenever he would be having a spare, and talk to my aunt, who lived with us at that time. I imagine they were on pretty good terms although they were continually giving each other "digs"—or "slams," as we say nowadays. Once he told my aunt that he was going to get her photograph and hang it in the factory "to keep the skippers away"!

"Well", she replied, "you won't need to bother if you make all your cheese as dry and hard as the sample you gave us the other day." That settled him for that time.

The second cheesemaker we had wasn't much of an improvement on this fellow, in some ways. He was a great fellow to run around at nights. He had a girl for every second night in the week. There were no cars in those days and as he had to do all his travelling on foot, there were times when I've seen as many as a dozen farmers waiting at the factory in the morning with their milk, when he would be coming in sight from his nightly rambles.

He was a great "sport" and tried to take in all the baseball and football games and picnics that were going. When he wanted to get done the day's work early, so that he could attend these affairs, he would go out to the whey-tank and get a pailful of sour whey that would act as a "starter" when it was mixed with the milk.

One day even this wasn't making things go fast enough to ensure his getting to the picnic on time, so he went and got another pail of the stuff. "I guess that will put an acid on her that should cut a man's throat," he said to me as he dumped it into the milk-vat. He got to the picnic all right!

In those days it was one of the duties of the cheesemaker to skim the whey tank of its cream and boil this stuff down in an old soap-kettle to get the pure whey-grease, with which the cheese were greased for the week or two they stayed in the curing-room. By some accident this last-mentioned cheesemaker of ours burnt his grease, one time, causing it to become somewhat the color of pine tar. This fact didn't keep him from using it for its usual purpose, however. He daubed it on the cheese and rubbed it in, and then shipped them down to the exporters in Montreal. The fact that they passed inspection and that we patrons got our money out of them goes to show the change in the standards of the business in the past 50 years. A cheesemaker would probably be fined or jailed for doing the like of that nowadays!

I've known makers to burn their bad cheese in the furnace, rather than let them get into the hands of the graders. And others did like they say the doctors do — buried their mistakes! It meant a high "average", of course, but the cheesemaker was never held responsible for that!

There's no question about it, the sharper inspection and closer grading of the past ten years, or so, have raised the standards of the cheesemakers and improved the quality of our cheese more than a hundred years of the old careless, hit-or-miss system could have done. And making the cheesemaker individually responsible for the quality of his product was the first step toward this achievement.

Today our hold on the British market has been secured by quality—and by quality alone.—Resticus in Stratford Beacon Herald.

'Dejobbed' Negro States Case

Some new English words and expressions were embodied in a letter written by a negro of Africa to a missionary friend of a Lindsay man recently. The missionary sent a copy of a letter written by a negro who had learned English and who was, prior to his being discharged for laziness, an employee of the said missionary.

The letter from the discharged negro, husband of five wives and father of sixteen children, follows without comment:

"Sir:—On opening this epistle you will behold the work of a dejobbed person, and a very bewifed and much childrenized gentleman, who was violently dejobbed in a twinkling by yourself. For heaven's sakes, sir, consider yourself the catastrophy falling on your own head, and remind yourself as one walking home at the moons to five savage wives and sixteen children with your pocket filled with non-existent pounds, shillings, pence, not a solitary sixpence.

"Pity humble state, sir, when being dejobbed and proceeding with heavy heart filled with misery to this den of doom. Myself did greatly contemplate culpable homicide, but Him that protected Daniel, poet, safely through the Lion's den, will protect His servant in the home of evil. As to reason given by ourself, Esquire, for my dejobment, the inconsideration was laziness. 'No sir,' it is impossible for myself who has pitched sixteen children into this valley of Tears to have a lazy atom in his moral frame, and the sudden departure of all monthly has left me on the verge of destitution and despair.

"I hope the vision of honour will enrich your dreams tonight, and that the good Angel will melt and pulverise your heart with kindness and with much alacrity, as may be for the satisfaction and safety you will haste to sejobulate your servant I am, kind sir,—etc."—Lindsay Post.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Growing Pains

What was called "growing pains" in my boyhood was believed to be due to the fact that when children were growing most of the growth was near the ends of the bones and so near a part of a joint. A few years later when infection of teeth and tonsils was found to be a cause of rheumatism, these growing pains were believed to be due to rheumatism and parents were warned that heart disease might follow these growing pains.

While there is no question but that pains in knees and muscles in youngsters may actually be due to rheumatism following infected tonsils, nevertheless it is now believed that rheumatism is not the cause of these growing pains in most cases.

Dr. J. C. Hawksley, London, England, in Medical World, states that "growing pains" is not commonly related to rheumatic fever or subacute rheumatism (early stages) and does not finally cause heart disease.

"Children affected with 'growing pains' usually give a history of frequent colds and coughs and during these attacks the amount of pain is increased. Such children are benefited by removal of the tonsils and treatment of their colds. Many of these children do not gain weight. They frequently present signs of poor health. The commonest cause is some slight deformity such as flat foot, knock knee, spinal curvature, sway-back. Improvement is rapid when these conditions are corrected."

"Inflammation of the ends of the muscles where muscles are attached to bones—fibrositis—is a cause of growing pains. Tiredness is a frequent cause of growing pains and is seen in children who have long distances to walk to school or who stand for long periods."

Insufficient sleep is also an important factor in causing these pains.

Growing pains should always receive the attention of parents. The pains may be due to infection of tonsils, which may be followed by rheumatism and heart disease, or they may be due to one of the conditions outlined by Dr. Hawksley. In all cases the general health can be affected if conditions are not corrected.

150 Guests Assemble for Picnic of Thompson, Demorest, Reid Families

Stirling, Aug. 10. — Over one hundred and fifty people representing the pioneer families of Hastings County under the well known names of Thompson, Demorest and Reid, gathered for their annual reunion and picnic on the original homestead family property at Fairfield's Bridge on Monday, August 7th. Directly after the splendid dinner a one minute silence was observed in honour of late Perry Thompson, president of the organization for 1939. Mr. Percy McDavid directed the activities of the well arranged program. Following a vocal selection by Joe Gow the election of officers was conducted by Gilbert Thompson with the following officers elected—President, Mr. Dick Reid, Vice President, Mr. Percy McDavid, Secretary, Mrs. George Pollard, Treasurer, Dr. J. S. Demorest, Honorary President, Mr. Gilbert Thompson, Stirling. The first Wednesday in August of 1940, was selected as the date for the next year's gathering.

FINE PROGRAM

Introduced by the presidng officers several talented artists contributed entertaining numbers to the fine program in the following order —community singing led by Joe Gow, reading by Mrs. John Craig, instrumental duet, Donald and Burton Thompson; humorous selection, Joe Gow, reading by Mrs. Pete Murray; solo, Miss Nellie Hodgens, vocal solo, Mrs. John Craig, (who also gave a reading "A Receipt for Happiness"); vocal selection by Gerald Thompson and brief addresses by Mr. Addison Thompson and Robert Wood. The treasurer's report was presented by Treasurer Dr. Demorest.

SPEAKER IS DR. DEMOREST

One of the most interesting features on the program was a fine address by Dr. J. S. Demorest of Stirling, who for the past few years has devoted considerable time to his hobby "Geneology" and through this study has been of great value to the executive committee in their search for historic data concerning the family.

"OUR ANCESTORS"

"Do you know the given names of your paternal great grandfathers? Do you know the maiden names of your four great grandmothers? Do you know where your remote ancestors lived and what they did and what sort of people they were? Why is it that people who are up and coming in other things know so little and seem to care less about their own family background which, plus their environment accounts for what they are? Why do we give more thought to the pedigree of cats and dogs, cattle and horses, than of ourselves and our children created as we are told in the image of God? In Biblical times everything was reckoned by geneologies and candidates for priesthood had to produce a long pedigree to gain acceptance. In spite of ridicule and criticism hurled at historic data by those who classify themselves as modern thinkers, the family institution with all its faults, established long before the dawn of civilization goes on forever, the focal point of all human existence and the source of geneology whether we encounter saints or sinners on the family tree. The more we learn of the struggle of each pair of our ancestors to maintain a home and perpetuate their offspring, the more we shall honor and revere family life.

"All are fearfully and wonderfully made, royalty the same as workman. Going back only five generations, any one of us have had thirty-two ancestors and to double that numbers, making ten generations we have had 1022 ancestors. A change in only one in all that number would muss things up considerably for a lot of people, resulting in entirely different personalities for all affected in the biological chain.

"No matter what we are or who we are every single one of, our ancestors contributed a few drops of the bloodstrain in our veins. If even one millionth part of it had been omitted somewhere upstream we would not be eactly the same.

"Much tracing of ancestry is done to locate distinguished forebearers who bore arms of noble and royal blood. But that is not the most practical and interesting phase of geneology. There are men sweeping streets who could trace their ancestor to William the Conqueror, while some of the greatest men of our times descend from the peasants over which that ancient monarchs of England ruled. The study of our ancestral background should be put to better uses, for the sake of knowledge of a broader scope of all branches of lineage with a view to self-improvement and a better direction of our offspring.

"Instead of looking for illustrious forebearers in our family tree it is wiser for most of us to approach the subject of our geneology with modest expectation as common folk who descended from commoners. Today we have gathered on the ground of our kinsman, Elgin McDavid, to do honour to our ancestor, Robert Thompson, who settled here and died here. He came from Ireland to Upper Canada, then so-called, in the year 1807, 132 years ago.

"Robert Thompson was one of the first settlers to locate as far north as the fifth concession which was then of course a wilderness. He came over from Ireland with his wife Jane whose maiden name was Kilpatrick, and their eight children, four sons and four daughters He journeyed in a sailing vessel which is believed to have taken three months for the crossing due to bad sailing weather."

In addition to the fine address carefully prepared from facts gathered in his own research, the speaker exhibited a copy of the family tree skilfully portraying the family history. His knowledge increased largely by his hobby of geneology and the assistance of several older members of the family has resulted in the collection of many interesting facts.

During the afternoon the Guild members held a business meeting and several were introduced to the new incumbent and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Heaven and daughters. Rev. Heaven voted thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Manore for their kindness to which everyone responded heartily.

Fashion Flashes

A big dash of Scotch livens the midsummer mode. A charming suit is light-weight taffeta plaided in red, white and blue. The bolero is worn over a white chiffon blouse.

Look around and see the new autumn bags. A beauty is black suede made like a gladstone bag, with gold metal piping and zipper with a luggage tag on which name and address may be engraved.

Flying high are some of the new berets. A beret of fine black felt mounted in a purple velvet ribbon is worn far back on the head and has a very high drape.

A dramatic exit ought to be easy now that so many of the smartest frocks have bustles and back draperies. A lovely frock of ice-blue faille has the back fullness arranged in tiers. Shoe-string shoulder straps and a very low back decolletage are good details.

Better than ever are the new three-piece suits. A beauty has a plaid topcoat in mustard, ruby red, green and natural tweed, set off by collar and tuxedo revers of ruby silver fox. Wide-revered jacket is of the plaid fabric, and the skirt is solid ruby red tweed.

Dressup evening frocks with a smart packet. A new model is a reefer with wide notched revers of multi-colored paillettes in horizontal stripes.

Stretch!

ROSALIND RUSSELL keeps in trim by balancing exercise and relaxation in a well-planned daily program

By HELEN FOLLETT

STRETCH; stretch like everything! Five minutes each day of muscle flexing will keep you young and "soople", will give the old gent with the scythe and the long white whiskers the laugh. The noble house dog and puss-in-boots know what they are about when they stretch their legs and backs; give their muscles a workout many times a day.

Stand facing the wall, hands high. Up on the toes slowly. Further and further, until your waist feels like a silver. When you have stretched to the limit, stay that way while you count ten. Down on your heels. Take three deep breath, lifting the chest as high as you can; up on your toes again.

Lazy Girl's Exercise

This is the ideal exercise for the lazy girl whose teeth go on edge when you mention calisthenics. It's fun, too. Try it for five or ten minutes every night. When you awaken in the morning, chuck the pillow lie on your back ,stretch and wriggle your toes. Stretch your fingers, fold them in the palms of your hands. See what you can do with legs and arms in the way of extending them. Pull the upper portion of your torso away from the lower part.

Your flesh will glow, cheeks will become rosy. You'll start the day off on the right foot, and there's no danger of having a before-breakfast face.

Creams for the Skin

When buying creams, remember that those of light consistency are suitable for cleansing the skin, for applying after exposure to the elements, and to prevent sunburn. Heavy emollients are made for massaging purposes. They contain elements that are nourishing to impoverished tissues offer resistance when they are smoothed over the flesh.

Many women aren't in the habit of finding out the purposes of cosmetics. That's a mistake. Some are suitable for dry skins, others for oily. Some have astringent qualities, not necessary for the fresh young face blessed with firm tissues.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"IS IT OUT OF DATE TO BE A LADY?"

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"Is it out of date to be a lady?

"I don't know how to get along with boys, or in fact, with girls either. And I just know I'll never be married. My mother was a lady, and taught me to be the same. I learned how to play piano, embroider and to keep house perfectly. I suppose my manners are good but I know as well as anybody that they will never get me anywhere.

"I suppose I seem queer to people of my own age, because nobody is polite nowadays as I've been taught to be. I would really like to become a "rough-neck", if that would make me happy and popular, but I don't know how. Can anything be done for me?

Sally"

Since it's been put up to me in this way, I'm afraid what Sally says is true. And it's almost tragic, isn't it, that so much trouble should have been taken to make a nice girl into the type of person who is, we have to admit, out-dated.

I doubt if most nice young things even know what people meant, a generation or so ago, when they used the world "lady". It is true that it meant first of all, being square and honorable and high-minded, and these qualities, I honestly believe, have not gone out of date.

But it also meant being very polite in a way that took up a great deal of time. People are more direct nowadays, and more hurried. Politeness is "old stuff".

And it meant knowing how to do everything about a house, including many things that were unnecessary. Ladies also wore a great many clothes. Oh, if you could have seen their starched petticoats!

They were dear, sweet creatures, and they were highly attractive to men when that was what men expected. But I can easily believe that a rough, slangy, delightful boy of 1939, deeply interested in automobiles, airplanes, and radios, and not the least bit interested in manners, wouldn't know how to get on with a "lady" and that neither he nor the "lady" would get any pleasure out of the meeting.

We are all pretty much of a mind nowadays, are we not, that the time girls used to spend in piano practice, whether they were musical or not, might much better be given to driving a car, or to outdoor games, or to preparing oneself for a useful job? Nor need a girl spend her entire time learning how to keep house, when she is probably going to live in a flat equipped with electricity.

Such a girl as Sally describes herself as being may regret wasted time, but she need not, of course, despair of her future or prepare to forego the happiness of marriage.

Can she dance well? If she can, that in itself is enough to recommend her to boys and girls of her own age.

And if she is genuinely interested as she seems to be, in these other youngsters who have been brought up so differently, I am sure they will feel her warm friendliness and respond to it. She can learn to drop some of these ladylike ways that she feels are such a handicap.

Personally, I will confess that I lament the complete disappearance of manners as we used to know them. I even think that a few manners—just a few—would make the girls and boys of today even more charming than they are.

The "lady" has disappeared. Let us do full justice to the enchanting qualities of the good sport and good companion who has succeeded her.

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, August 13

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of surprising experiences either in accustomed Sunday affairs or in some rather unconventional directions. There may be setbacks, delays and disappointments, together with strife, confusion and dangers through recklessness and turbulence. Remain calm, prudent.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year of conflict, with much activity and surprising developments, although these may be subject to duplicity, postponements or disapointments, and may suffer from rash, tempestuous and quarrelsome personal indulgences. Progress comes from restraint, poise and prudence.

A child born on this day will be manysided, with versatility, originality and fine creative ability, although its nature will be tempestuous and imperious.

For Monday, August 14

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for high attainments of cherished ambitions in whatever channel of aspiration they may lie. It is probable that such aims may be based on either social, artistic, cultural or altruistic urges rather than business or other prosaic objectives. The latter are under hazardous or treacherous influences, so be alert, discreet and stick to principle.

Those whose birthday it is are under fairly fortunate vibrations for attaining cherished hopes and wishes, particularly in social, romantic cultural or altruistic expression rather than in business. Be prudent and wary.

A child born on this day will have high ideals, great ambitions and humane impulses, which may lead it to splendid success in public service or in artistic or educational position. It will be very popular.

Frankford

Frankford—Relatives and friends of Mrs. Lorne Hubble, gathered at her home north of Frankford on Friday afternoon, July 28th in honor of her birthday.

The gathering took the form of a picnic party on the spacious lawn with Mr. Hubble, her mother, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Harley Hubble and Mrs. Weston taking the places of honor at the table gay with flowers and centred with a birthday cake aglow with pink and white candles.

Mrs. Hubble, who for some years has spent most of her days in her room in a wheel chair was presented with a radio by Mr. Donald Bates on behalf of the gathering. The address was read by Mrs. John Ferguson.

Mrs. Hubble although taken by surprise and visibly affected thanked her friends for their thoughtfulness remarking "that she hoped to be spared so that she could continue in her work of doing something kind and helpful to everyone".

Everyone then joined in singing "For she's a jolly good fellow".

Among those attending this pleasant event were friends from Whitby, Belleville, Stirling, Smithfield, Sine, Campbellford, Allen Mills, Wooler and Frankford.

HOW TO ANSWER YOUR HOSTESS' INVITATION

Your hostess has written you a delightfully hospitable invitation to visit her? I hope that she has been definite about the time you are expected, and I hope that she has thoughtfully told you something about the plans she has made for your visit so that you have valuable clues about what types of clothes will be appropriate. The wise hostess today follows the custom of giving the guest a definite idea of how long he or she is expected to stay.

This invitation should be answered promptly—if possible, on the day it is received. Delay in answering makes things inconvenient for your hostess, holds up any other plans she may wish to make if you cannot accept her invitation.

Of course your note of acceptance will be gracious and appreciative. But it should also reflect the definiteness of her invitation, so that she will know that you understood what she wanted you to understand.

Your note of acceptance might read something like this:

Dear Betty,

How very kind of you to ask Tom and me to spend Labor Day weekend with you and your charming family. We are thrilled with the thought of coming! We will, as you suggest, take the 4.15 train from here on Friday, and will take the early Tuesday morning train, for Tom has an early business appointment, and I have a committee meeting.

We are looking forward to swimming on your wonderful beach, and Tom is bringing his golf clubs for that anticipated foursome with Jack and his friends. Thank you too for planning to take these two dance-addicts to the gala dance at the Club.

We can hardly wait for "the" Friday. Thank you for asking us. Dearest love and appreciation to you both.

Affectionately,

Dorothy

GLOVES AND HAT AT HOME?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I am being married soon, and am having a house wedding with seventy-five or eighty guests. My mother and I have been wondering whether or not it would be proper for her to wear a hat to match her outfit. She is, of course, the hostess, and the ceremony and buffet luncheon will take place in her own home. Under these circumstances what should she do? Of course we know that if the wedding were to take place at the church, my mother would wear a hat and gloves. But when it is in her home, should she wear them?

Is it necessary for me to wear gloves, too, when the wedding is in our house? I am planning to wear either white or turquoise. If I choose white, I shall certainly wear a veil. In that case, should I wear gloves? Or if I decide to wear a long turquoise dress, should I wear gloves to match?

Bride-to-be

Since your mother is the hostess, she would not wear a hat or gloves at your house wedding.

It is not necessary for you to wear gloves, whether you wear a formal white wedding dress and bridal veil, or the informal turquoise dress. However, it is not, of course, incorrect for you to wear gloves. Matching turquoise gloves would be very effective with your turquoise dress. In other words, use your own taste about wearing gloves and decide if you think they would add to the ensemble effectiveness of your costume.

COURTESY TIP

Ice cream will taste just as delicious . . . really it will! . . . if you don't take a whole spoonful into your mouth at once, and draw the spoon in and out of your mouth, licking off portions of the ice cream with each pull.

If you adopt this goopy way of eating ice cream, you'll certainly disgust anyone who has to look at you.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

PARENTS OFTEN REMISS IN DETECTING SIGNS OF NEPHRITIS

Too many times in my thirty-odd years of practise I have been called to attend an unconscious child whose parents could tell me only that there had been convulsions prior to unconsciousness.

In such cases I usually suspect nephritis, and the first thing I do is to try to restore the patient to at least semi-consciousness so that I can get a specimen of urine to test. It is unbelievable how unobservant some parents can be. The child will show all the symptoms of nephritis—discolored urine, swelling of the face and lethargy—but not until convulsions strike do they seem to realize that something very serious is wrong with their little one. Then, of course, they get in a panic and call the doctor.

I recall one such case I attended, away out in the country. The child was having convulsions which had continued for two days. Of course I had to stay by the child all those two days, for I was afraid he might died if I left. We managed to save the child's life.

When a doctor is called at this stage of the disease, he will place the child on a treatment. We know there is an inflammatory reaction going on in the kidney which is destroying both the glomeruli and the tubules, and this destruction is causing the kidneys to retain materials they shouldn't and excrete materials that should be retained.

In such a case we try to give the kidneys a rest. To do this, we avoid giving the child any food that tends to place a strain on the organs which are giving the trouble. Besides, the child must get lots of rest, for we know that increased exertion gives the kidneys more work to do. Then while the patient is resting and while we have taken all the strain off the kidneys that we can, we must go ahead and clear up the trouble.

There are various methods of treating this kidney infection and doctors vary in how they do it. But since the discovery of sulphanilamide and sulphopyridine this problem isn't nearly as serious as it once was.

If the most obvious sign of the nephritis is the presence of urine in the blood stream, then we will give clear fluids by the mouth, for they are more easily handled by the kidneys, and we will keep the bowels open with laxatives so as much fluid as possible will pass out with the stools and so give the kidneys more rest.

If there is a lot of swelling in the face and body, we must be careful what fluids we give or we will only make the condition worse. In these circumstances, the patient is usually put on a milk diet which is gradually increased as the action of the kidneys shows them to be improving. Occasionally, if a lot of essentials have been lost from the blood, a transfusion may be necessary. I think this is rare, though, for I only did it two or three times in my life.

AT THE BELLE

Jack Benny and "Rochester"

The one and only Jack Benny is at his gagging best, Dorothy Lamour sings and provides romantic interest, Edward Arnold is a business tycoon who menaces Jack's romantic plans, charming Binnie Barnes provides romantic by-play as his neglected wife, twenty gorgeous pretty girls parade through a fabulously beautiful harem sequence, three new hit songs are sung by various members of the cast—in fact, it would take an adding machine to tabulate the attractions fo the 'Man About Town", the new comedy with music which Paramount is now presenting at the Belle Theatre!

As if that weren't enough, "Rochester" making his screen debut with his radio chief, comes through with two eccentric dances which are being rated as nothing short of sensational. And the world-renowned Merriel Abbott Dancers are being hailed as nothing short of amazing in the big harem sequence of the picture.

Benny Natural Self.

The new Benny film differs from his previous pictures in that it gives Jack a better chance to play his natural, gagging self. The story, written by Morrie Ryskind, author of such screen successes as 'My Man Godfrey" and "Stage Door", casts Jack as an American impressario who is laying plans for presenting his show in London.

The amorous nonsense, the farcical situations start to pile up when Jack finds that the singing star of the show, Dorothy Lamour, is cleaving to his orchestra leader, Phil Harris. Lacking the amoral aplomb of a Cassanova, Jack turns to his valet, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, for advice. "Rochester" suggests that Jack arouse a little jealousy in Dorothy.

Jack, gagging along in his best style, manages to meet Binnie Barnes, charming lady of the English nobility, whose husband, Edward Arnold neglects her. Eventually she invites Jack down to her country home When Edward Arnold starts to suspect that Jack is interested in his wife, the picture hits an even faster farcical pace.

Three new songs, already in the hit class, are offered in the picture. Dorothy Lamour sings "Strange Enchantment" and "That Sentimental Sandwich", by Frederick Hollander and Frank Loesser.

The supporting cast also includes Betty Grable, E. E. Clive and Matty Malneck and his orchestra. Mark Sandrich directed.

Another of the ever-welcome crime-does-not-pay stories, "While America Sleeps", Popeye in a funny cartoon "Leave Enough Alone" and the popular Belle newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

When pleasure rules the life, mind, sensibility and health shrivel and waste, till at last . . . no joy in earth or heaven can move the worn-out heart to response. — T.T. Munger.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Prison Without Bars"

The following review on "Prison Without Bars" is from the Globe and Mail, Toronto, by Roly Young in his daily column of July 28th, a picture which he gives four stars.

* PRISON WITHOUT BARS

Alexander Korda production, directed by Brian Desmond Hurst, from a film produced by Arnold Pressburger, with the following cast:

Suzanne	Corinne Luchaire
Yvonne	Edna Best
Dr. G. Marechal	Barry Barnes
Renee	Mary Morris
Mme Appel	Martita Hunt
Mlle. Arthemise	Margaret Yarde
Mme. Remy	Elsie Shelton
Alice	Lorraine Clewes
Nina	Glynis Johns
Julie	Sally Wisher
Mlle. Renard	Enid Lindsey
Mlle. Pauline	Phyllis Morris
Mlle. Dupont	Nancy Roberts

"Prison Without Bars" (Imperial) is Alexander Korda's English remake of a French film, both versions starring the French actress Corinne Luchaire. It is one of the movies' more inteligent efforts and strikingly deals with the problem of girls in a French reform institution outside of Paris. This reformatory, run on the old system, by a tyrannical superintendent, is a place of horror for the girls until outside influences get a new superintendent appointed in the person of Edna Best. She proceeds to make revolutionary changes in the system, and is most successful with one particular girl, an incorrigible named Suzanne (Mlle. Luchaire). Romantic complications are when the prison doctor, who is Miss Best's fiancee, tires of waiting for her to complete her work, and develops a romantic interest in the incorrigible prisoner. I'll leave you to see how it works out.

A competent English cast tells the story convincingly, and Mlle. Luchaire is an interesting new personality, though she makes one wonder if all French movie stars look like Annabella. For the reformatory staff Mr. Korda rounded up the year's prize collection of female draculas.

"Prison Without Bars" is a picture that is a very striking and worthy addition to the finer things that the screen has presented.

"Prison Without Bars" will be presented next at the McCarthy Theatre, with a big second all fun feature presentation 'Always in Trouble' with that big little star you all love, Jane Withers, supported by an outstanding cast of screen favorites including Jean Roger, Arthur Treacher, Robert Kellard, Eddie Collins, Andrew Tombes, Nan Bryant and Joan Woodbury.

Now Playing.

Peter Lorre in "Mr. Moto's Last Warning" and Charles Starrett in "West of Cheyenne", two swell features are now playing at the McCarthy Treatre, plus a very funny action treat.

Once upon a time...

PALM OIL
OLIVE OIL
PALMOLIVE

More than 3,000 years ago, slaves blended the tropical tree oils of Olive and Palm. This costly mixture, crude though it was, played a most important part in the toilet of beautiful women. They knew it soothed their skin, kept it soft, clean . . . smooth and lovely.

For 3,000 years nothing has been discovered that is finer, gentler, more soothing for your skin than these wonderful oils of the Orient.

And today, with the most careful scientific methods, these same precious, natural oils are blended into Palmolive Soap. Palmolive's purity; its safe, gentle, penetrating lather; and its natural, delicate colouring, are due only to the secret blending of these two age-old beauty aids.

So, knowing what Palmolive is made with, you can use it safely, without fear, for your own delicate skin. Truly, Palmolive will keep in your complexion that soft, lovely youthfulness. In 72 countries of the world, more women use Palmolive than any other toilet soap.

First only Olive Oil . . . Now, only Palmolive keeps the Quins' skins lovely

Palmolive is so good, so safe, so mild, it was selected exclusively by Dr. Dafoe, for the famous Dionne Quins. And you know, because they were premature babies, their skin has always been extremely tender and sensitive. Surely if Palmolive keeps the Quins' skins in smooth and perfectly healthy condition, it can keep all your skin lovely too. Get some today.

"I'm thrilled with the New Improved Palmolive!" says MRS. C. BEAIRSTO, lovely Winnipeg socialite

"Of course I'd used Palmolive before, but not regularly. From now on though, Palmolive is the only soap for my skin. It's so much milder. My daily beauty treatment with the new improved Palmolive is really a thrill, especially since the new perfume is so lovely. I've noticed too, that the new Palmolive is harder So it's thrifty to use.

Mrs. Brown paid 15c for a cake of Palmolive Soap

THAT was almost 40 years ago. In those days Palmolive was a new and almost unknown product. The demand for Palmolive was small, so Palmolive could be manufactured only in small quantities . . . the most expensive way. This meant that the costly imported Olive and Palm Oils, used in making Palmolive, could be bought only in small quantities . . . the most expensive way. Because the price was high, and the demand small, retailers bought Palmolive only in small quantities . . . the most expensive way.

Mrs. Brown was well satisfied with her first cake of Palmolive. She continued to use it and to recommend it to her friends. But the makers of Palmolive knew that many other people would use Palmolive if the price could be reduced. They knew too, that the only way to reduce the price of Palmolive was to lower the cost of manufacturing. And to do this, a great volume of sales was necessary.

So they advertised Palmolive in the newspapers. Day after day, week after week, hundreds and thousands of people read about the new, gentle toilet soap made with skin softening, soothing Olive and Palm Oils.

Gradually more and more of these newspaper readers tried and liked Palmolive. And, with their increasing purchases, up went the sales, down went manufacturing costs. Wisely, Palmolive's makers passed this saving on to their customers.

Soon Mrs. Brown was buying Palmolive for only 10c a cake. At this new low price Palmolive was advertised to a new and wider market. Thousands who had read about Palmolive, but had been unable to afford to pay the 15c price, now gladly bought it at the new 10c price. All through Palmolive's history, this story of increased demand and resulting lower prices, has constantly been repeated. First at 15c, then at 10c, at 2 cakes for 15c, and now at 2 cakes for 11c, Palmolive has been advertised to ever-widening markets.

Today, Palmolive, the luxury soap of 40 years ago, is the largest selling toilet soap in 72 countries of the world. And today, Mrs. Brown buys the new improved Palmolive for little more than one-third of the 15c she paid for her first cake.

LITTLE GIANTS WIN TWO TO GET BREATHER

Jersey City Gets Good Pitching to Win 2 Over Redwings

LEAFS WIN

There's an old baseball chestnut which contends no club can hit the jackpot unless its pitching is there—and how those Jersey City Giants know it today!

Just when it began to look as if the Giants were about to blow up and start their swan song along came the hurling department to patch up the leak and keep the Jerseys in one piece.

Rollie Stiles, Frank Pearce and Bill Harris were the elbowing heroes of this comeback job as the Jerseys nipped the Red Wings in both ends of a doubleheader last night, each time by a 5-3 margin. Since second place Syracuse was kicked around, 7-3, by Montreal, this twin win gave the Little Giants a much needed breathing spell as well as a two-game hold on the red hot pennant race.

Stiles and Pearce combined to hold Rochester to three safeties in the first game and Bill Harris went the route with an eight-hitter in the nightcap.

Porter Wins.

Bob Porter held Syracuse to five blows in winning his sixteenth victory of the season, while his mates belted Mike Meola and George Minor for twelve safeties. Gene Hasson, Montreal first baseman whose skull was fractured May 30 by a pitched ball, celebrated his return to action by clouting a homer.

Buffalo Bisons defeated Baltimore, 17-3, in observing "Irish Night" in honor of Bison Pilot Steve O'Neill. The herd collected fifteen hits with Jim Oglesby whacking two homers as Ken Ash chalked up his tenth win of the year.

Toronto Maple Leafs evened their series with Newark by pounding three hurlers for fourteen hits and a 7-3 triumph.

Phil Marchildon gave up all three of Newark's runs in the first four innings but settled down until the ninth when a walk and a single brought Carl Fischer in to replace him. Fischer struck out Blair and Judnich to end the game.

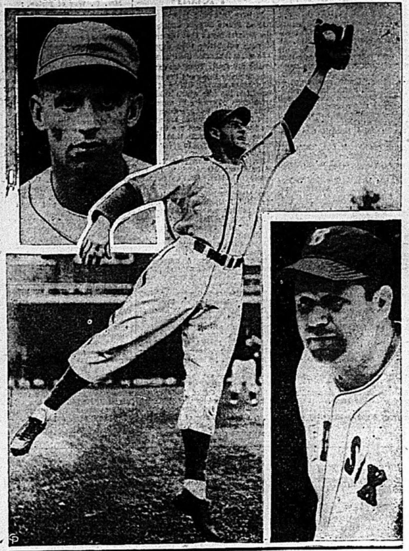
CAN IT BE MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL THEY'RE PLAYING?



Strange have been the doings, at times, in the major leagues this year and among the top oddities has been the sight of infielders and outfielders suddenly turning pitcher. It may the Bucky Walters influence or just the heat, but these three players, Johnny McCarthy, TOP, of the Giants; Joe Marty, CENTRE, of Philadelphia Phillies; and Jimmy Foxx LOWER RIGHT, slugging first baseman of Boston Red Sox, have all taken a fling on the mound. Foxx moved over to the mound in a game in which his team was many runs behind and retired the only three batters he faced, one on strikes. The other two did longer stretches, but a glance at the pitching performances of their respective teams gives a better inkling of why they turned pitcher. As far as is known all transitions were only temporary.

Managerial Posts in Major Leagues Seem Quite Secure For 1940 Season at Least

Vitt of Cleveland and Baker of Tigers Signed to Lead Respective Teams Yesterday

YANKEES WIN

Giants Fall Behind as Result of 2-1 Reverse and Cubs Win Over Pirates

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Managing a big league baseball club used to be about as safe and sane as being a steeple jack, but it looks as though the fellows who are holding down the jobs now are going to have steady work and may even be in one place long enough to get into the 1940 census.

Sudden signing of Oscar Vitt by Cleveland Indians and by Del Baker by Detroit Tigers yesterday just about removed all question about the return next year of the 16 present pilots. This year brought three new faces onto the scene and it's rare enough for all the managers to get through a season intact let alone get new contrctas.

Vitt had been rumored on the way out and owner Alva Bradley said this was one of the reasons for announcing his re-hiring at this time.

Jimmy Dykes of Chicago White Sox and Fred Haney of St. Louis Browns recently were given new contracts and the other American League managers, Joe McCarthy, Connie Mack, Joe Cronin and Bucky Harris, are safer than money in the bank.

Terry a Fixture

In the National League Bill McKechnie already is under a long term contract to Cincinnati Reds. Ray Blades' feat in lifting St. Louis Cardinals into second place assures him of another term and Doc Prothro has made a more than satisfactory start at Philadelphia. Bill Terry is a fixture with the Giants and Casey Stengel is making the best of a bad hand at Boston. The same might be said for Pie Traynor at Pittsburgh and Gabby Hartnett in Chicago while Leo Durocher is blooming like a perennial plant in Brooklyn.

The settling of the managerial questions yesterday supplemented a lull in the Major League program which kept half the teams idle. The Phillies stole what there was of the show with Walter Kirby Higbe unreeling a two-hitter against New York Giants for a 2-1 victory.

Bill Lee Wins

Big Bill Lee, getting back into form, earned his 14th victory for the Cubs with a six-hit performance which beat Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2. Buck Newsom pocketed his 13th of the season by way of celebrating his 31st birthday and registering a triumph over his old teammates, the Browns. He struck out 11 and singled home the deciding run in the ninth.

New York Yankees returned to their old custom of staging one big inning to beat Philadelphia Athletics 9-5. Six of their runs were bunched in the fifth inning.

SLUGGER FISHES

We don't know why Ted Williams adopted the Huck Finn ensemble for his fishing venture. but anyway he went off for some peace and quiet during an off day in the major league schedule. Ted is the slugging rookie outfielder with Boston Red Sox, who's led the American League in batting in runs all season, and is generally hailed as the best of the newcomers.

Germany's shipments of medicinals to Italy last year reached an all-time record valuation of $3,825,000.

QUINTE LOOP MOGULS MEET IN BELLEVILLE

Must Settle Status of Belleville and Air Force in Standing

PLAY TUESDAY

Napanee, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP) — With the right to the third place play-off berth in the Bay of Quinte "Intermediate A" baseball league still requiring the replay of several tied and postponed games Secretary Lynn Crossman of Napanee today called a special meeting of the four clubs in Belleville this evening.

Flyers and Belleville wound up their schedule Thursday night in a one-all tie. Flyers in last place have tied games with Picton, Napanee and Belleville and postponed games with Picton and Belleville. This gives them very much of a mathematical chance of earning the right to meet the second-place Napanee Gibbards in the league two-of-three semi-final series. Originally the league should have their winner ready for the O.B.A. play-downs by Aug. 26 but this will hardly be possible and an extension of time will be sought.

League standing:	W.	L.	T.
Picton	13	3	1
Napanee	11	6	1
Belleville	5	11	1
Flyers	2	11	3

Games next week—Tuesday, Flyers at Belleville.

New System for Awarding Prizes

Ottawa, Aug. 12 (CP)—A new system for awarding prizes will be introduced in the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association matches which open at nearby Connaught Ranges on Monday. The time honored name of "Tyro" will disappear.

For several decades the meet opened with the Tyro match for riflemen who had not won prizes in a previous meet. Most matches thereafter had prizes for Tyros in addition to the open prizes.

This year all competitors will be divided into three classes, the experts, the medium and the rack rifles. The experts will be those who have won prizes before, who use service rifles that have been specially bedded, and have special sights. The medium will be Tyros using the same type of rifles as the experts and the rack rifles will be those competitors who use the rifles as issued to the rank and fyle of Canadian soldiers without any special bedding or sights.

England's Board of Education decided not to celebrate the 100th anniversary this year of the organization.

After 30 years the kilt is being revived in New Zealand, and will be worn by a new Scottish regiment.

CITY SOFTBALL PLAY-OFFS OPEN WITH TWIN BILL

Point Anne Surprise Corbys With 9-5 Win, While 'Oilers' Blank Dracups 17-0

MANY ERRORS

Johnnie Bawden Hurls One-Hit Game; Cementmen Outhit Corbys in Victory

Point Anne and the Shell-Aajmaa drew first blood in the Belleville City Softball League playoffs for the Canadian Bank of Commerce Trophy, the "Cementmen" winning 9 to 5 over Corbys A.C. at Point Anne, while at Coleman Flats the "Oilers" blanked the Dracup "Tiremen" 17 to 0; as Johnnie Bawden hurled a one-hit game. Errors were predominate in both games on the part of the losing teams, Dracups booting the ball for 14 miscues, while Corbys committed nine glaring errors.

Spoils No Hitter

Clarence Tuttle's single in the second inning robbed Johnnie Bawden of a no run no hit game at the Flats. The "Oilers" forged to the fore with seven runs in the fifth and kept adding to their advantage. The "Oilers" pounded the offerings of two Dracup hurlers, 'Coux' Dracup and Jim Hunter in a most prolific manner, although neither pitcher was given much adequate support in the field. O'Neill with a home run and triple hit hard while Whalen hit for the circuit for good measure, Ronsky had three bingles and Reynolds two hits in as many official tries' The "Oilers" collected a total of 15 hits in all, while Bawden whiffed ten and restricted the 'Tiremen' to Tutte's single bingle.

Cementmen Win

Although Corbys forged to the fore with a two run drive in the initial frame at Point Anne, their lead was soon whittled down when the homesters opened the second stanza with Bennett's four-bagger and added another to knot the count. The teams coasted along rather evenly until the seventh when the Cementmen bagged two more to take the lead and added a brace more in the eighth to cinch the piece and humble the Corbys. The second game of this series will be played at Coleman Flats on Monday night when Corbys must win to stay in the picture.

Bennett with a circuit blow and double led the homesters with the willow as Schrieder was touched for 11 safeties. Whitehead and Hutchings also hit when clouds meant business, while McMartin and Miller were the only players to find Luffman for more than a bingle, each getting a double and single for four of Corbys' eight hits.

Luffman struck out six while he passed but three in a splendid pitching effort. Corbys booted the ball about for nine errors, many of which affected the ultimate scoring.

SEVEN CAR RECORDS BROKEN ON SALT FLATS

Ab Jenkins Forced to Retire Owing to Carbon Monoxide

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 12 (AP)—Ab Jenkins rolled his "Mormon Meteor 3rd" off this white salt speedway for the last time in 1939 today, after hanging up seven new automobile endurance records before the twin dangers of monoxide gas and a rutter course forced him to halt his projected 24-hour run at 16 hours, 33 minutes.

The dash for further speed marks ended at 10:08 p.m. (1 a.m. E.D.T.) last night after Jenkins and his relief driver, Rex Mays of Los Angeles, both became groggy from monoxide fumes. The fumes first swirled into the cockpit of the Utah speed seeker's racer at 6:55 p.m. when a hood fastening loosened to allow the gas to enter from a leak in the left exhaust manifold.

In the lap immediately preceding the 2,712th mile, Jenkins lost control of his machine in salt chewed in ruts by the long pounding, smashed a row of course boundary stakes and two of the racer's four headlamps.

Jenkins said he had, "got what I wanted" and was through for 1939. "After all, we just wanted those records of Eyston's." (Four endurance marks formerly held by Captain G. E. T. Eyston of England).

Jenkins now holds all records from 50 kilometres to 48 hours. The seven he now has boosted to new levels are: 12 hours, from 163.68 (Eyston) to 169.99; 2,000 miles, 163.75 (Eyston) to 168.94; 2,000 kilometres, 163.60 (Eyston) to 1669.9; 3,000 kilometres 163.49 (Eyston) to 168.7; six hours, 168.15 to 170.85; 1,000 miles, 168.11 to 170.767; 4,000 kilometres, 159.13 to 165.7.

OLYMPIC POSTS SOUGHT BY GIRLS AT HAMILTON

300 Canadian Women Athletes Vie for Covetted Trip

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP)—Old rivalries were resumed, with the prospect of an olympic trip to Finland in the offing as 110 Canadian women stars of the track and field here today in the Dominion championships. Selection of the team to represent Canada in the 1940 games will depend largely on performance made today.

Nearly 300 entries were made by the contestants in the 27 competitions, divided into senior, intermediate and junior classes. Every province except Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick was represented.

Keen competition between short-distance runners were expected in the 100 and 220 metre events. In the 100 Barbara Howard of Vancouver encounters the girl who beat her in the last British Empire games, Toronto's senior springing titlist, Jeanette Dolson. In the same race is Helen Morrison of Toronto who holds a victory over Miss Dolson in the recent Ontario championships.

Cornwall Moves To First Division

It hardly came as a surprise today to see Cornwall Bisons in a first-division berth in the Canadian-American Baseball League, the Bisons have been rapping on the door so long. It took two looks, though, to be convinced that the team replacing them in fifth was Ogdensburg Colts.

The Colts have rode along in third place practically all season with Rome Colonels trailing them in fourth. Then when Cornwall put on a winning spurt that overhauled the Colonels, their fight for fourth berth obscured the fact that both were creeping in closer to Ogdensburg.

It came to light last night, though, when Colts were defeated 8-1 by the Netherlands of Oswego. Meanwhile Rome and Cornwall both won at home, Colonels downing Gloversville, 8-2, and Bisons beating Ottawa Senators, 6-5, and the results sent both ahead of Ogdensburg into a tie for third berth.

Yesterday's Stars

Walter Tigbe, Phillies: Pitched two-hit game to beat Giants.

Buck Newsom, Tigers: Struck out 11 and batted in winning run for 4-3 triumph over Browns.

Bill Lee, Cubs: Earned his 14th victory of season with clever six-hit job against Pirates.

Joe DiMaggio, Yankees: His double and two singles led 13-hit assault against Athletics.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken I. Colling

When Umpire Josh Maracle of Point Anne, sustained a fractured leg while officiating at a City League softball game recently, the league moguls were keen and keyed towards holding a benefit game for Umps. Maracle, which we heartily endorsed at the time. It must be remembered Maracle was umpiring league playoffs for less than 'eight-bits' when the accident occurred. He had X-rays and medical expenses to meet besides losing considerable time from his gainful employment, but oddly enough there seems to be a complete silence in and around the proposed benefit game today. It may be the softball moguls have forgotten the incident in the heat of the recent O.A.S.A. playdowns, but surely such a worthy cause will not be completely abandoned and disregarded in the future.

Originally it was decided to play an all-star game, with all benefits going to help Umpire Maracle defray the expenses of his unfortunate accident. The idea was to have the winner of the local O.A.S.A. playdowns, which happened to be Shell-Aajmaa, clash with an all-star team, selected from the other four clubs composing the loop, which is a splendid idea, as all that would be necessary would be to bolster the Corbys squad slightly and the fans would see a real grudge game. However, we believe we have a plan that should add more color and interest to such a game. The idea was tried out with success at the Polo Grounds in the days of the late John J. McGraw. The all-stars versus Shell picture is splendid, but in addition we'd suggest that the team managers, who have criticized the umpires all season, be given the posts as the officials of this game, while the umpires, who say they receive no recognition of their efforts all season, be allotted the work of reporting the game in the newspapers, while the sports scribes, who have been advising the team managers all season how to manage and run their teams, be given the job of putting their managerial theories into practical use by master-minding the game as team managers.

There is just a possibility that the regional 225 c.c. power boat championship for 1939 may be held at Picton on Labour Day. We understand the Prince Edward County Yacht Club has been approached by the A.P.B.A. relative to sponsoring this final speed boat event of the year, at which time the cream of North American drivers will compete for the valuable British American trophy. This regional event is annually held and at which all points won during sanctioned A.P.B.A. regattas are included along with the day's points. It is a signal honor to be offered this season's terminating power boat event for district No 13. We understand only 225 class boats compete and in six heats, with sea fleas racing for titles as fillers. The Picton club is considering the advisibility of sponsoring this outstanding event.

With the right to the third place play-off berth in the Bay of Quinte League still undetermined, President Lorne McDougall called a league meeting tonight. The regular playing schedule concluded with Belleville playing the Flyers a 1-1 draw at the Airport Thursday night and today the league standing reads as follows:

	W.	L.	P.	Pts.
Picton	13	3	1	26
Napanee	11	6	1	23
Belleville	5	11	1	11
R.C.A.F.	2	11	3	7

Besides having a tie game with every club in the loop to be replayed if they affect the standing of the league, the Flyers have postponed games with both Belleville and Picton. However, the Airmen agreed to play their postponed game with the locals at the Fair Grounds on Tuesday next when the 'Orfuns' can practically settle the entire issue with a victory. All the locals have to do to assure themselves of some kind of a play-off is to 'win on Tuesday'.

"Bub" Gaulin's Point Anne "Cementmen" surprised Chuck Barnett's Corby's A.C. with a 9 to 5 win at Ox Point last night in the opening City Softball play-offs, while the Shell-Aajmaa had little trouble beating Dracup Tires 17 to 0 with Johnny Bawden pitching one-hit ball. Incidentally Tuttle's single in the second robbed Bawden of a no run no hit game. Down at Point Anne the homesters hit Eddie Schrieder for eleven safeties, while Corby's were booting the spheroid around for nine errors, only five less than Dracups committed at the Flats. "Ding" Luffman scattered eight hits very well and humbled the Barriage-Barnett outfit in the initial game of the city semi-finals. Corby's and Point Anne meet at the Flats on Monday in a game that should prove most attractive to the lovers of softball. Incidentally Harry Rollins of the O.A.S.A. executive tells us that Trenton has withdrawn from the O.A.S.A. intermediate "A" playdowns, leaving the "Oilers" idle for some time. Mr. Rollins is attending an O.A.S.A. executive meeting today at which time he hopes to enter the Corby's into the senior "B" playdowns of the O.A.S.A.

Sport Spice—Even if the Giants lost yesterday, they retained a marginal lead over the Pirates, who dropped one to the Cubs .... Like the "proverbial Finnegan," the Yankees lose and win alternately to remain tops in the American loop; they won from the Athletics yesterday....The Cincinnati Reds branched out recently and purchased the Birmingham, Ala., Barons as a farm project....Just why do the Dracup "tiremen" wish to prolong the City Softball play-offs?.. The "Cementmen" have a good reason, however....Only one official league umpire was used in the two softball games last evening if that means anything.....Art Scarlett, former Belleville ballster, batted .500 as his Hollinger teammates lost to McIntyre yesterday.....And so to try and lure one of those much-talked off 'muskies.'

Although it is only a fond memory today, it was just 20 years ago yesterday that the old Belleville Grand Trunks beat Peterboro 5 to 4 in 10 innings, in the first C.O.B.L. play-off game of 1919. That should bring back memories to the Mills boys, Wcky Ross et al. Belleville went on to win the senior O.B.A. title that year. How time flies.

It is the business of the schools to train citizens to sit in their living rooms and evaluate the day's news and to arm them with facts against barrages of propaganda addressed to this country.—Walter F. Downey, state commissioner of education in Massachusetts.

Canadian Institute Meets at Lake Couchiching, Studies 'Crisis of Democracy'

Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 12—(CP)—Students of public affairs from many parts of Canada and the United States converged today on this lake resort, 80 miles north of Toronto, for the eighth annual session of the Canadian Institute of Economics and Politics.

In a summer camp on a wooded stretch of lakeshore, leaders in politics, industry and the classroom will meet Monday with a cross-section of the general public for a two-week review of current problems. The theme of this year's discussions is "the crisis of democracy."

Under the chairmanship of Dr. Malcolm Wallace, Principal of University College, Toronto, the gathering will hear daily addresses from experts in their fields and each talk will be followed by discussion in open forum.

R. E. G. Davis, Secretary of the Institute, said registrations for camp accommodation are running ahead of last year and organizers look for an attendance of more than 100 persons. Delegations are coming from Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and London, and there will be a sprinkling of pilgrims from other parts of the continent.

MOON ON THE WATER
by Ruby M. Ayres

There was a tragic silence before Gavin said very quietly, "And now will you answer me, one question? Will you tell me why you went to London this morning?" And then as she did not speak, he went on, "You see, I happen to know that you went to meet Hallard—that you were with him in London. My aunt saw you with him at Paddington—she was on the six-forty which I met, expecting to see you—and she told me she had seen you in Paddington."

Jane laughed. "You're not pretending to be jealous?" she asked scornfully.

Gavin answered hotly. "No, I'm not, but as you seem to distrust me and to—to believe everything people choose to tell you, it is only fair that I demand an explanation as to why you run off to London alone—why you arrange to meet a man whom I dislike exceedingly, and—"

"Do you?" Jane asked. "I think he's one of the nicest men I have ever met. He has been very kind to me, anyway," she added with unconscious pathos.

Gavin paced away from her and came back. "And you can see no harm in meeting him—behind your sister's back?" he asked.

She looked at him quietly. "Not in the least why should I? When Dulcie has met you—a dozen times—behind my back; not that I care—"

"You do care," Gavin said.

Jane pushed back the unruly hair from her forehead, she was beginning to feel utterly exhausted. She forced herself to speak quietly.

"There's no more to be said, Gavin. You are free to do as you like, and so am I—and we're not children that we need stand here arguing about a thing which cannot be altered. And—I'm very tired. Please let me go."

But Gavin stood his ground. "I can explain about last night if you will listen. The whole thing has been grossly exaggerated, and as far as I am concerned, it was pure chance that your sister and I—"

Jane felt as if something snapped in her brain, and her eyes blazed as she suddenly turned on him.

"I don't want to hear any more!" she cried. "You've hurt me enough and I've finished with you, do you hear? I've finished with you!" and she rushed past him and out of the room.

Pamela was in the hall; she had been hovering restlessly about, wondering what was wrong, and whether she ought to interfere.

"Jane!" Pamela said pleadingly, but Jane passed her without a word and disappeared upstairs, and after a moment Pamela walked into the drawing room where Gavin was standing staring down into the fire.

She looked at him half timidly. "Is anything the matter?" she asked, and then, as he did not answer, "Oh Gavin, why must you and Jane quarrel so often?"

He raised his head to look at her. "She's thrown me over," he said.

Pamela stared at him. "She's thrown—you over?" she echoed incredulously. "But—oh, I can't believe it—she would never throw you over."

He squared his shoulders. "Well, she has," he said.

There was a beaten look about him, a sort of bewilderment, as if he were only then beginning to realize what had really happened.

"Well," Pamela said again. It was all beyond her; she lived such an uneventful life herself—never quarrelling with Sidney, so that she was quite incapable of understanding the stormy atmosphere which had always surrounded Jane's engagement, but presently she said defensively, "You'll never find any one as good as Jane; she's one in a thousand, although she's my sister and—and not good-looking or anything—" Her voice trailed helplessly away.

"Good-looking!" Gavin said blankly. "What do looks matter?"

"A great deal to most men," Pamela answered shrewdly, and she wondered why she suddenly felt sorry for him. "Perhaps she doesn't really mean it," she said after a moment. "I expect she's just angry about something and doesn't really mean it. Why don't you come back later on and see her again? I would if I were you," her voice was very kind.

Gavin pulled himself together, squaring his shoulders.

"No, thank you all the same, but I will not come back," he said, and presently Pamela was alone.

Overhead she could hear Jane moving about in her bedroom, and with a sigh she went upstairs and knocked at the door.

INSTALMENT 25.

"Jane—let me in," Pamela said, after knocking.

"The door isn't locked," Jane answered.

Pamela turned the handle and entered. Jane's bed was strewn with her clothes, and an open suitcase stood on the chair.

"I'm going away," she said briefly.

Pamela gasped and leaned against the bed rail. "Where are you going?" And it suddenly struck her that Jane had no friends—that there was nobody to whom she could go.

"I'm going to the West of England," Jane said without looking up. "I'll send my address as soon as I've decided where I shall stay. I want a change—I haven't been away for ages." She raised her eyes at last. "Don't scold me," she said. "I'm quite sane, and will come back."

Pamela said blankly, "But won't it be frightfully dull—alone?"

"I'm used to being alone," Jane answered. She folded a skirt into the suitcase. "I've broken my engagement," she said. "I suppose Gavin told you?"

"Yes—of course; it's all Dulcie," Pamela said.

Jane seemed to consider the point before she answered carefully, "No, I can't honestly say that it is; we are just—unsuited, that's all, and I shall be happier free."

"Well," Pamela said; she always said "well" when matters were beyond her. "You know best," she added.

Jane went on with her packing. "Perhaps you'll drive me to the station," she said presently. "Oh, yes, I know it's late, but there's a night train from Paddington, and I like traveling at night. It saves so much time, and it's nice to arrive somewhere new early in the morning—it gives you the whole day," she went on, talking mechanically, and Pamela listened till at last she could bear it no longer. She crossed the room and put her arms around Jane's unresponsive shoulders.

"Promise me you'll write and tell me where you are—promise me you don't just mean to go away without telling any one where you will be," and then with real emotion in her matter-of-fact voice, "Oh, Jane, can't you forgive him for whatever it is he's done? I know you won't be happy without him. Won't you forgive him if he says he's sorry?"

Jane stood very still, her arms dangling limply at her sides. "Forgive him?" she echoed. "What for? For not loving me, do you mean?" And then she laughed. "Don't worry about me," she said. "I shall be all right." She gently freed herself from her sister's arms. "And, of course, I'll write—tomorrow—or as soon as I've decided where to stay. Oh, Pamela, please don't cry," she added wearily, for Pamela's tears were falling.

Jane walked away from her, jerked back the drawn curtains with a feeling of suffocation, and saw a tiny crescent moon.

The moon on the water! She dropped the curtain and turned away. "Don't cry—please," she said again stiffly, and felt that her own heart had broken.

x x x

It was a very weary Jane who left Paddington on the midnight train for the West of England. Pamela's tears and reproaches had been the last straw, and Jane felt that there was nothing left to wish for in the whole world but the peace of finding herself alone. Pamela had said some very bitter things about Gavin which Jane had listened to in silence; she had called him a fortune-hunter and had declared in her blunt way that all he had ever wanted was her sister's money.

"He never meant to marry you," she asserted. "And I hope if it isn't too late you'll take good care he doesn't get a shilling of the money. If he'd been any good Dr. Bingham would have helped him; after all blood is thicker than water, and Dr. Bingham has no family of his own."

But Pamela had wept again at the station as she bade Jane goodbye. "I feel as if I am in some way to blame," she sobbed. "I think perhaps I might have been kinder to you—more understanding. Don't go, Jane—there's a home for you with Sidney and me when we're married. I don't believe you mean to come back—I believe you mean to do something dreadful."

Jane had laughed then. "What sort of thing?" she asked with forced cheerfulness. "Fling myself over the cliff or into the sea? Don't be silly, dear—I'm not so stupid as that—I mean to have lots of fun yet before I die."

Her own brave words came back to her once she was alone, but when she tried to look ahead into the future and to decide what she would do with her life, it seemed like staring at a blank wall.

The guard had blown his whistle and doors were being hurriedly slammed, when a porter threw a suitcase into Jane's compartment.

"Here you are, mum," she heard him say and a large-sized elderly woman, aided by a friendly push of his hand, flung herself into the opposite seat.

Jane stifled a sigh, for the first stop was Exeter and this new arrival meant good-bye to her longed-for solitude.

The woman looked across at her with a smile. "Just in the nick of time," she said breathlessly, and following Jane's example she took off her hat, revealing a head of closely-cropped grey hair. "I'm nearly always late for things," she exclaimed. "But I generally manage to get there all the same."

There was something so friendly and disarming in her manner that it was difficult not to respond, so Jane asked politely how far she was going.

"All the way," the woman told her cheerfully but rather vaguely. "I've been in London for the past three months, and this morning I suddenly thought to myself, 'I'm sick of London—I'm off,' so I packed a suitcase and here I am. That's how I always do things—just make up my mind on the spur of the moment. I've travelled half over the world without making a single plan beforehand."

"How nice," Jane said.

The woman nodded. "Yes, it's not a bad way to spend your life," she agreed. "I haven't a relation in the world—luckily for me, perhaps—and I've plenty of money——" She broke off to say in a kindly way, "You look very tired."

Jane bit her lip to hide its trembling. "I am—a little," she admitted. "I've not been very well." (Not very happy, I ought to have said, she thought ruefully.) "And so I'm going for a holiday."

"Nothing like a change when you're tired," the woman said. "Get right away from everything and give the doctors a miss, that's my advice." She dived into a big pocket of her coat and brought out some cigarettes. "Have one?" she asked.

"Thank you."

They smoked in silence for a moment till the woman said, "As we've got to travel together for the rest of the night we might as well know each other's name—mine's Jessica Shaw."

"Mine is Jane Brookes," Jane said.

"Not married?" Miss Shaw asked.

"No."

"Nor me—not that I don't believe in marriage—for some people—but of course, it's a toss-up."

"Yes," Jane agreed, but she did not want to talk about marriage, so to change the subject she asked, "What part of the West are you going to?"

Miss Shaw shrugged her shoulders. "I haven't decided—I'm getting out at a place called Par—we get there in the early morning, and then I shall see." Her eyes twinkled. "Do you think it sounds very mad?" she asked.

"It's what I'm doing myself," Jane admitted.

"And it's the right way to travel, too," Miss Shaw said calmly. "I hate to have everything cut and dried—potluck in my idea of happiness—never to know what's round the corner."

"There may be nothing 'round the corner'," Jane said impulsively, and then would have given a great deal to recall the words.

"I thought that was how you felt," the old woman said sympathetically. "I've been through it myself—many years ago now, but I haven't forgotten." She leaned over and patted Jane's hand. "The only consolation is that nothing lasts forever," she added. "One day you'll wake up and find you don't care any more and then you'll take a fresh lease of life and begin to enjoy things. How old are you?"

Jane told her, and she said, "Humph! Well, I'm sixty, old enough to know what I'm talking about, and old enough to be able to smile at the things which seemed such a tragedy when I was your age." She lit a fresh cigarette. "And you can take my word for it, my dear, that there isn't a man in the world—never has been and never will be—who is worth breaking your heart about."

Jane flushed. "I never said I was breaking my heart about a man," she said defensively.

The Game Warden's Report

A public document always worth reading is the report of the Game Warden of Uganda. Captain C. R. S. Pitman, the incumbent of that interesting — and exacting — office does not disappoint. To him big game hunting is a routine, not a holiday excursion; his obligation is to conserve the balance of nature, protect the population. In 1937 his men and licensed hunters killed 2,000 elephants; last year it was not necessary to kill so many, as elephants are doing less damage to cultivators' holdings, and only 1,500 were condemned to slaughter. This toll was not taken without adventure.

One guard having killed two elephants and wounded another found himself helpless because of his rifle. The wounded animal trumpeted; the herd gathered; the guard climbed a tree, where, with sticks broken from his refuge, he tried to poke the empty shell from the barrel of his gun while the herd tried to get at him. He survived, but came out of the encounter a nervous wreck.

Each of two licensed hunters — not guards — reported that he killed two elephants with one bullet. In each case a 375 bullet passed through the elephant at which the hunter aimed and entered another elephant. A native chief reported that an elephant picked up a burning log, threw it at him and then placed it on the chief's hut, which was burned to the ground. "This," said the chief, who is a humorist, a philosopher, or both, "tends to show that elephants have as much intelligence as Europeans."

In Toro a native chief reported that he had killed a number of "English pigs". The designation is understandable when it is added that some years ago a planter in the district raised pigs, some of which escaped, joined the wild pigs and interbred with them. Buffalo have a bad name as mankillers, but the warden says their victims are usually the aggressors. Lions he dismisses curtly: "maneaters were troublesome in some parts."

On the Kagera river, near Nsongezi, in September two hippopotamuses who decided to fight it out on the king's highway just before midnight were interrupted by the motor-driven mail van. One of them immediately attacked the intruder and smashed it up pretty thoroughly. Six weeks later at the same hour on the same spot "an aggressive hippopotamus" charged the mail van and almost got under it. The Game Warden "took steps to rid the locality of these dangerous creatures."

Adapting Herodotus — whose association with Africa was more intimate than his association with America, which nevertheless uses his words — the Ugandan postal service may take as its motto: "Neither Snow Nor Rain or Heat Nor Hippopotamuses of Night Stay These Couriers From the Swift Completion of Their Appointed Rounds." To this the hippopopotamuses may answer: "We were here first."—New York Sun.

UNCLE WALT MASON

One of the last of those curious poems in prose form that Walt Mason wrote began with the words "When shades of night are falling I always hit the hay." The shades fell for him at La Jolla, Calif., on Wednesday. He had written thousands of poems for a newspaper audience that grew to more than 200 papers, since the day when William Allen White brought his rhymes to the notice of the nation.

He happened to be born in Ontario, but one thinks of him in connection with the warm philosophy of the western prairies. He was homey and folksy by nature and not for the sake of earning pennies. He had a penetrating mind, but there was no malice in him. His poetry was natural, and even though it was set solid, with no breaks at the ends of the lines, much of it was real poetry. He visited Emporia not long ago. The Gazette was able to report that despite his prosperity he was the same old Uncle Walt. His success tells a good deal about America. We still like kindly, simple things and people.

He kept the old vernacular, as when he said in last Monday's "Rhymes of the Times" that "butterflies are flying above the garden sass." And he asked, "Who would lie a-sleeping till nine or ten o'clock." Now he must sleep the clock around. Or is his genial soul teaching the angels to speak Kansan?—New York Times.

BOLT FROM BLUE

The legendary "bolt from the blue" gave ugly proof of its substance the other day.

Two men were harvesting hay on a farm near London. The owner, George Maaren, was on a wagon loading hay. A friend from the city, Harry Beattie, was walking beside the load guiding the horses.

Beattie describes the tragedy that followed in this way: He heard a sharp report like that of a pistol shot. He then saw a ball of fire about the size of a baseball moving slowly between Maaren and the horses. He felt a slight numbing of his feet, and recalls that he saw other members of the Maaren family running toward them from the house. Both horses, he noticed, fell slowly as if some one were laying them down. The hay caught fire. He looked for Maaren on the top of the load and was told that he was on the ground on the other side of the load. He was dead. One of the horses was also dead.

The doctor who examined the victim gave this description of his injuries: "The bolt of lightning made a hole near the left eye like a large-calibre bullet hole. It passed through his body, blackening it and showing the burns of a flame. It evidently went out thru' the left foot, practically tearing away the heel."

The sky at the time of the tragedy was fairly clear, and there was no rain on the field before or after the stroke.—Hamilton Spectator.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper I was looking out the living room window, saying, G, ma, gosh, pop, it's certainly brite out tonight, you can see every star in site.

I must have a look, I love stars, I wish I knew more of their names, ma said.

And she came over and looked, saying to pop, My Willyum, just to think, all those infinite stars and yet all that infinite distance between every 2 of them, it seems more than the conscious mind can grasp.

In the mind of a modern scientist the entire planetary system is as solid as a billiard ball, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum how can you make such a silly remark about the boundless heavens?

It's true, pop said. The scientist regards the planetary system just as he would the smallest atom of matter, which in turn is full of electrons whirling around like man in that tiny particle or space wich is as vast as the heavens compared to the size of the wildly jittering electrons, wich in turn are filled with loons, or something, all dashing around in their own comparatively limitless space, he said, and ma said, My goodness such a thought, it's enough to take the average breath away, I dont see how any mortal brain can really understand it, it reminds me of the terrible condition or the cellar, Willyum, everything at sixes and 7's flying about every wich way, why dont you make use of a free Sattiday afternoon to create a little order down there, Willyum?

I'd be glad to, only then it wouldn't be free, pop said. Speak to Mr. Seevers, he said.

Being our handy man.

Egg Prices Continue to Drop

Toronto, Aug. 12 — As interest in graded eggs continued to fade yesterday on the Toronto open produce market, top grades in this section took another downward swing in price, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Cheese also eased slightly, while butter prices remained unchanged.

Eggs closed the week on an easy note. During the week the market developed a tendency to weaken when demand began to slacken. Receipts, in fair volume, have been slightly in excess of requirements; consequently, top grades have experienced price losses in all sections of trading. Trading was quiet yesterday as the market continued to ease. Supplies were too heavy for the demand, and graded receipts became increasingly difficult to clear. A-large eggs in this section declined to 25c, and A medium to 24c. Ungraded prices were unchanged.

The butter market was steady but inactive. Although receipts were light, demand was decidedly limited, with buyers showing very little interest in offerings. Holders of Western butter were asking 22¼ cents a pound, but no sales were reported at this price. A few lots were said to have been sold at 22c.

In a review of the dairy production situation, the bureau anticipates a decline in milk production during August as compared with August of last year. It is pointed out that, while recent rains in the Eastern Provinces have made production prospects for August more encouraging, milking cows are smaller in number this year.

Potatoes Ease in Montreal

Montreal, Aug. 12 — Potatoes dropped about 5 cents on open produce markets here yesterday, while butter again firmed a fraction, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Cheese and eggs ruled steady.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-22¾c a pound and solids for 22-22½c. Western butter delivered in Montreal was un quoted. Quebec, No. 1 pasteurized, in wholesale jobbing lots, made 21⅝ cents. Receipts: 10 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11¼ cents. Quebec white and colored were both quoted at 10½ cents. Receipts 3081 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27 cents a dozen for A-large, 26-26½c for A-medium, 19-20c for B-large, 14½-15 for C. Receipts: 366 cases.

Premiums on Hogs Serve Purpose

The list of premiums that accompany these articles weekly represent actual value. The farmers who produce the good hogs make a very definite contribution to the export bacon industry.

There is a tendency to look at the premium on a good lot of hogs or the lack of premium on a poor lot of hogs as an end in itself. In reality any form of grading is only a means to an end and that end is the production of a product that meets with the requirements of the market for which it is produced.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 12 (CP) — Mining shares perked up moderately in the closing session of the week on the Toronto exchange and other groups showed practically no change in the average. Secondary golds accounted chiefly for a light advance in the gold share index and in the base metal group, International Nickel, with a half-point gain, led the modest advance. More than 100,000 shares changed hands in the two-hour session.

O'Brien came to life with a 15-cent gain to close at 2.15 and gains of 2 to 5 cents were netted by Buffalo-Ankerite, Siscoe, Uchi, Preston, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Francoeur. Dome added a minor fraction and other senior golds held strong.

Along with Nickel, Smelters and Falconbridge were gainers in the base metal group. Noranda held steady at 82 and Sherritt at $1.

The price tone was narrowly improved for the food and senior oil groups and other industrials were unchanged to slightly lower. Some of the banks were off a point. Canada Packers declined 3 to 85 and a broken lot of building products traded at 18 for a loss of ⅜. Winnipeg Electric B recorded an advance of 5 points to 130.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Aug. 12.—(AP) — The stock market had plenty of rallying fuel today, but buying ignition failed to catch until the final part of the brief session when selected issues were given a quiet push for gains of fractions to a point or so. The list pointed selectively upward at the start, then backed away.

Attendance in boardrooms was believed around the smallest of the year to date. Transfers for the two hours approximated 260,000 shares.

Propping sentiment were brightening prospects for the automobile makers, broadening merchandising demand and forecasts of a further upturn in electrical good sales.

Supported at the finish were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Loft, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, Brooklyn Union, Du Pont, Pennsylvania, Continental Can. Anaconda, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Phelps Dodge, Goodyear, Union Carbide, Santa Fe, Great Northern and Sears Roebuck.

Fractions ahead among Canadian shares were Lake Shore, C.P.R. and International Nickel. Dominion 4s in the bond section were neglected.

SHANNONVILLE EVENS SERIES BY SPARKLING WIN

Foxboro, August 12 (Special) — Receiving every break in the game and taking full advantage of a host of errors on the part of the Cannifton infielders, the Shannonville "Hawks" forced the S. H. League playoff series to the full limit of five games last night, when on their home diamond they pounded out an even dozen safeties to wallop the Cannifton lads 11-4. Down one game in the series and facing certain elimination in defeat, the homesters tallied once in each of the first three innings to stay even with the visitors, and then in the fourth, salted the game away with a big six run scoring splurge to tie the series at two games each and force the fifth and deciding tussle for Monday evening at Cannifton.

With the series standing at two games to one in their favour, however, the Cannifton management could afford to gamble and this is just what they did as they sent Loucks to the mound in an effort to subdue the "Hawks" in the fourth game, thus reserving their ace hurler, Lorne Jarrell, for a possible fifth battle. Shannonville were forced to use their old reliable, Juby, on the mound and in turning the Cannifton lads back with only three hits to their credit, proved unquestionably, that he will be the "Hawks" mainstay in the deciding battle on Monday. Not a single earned run was scored off Juby last night as every one of the Cannifton team's tallies came after errors had put the runners in scoring position. Collins, with a double and a single to his credit, and Empson, with a triple, were the only two batters to hit safely for Cannifton as Juby really bore down to strike out twelve and give only two free passes. Loucks on the other hand was nicked for twelve safeties, including a triple by Juby and doubles by Maracle and Hill, while he whiffed only one and never issued a single pass.

Seven glaring errors on the part of the Cannifton fielders aided the Shannonville cause to a great extent, however, and with these miscues taken out it would have been a real ball game. Loucks came in for a bad time of it in the fourth inning when after four straight singles had been registered off his deliveries, the Cannifton infield suddenly went berserk to commit four costly errors and before the dust had settled no less than six runs had scampered across the plate. After Barberstock, Reid, and Juby had all singled in succession and with one run in Empson took Snider's roller at short and tossed to first for the out with Reid coming in on the play. Juby never stopped running and rounding third came right on home as Curley tossed wide to the plate on an attempted double play. Everything possible went haywire in that unlucky fourth. The Cannifton lads sqawked loud and long, claiming interference, when Barberstock bumped into Empson when he was trying for Cook's roller but the umpire ruled "no dice." Collins thought he had a runner cold as he came sliding into third and again the umpire ruled "nothing doing." Then to climax everything, one of the Shannonville boys failed to touch second base in trying for a long hit but Umpire Weeks failed to see it that way and again the Cannifton lads lost out.

Reid was by far the most consistent hitter for the winners getting three singles in four tries at the plate with Juby coming a close second as he pounded out a triple and a single. Snider was the only other Shannonville batter to get more than one hit, having two singles to his credit, while Maracle pounded out a double.

HITLER WELCOMES

No Sensational Announcement

One German official, however, said: "You need not expect any sensational announcement. They are just reviewing the general European situation."

An Italian spokesman asserted: "Whatever steps take place, you may be sure that Rome and Berlin will see eye to eye."

(According to Der Angriff, the Berlin newspaper of Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels, the two Foreign Ministers also discussed revision of the treaties of St. Germain and Trianon which gave Austro-Hungarian territory to Yugoslavia, Rumania, Italy and Poland.

(The paper said changes in the treaties "can be considered absolutely certain.")

As the two Foreign Ministers went over the situation, Labor Front leader Robert Ley told journalists he believed the world would have peace if it heeded Hitler. Ley, who is in Nuremberg to organize the annual Nazi convention, said:

"I am convinced that the world will come to rest and that it will be able to build up a lasting peace if it takes to heart the words which Adolf Hitler will address to the world from the Party Day of Peace at Nuremberg."

Talks With Hitler to End Conference

The talks with Hitler are generally believed to mark the end of the official part of the Italian Foreign Minister's visit. Evening will see Von Ribbentrop and Ciano at an open air performance of the Salzburg Music Festival on the town's Cathedral Square.

There will be plenty of opportunity to talk politics privately when Von Ribbentrop takes his guest out wild duck hunting to Lake Fuschl, near Salzburg, on Sunday. Duck hunting is supposedly Von Ribbentrop's hobby and the season has just opened in Salzkammergut.

Surprise at Berlin

Berlin, Aug. 12—(CP Havas) — Diplomatic quarters expressed surprise today over a semi-official disclosure that revision of the St. Germain and Trianon treaties — affecting the present frontiers of Hungary, Yugoslavia and Rumania—was high on the agenda of European problems under discussion by Count Galeazzo Ciano and Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Italian and German Foreign Ministers.

The revelation was made last night in Der Angriff, mouthpiece of Propaganda Minister Goebbels. The newspaper proclaimed, however, that changes in the treaties "can be considered absolutely certain," adding that durable peace in Europe depended upon revision.

The Nazi organ was in advance of the rest of the German press, as well as the newspapers of the Fascist half of the axis. These have indicated that the Salzburg talks would touch on relations with Hungary, Yugoslavia and Japan. The Nazi press, in particular, has reiterated that the key to European peace rests in Danzig.

Step in Balkans

The tone of the Angriff article was seen as pretending that the axis powers might make an important step in the Balkans, which they regard as part of their common "vital space."

The treaty of St. Germain parcelled out sections of the Austrian half of the old dual monarchy to Czecho-Slovakia, Italy, Poland and Rumania. Trianon did the same for the Hungarian part of the shattered Hapsburg empire, to the profit of the Czecho-Slovaks, the Rumanians, the Austrians and the Yugoslavs.

Austria has been swallowed up by the Reich. Czecho-Slovakia has disappeared as well, sliced into small pieces for Poland and Hungary, with the Sudetenland absorbed in the Reich, Slovakia in independent, Nazi-dominated, state, and Bohemia-Moravia transformed into a protectorate under German military control.

German Plane Over French Base

Lorient, France, Aug. 12 (AP)—French naval officers reported officially today that a large plane displaying German Swastikas circled low last night over the restricted area of the Port of Lorient, naval base on the Bay of Biscay.

FIRE DESTROYS LARGE ACREAGE OF HAY AND BUSH

Burning Cigarette Causes Loss of Large Hay Crop in Greenbush

Picton, Aug. 12—Twenty acres of hay and bush were burned over in Greenbush late yesterday afternoon from a fire believed to have been started by a cigarette thrown from a passing car. The fire burned over a 15-acre field of hay owned by Ralph Dodds of Cherry Valley, and five acres of land and bush owned by John Hopkinson on the adjoining farm. There was a long fence of cedar roots and the fire spread along them rapidly. A large crowd of fire fighters used wet bags and branches of trees to get the flames under control, this taking three hours. A watch was kept all last night as the stumps burned furiously for hours.

A change in the wind aided the fighters to prevent the fire from spreading into the large woods on the Dodds' farm and into another owned by Howard Reid, reeve of South Marysburgh township.

Cobourg Driver Charged Following Motor Fatality

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 12 (CP)—Charged with careless driving following a motor fatality, Leo Greeney, of Port Hope, appeared in police court today and was remanded for a week. He was allowed out on $3,000 bail.

According to Provincial Constable McClure of Peterborough, Greeney was the driver of a car which struck and killed 64-year-old Byron Woods of Fraserville near Peterborough last night.

Police said that oWods was walking along the left side of the highway with another man, Woods being on the side next to the highway. Greeney was passing another car at the time. Woods died of a broken neck.

Chinese Picket Victoria Wharf

Victoria, Aug. 12—(CP)—Chinese arranged last night for a picket line at a Victoria wharf, determined to "stop at all costs" the loading of a scow with scrap iron consigned to Seattle.

The Chinese have printed large posters urging support for an embargo on war materials to Japan.

Yesterday 150 Chinese gathered at the wharf and attempted to stop trucks loaded with metal from entering the dock. On the promise of a police official that no more loading would be done they dispersed. All availabe men in Chinatown plan to gather at the wharf to decide what action will be taken.

FATHER RESCUES FOUR CHILDREN AS HOUSE BURNS

Oshawa, Aug. 12 (CP)—Jack Russell and his four children were forced to escape through a second storey window early today when their home was destroyed by fire.

Russell was overcome by smoke and escaped only with assistance of Don Jones, who entered the building and helped him to safety. Russell's sons are Jack, seven, Bert, eight, Jimmy, five, and Britton, three.

Russell said he noticed smoke early in the morning and went downstairs to investigate. The smoke was heavier than he thought Russell said, and only the fact his children were upstairs sent him back.

Russell said he roused the children, shouted out the window to neighbours and lowered the children to a verandah roof by bedsheets. From there they were lowered to the ground.

Mrs. Russell went into confinement at Oshawa Hospital yesterday, missing the harrowing experience by only a few hours.

Public in October

The report, expected to be made public in October, possilby the 12th, was one of the many matters discussed by the Mayor, and though he left the impression that he knew much more about what could be expected from the report, he parried all questions. Instead, he jocularly talked of Fascism and loud clothes. But of these he spoke only for the benefit of those present.

He became more serious as he predicted the findings of the Commission. As head of a city of 900,000 persons with a funded debt of $270,000,000 94,000 persons on relief, and a bank overdraft of $35,000,000, Mayor Houde is well acquainted with the problem of debt and relief—the latter at an average cost of $5,000,000 annually to the city.

He admits he lost at least one election because of the two per cent sales tax on all purchases, which brings the city about $4,000,000 per year; brings far greater revenue than does the civic income tax which brings only about 1,500,000 per year. This money helps keep the city running. Yet Mr. Houde believes it cost him an election victory. That was before he was elected to his present two-year term.

In the face of it all, a smile still marks the heavy face of the former orphan boy who became a bank manager at the age of 26, a member of the legislature at 33 and mayor of Montreal at 38. He smiles when reporters ask questions that he doesn't care to answer.

SOMETHING WILL HAPPEN

He was wary when reporters pressed him to reveal what news he had uncovered while in Ottawa two days ago. But he would only say he thought the Dominion and Provincial governments would prove yet to be "the Good Samaritan" to the City of Montreal. Too, he thought Montreal would emerge in good shape from its heavy indebtedness.

"But when will all this happen?" he was asked.

"Very soon, very soon."

Reporters smiled and looked dubious.

"You smile," he said. "But wait, Wait until October. Something will happen that will help Montreal and all other municipalities and the provinces. I believe what I have told you about the Commission report will prove true."

REPORT STATES

Meanwhile, indications strengthened that Japan's civilian leaders, especially Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, were taking a firmer stand with Germany and Italy.

The independent newspaper Asahi, usually well informed, said the Premier was opposing any change in the policy respecting European commitments approved by the cabinet June 5 and that he was gaining important support.

(Reliable reports reaching Shanghai from Tokyo this week said a bitter internal struggle which might cause the cabinet's fall was in progress in Japan over the question of an alliance with the axis powers.)

Rejecting her plea, Magistrate Horn pointed out in a letter ordering her to appear in court August 18, that "diplomatic immunity" did not preclude observance of city health laws.

JEALOUS ADMIRER SHOOTS DIVORCEE THEN KILLS SELF

N. Y. Socialite Also Wounds Policemen Before Sending 4 Bullets Into Own Heart

DIES INSTANTLY

Smithtown Branch, N.Y., Aug. 12 (AP)—A socially prominent divorcee was shot and critically wounded after a house party on the fashionable Long Island north shore today by a man described by police as "a jealous admirer."

The assailant fired three shots at Mrs. Elizabeth Greve Caldwell Carolyn of Delafield Farm, Noroton, Conn.; wounded a State Trooper who tried to save her, then turned the gun on himself and sent four bullets into his heart. He died almost instantly.

Police identified him as Lawrence Sprague, 30, son of Dr. Shirley Sprague, New York City physician.

The shooting occurred in the pretentious summer home of Mrs. Madeleine Waterman Higgins, 31, daughter-in-law of the late Charles Higgins of New York, head of the Higgins Ink Company. Mrs. Higgins told police she had been separated from her husband, Tracy Higgins, since June.

Mrs. Carolyn, who uses her maiden name of Greve, is the daughter of William Greve, wealthy former president of the Prudence Bond Company of Brooklyn in which he insured his life for $1,000,000. Greve was in Bermuda when the shooting occurred and made plans to fly here at once. His daughter was taken to Southside Hospital, Bayshore.

REPORT TURKISH LOAN IS WHITTLED DOWN

London, Aug. 12 (CP)—Negotiations entered the active stage today for a loan to Turkey by Great Britain, with the total sum reportedly whittled down in preliminary talks from £35,000,000 ($163,000,000) to about £15,000,000.

Arrangements were made possible yesterday when Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent foreign office under secretary, gave Ambassador Twfik Rustu Aras a formal reply to proposals made by the Turkish government in July.

According to diplomatic circles, the sum asked by the Turkish government was considered too high by the British treasury. A £16,000,000 credit already granted to Turkey has not yet been exhausted.

44 Spikes Removed from Ties — Part of Luxury Train Passes Over on Its Momentum but Baggage Car Out of Control Drags Most of Other Cars from Tracks — Difficult Rescue Work

Reno, Nev., Aug. 14—(AP)— The carefully plotted wrecking of a $2,000,000 streamlined train left at least 20 persons dead and more than 114, including two Canadians, injured today, while police sought a man "with both ears off" for questioning about the tragedy.

The two Canadians, Mrs. Reginald Grubb of Montreal and L. A. Brown of Toronto, suffered painful hurts when the sleek train plunged from the track and crashed into a bridge. There were no Canadians among the dead.

Southern Pacific Railway officials said evidence indicated the wreck of their crack west-bound "City of San Francisco" in the desert wastes of central Nevada Saturday night was deliberately planned. A coroner's jury summoned to the scene yesterday found the disaster was caused by "a misplaced rail, misplaced by a person or person unknown."

44 Spikes Removed

Forty-four spikes had been removed from the outside rail of a curve near the approach to a 60-foot bridge over the shallow Humboldt River, where all but four of the 17 cars in the yellow-tan flier hurtled off the tracks. An entire 30-foot length of rail had

Pressure and weather! The varying of atmospheric pressure is accompanied by weather changes, sometimes very decided; and yet no pressure instrument can be devised to indicate those coming changes, and this despite the fact that air pressure is easily measured to a very fine degree. This fact becomes very obvious when upon examining a weather map one finds all kinds of weather on the same isobar (a lone along which the pressure is constant.) Following any one isobar of great length on a weather map, preferably over the ocean, one finds the greatest variation of wind,

POLICEMEN'S SHOES AVERAGE NO. "TENS"

Rochester, Minn., Aug. 14 (AP)—Somebody brought up the question of why policemen have big feet so some others started a survey. They found out the policemen's feet were biggest, all right, but they still don't know why. The policeman's average shoe was a size 10 and although the mailmen walked as much, their feet averaged a nine.

MARJORIE MOYSE CRITICALLY ILL

Wounded Girl Whose Home Was Near Grafton, Takes Decided Turn for Worse

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 14—(CP)—Hospital authorities said today Miss Marjorie Moyse, 23-year-old girl critically wounded in a shooting affray at her farm home near Grafton two weeks ago, took a "decided change for the worse over the week-end."

Physicians said her condition is critical and she is practically unconscious. Her step-father, Thomas Prestridge, died of a bullet wound the same day, and Mrs. Prestridge, her mother, was also found dead on the farm. Efforts still are being made to determine cause of Mrs. Prestridge's death.

Shoemaker and 3 Sons Move Into Orangeville Town Hall to Live

Orangeville, Ont., Aug. 14—(CP)—Stanley Wild, unemployed shoemaker, moved into the town hall Saturday with his three sons when, after they were ousted from their home, the town council gave them permission to use a room formerly occupied by the Orangeville Brass Band.

Officials said the Wilds would stay in the hall until a home could be found for them. Mrs. Wild, convalescing after a long illness, has been placed in a nursing home.

Wild owned his home for seven years. When he lost work, he mortgaged the home several years ago. It was sold by the mortgagors this summer and the new owner has decided to move in.

"The family had no place to go, so we just let them move into the town hall," explained Alex Holmes, chairman of the property committee.

"There has been only one family in this town in the past 60 years forced onto the streets with their furniture overnight. That sort of thing will never happen in Orangeville again."

MAN IS ARRESTED AS 'PEEPING TOM' AT WASAGA BEACH

Police Say He Showed Two Marks of Bullets He Received Two Years Ago

FOUND AT WINDOW

Man, Authorities Say, Declared He Has Made Practice of Peeping

Collingwood, Ont., Aug. 14—(CP)—A "Peeping Tom," who admitted he was the man that dodged a hail of shotgun pellets fired by Turk Broda, Maple Leaf hockey star, a few weeks ago while looking through a window, was arrested at Wasaga Beach Saturday night by Police Chief W. Downer.

Making his regular patrol in the area where the "Peeping Tom" had been terrorizing women, Chief Downer came upon the man standing in the pouring rain and looking through a window at the Pickwick cabins.

Taken completely by surprise the man submitted to arrest without a struggle and was lodged in Collingwood jail on a charge of vagrancy.

The man, a 39-year-old farmhand of the district readily admitted he had made a practice of looking through the windows of summer cottages and cabins in the district during the past two months. His actions had terrorized scores of women.

Bullets in His Arm

He also confessed that a local man put two bullets in his arm two years ago for a similar offence. He displayed the scars on his right shoulder to prove his statement, police said.

Questioned about the Broda incident, the farmhand admitted he was the man who had to dodge the flying lead that the hockey star peppered at an intruder that night. "The pellets just whistled past my ear," he told police.

He said his activities were confined to Wasaga Beach.

Chief Downer said that the problem of the "Peeping Tom" of Wasaga Beach had been cleared up. "He was anxious to make a clear confession of all his activities that covered the past three months in the area," the officer said.

'POWDER BARREL' MAY EXPLODE NAZIS DECLARE

Unless Danzig Question is Settled Speedily to German Liking, It is said

TEST CASE IN DANZIG

Berlin, Aug. 14—(AP)— Nazi officials declared today after reaching new decisions with Italy on a joint course of action that "the European powder barrel may explode" unless the Danzig question is settled speedily.

Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, mouthpiece of the foreign office, said:

"If the stubbornness and insolence of certain powers in regions that do not in any way concern their interest continues, they may be sure that the determination of Germany and Italy will be posed against them."

The newspaper said: "The future of Danzig, which has often been designated as the powder barrel of Europe, has today again become a burning problem and one that endangers the peace."

Quick Solution Demanded

Unless a quick solution is found—by 'solution' Germany means unconditional return of Danzig to the Reich—then the European powder barrel may explode, the commentary said.

RENEWS OFFERS FOR RELIEF AID TO QUEBEC

Dominion Government Presents Specific Offers to Premier Duplessis

EQUAL CONTRIBUTION

Ottawa, Aug. 14—(CP)—The Quebec government has received renewed offers from the Dominion of aid for the unemployed. Labor Minister Rogers laid the central government's proposals before Premier Duplessis in a week-end message made public here after it had time to reach the Quebec capital.

The Rogers communication followed a conference of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his cabinet with Premier Duplessis, his ministers and a group of Quebec Mayors here last week at which Premier Duplessis complained of lack of Dominion aid and pointed to the plight of many Quebec municipalities who were unable to assume any share of unemployment relief. Quebec wanted relief works rather than direct relief, he said.

Four Offers

There are four specific offers from the Dominion to aid Quebec, said Mr. Rogers in his letter. The Dominion will contribute $3,000,000 for direct labor cost of civic improvement projects. It is willing to co-operate with the province in finding a satisfactory way of arranging for civic improvements in municipalities certified as unable to assume any share whatever of the costs wthin this total sum.

The Dominion is willing to pay dollar for dollar with the Quebec government up to a maximum of 40 per cent of the cost of direct relief in the province, with no maximum amount limiting this total contribution. The fourth offer is to pay 50 per cent of the cost of relief given to transients.

Equal Provincial Contribution

The offers, said Mr. Rogers, "are conditional upon an equal contribution being made by the provincial government. If accepted, no needy person in the province will be ineligible for assistance." The

14 PERSONS DIE IN CLIPPER CRASH

Only Two Survivors Out of 16 Nearing Destination at Rio de Janeiro

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 14—(AP)—The crushed wreckage of a Pan American 'baby clipper' was believed today to hold the answer to an unexplained crash in which 14 persons were killed yesterday almost within a stone's throw of their destination at the end of a 3,7000 mile flight.

Among those who died in the crash was Professor James Harvey Rogers of Yale, an eminent economist and a familiar figure in Washington in the early days of President Roosevelt's administration.

Only two of the 16 occupants of the two-motored ship survived. Both were rescued by launches of the Brazilian navy arsenal and taken to hospitals.

Two persons who saw the crash as the plane nosed down toward its landing at the end of a flight from Miami, Fla., said it seemed suddenly to slant sharply down and strike a crane on a drydock in the harbor.

Plane Breaks in Two

The plane broke in two. Half of it fell ashore, and the other half plunged into the water.

The steel drydock, on Ilha Cobras (Cobra Island) is about 23 feet high and about 1,100 feet from the airport.

Planes normally taxi on the water after alighting until they are before dark. The weather was clearing float to be towed in by rowboat.

The plane was descending just before dark. The weather was clear and a slight wind was considered not sufficient to have caused any difficulty.

'NO REASON FOR FIGHTING POLISH FRIENDS'

Retired General Szabo Declares There Never Will be Reason for Fighting

REFERENCE TO NAZIS?

'We Are Ready to Fight Against Those Who Threaten Hungarian State

Budapest, Aug. 14—(AP)— The declaration by a prominent retired general that Hungarians "cannot imagine the possibility" of having to fight against Poland aroused wide interest here today.

The declaration, reprinted from the Miskolc newspaper Magyar Jovo by the Budapest Liberal Daily Az Est was made by General Sandor Szabo, a member of the exclusive war heroes order over which Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy presidents.

"We Hungarians cannot imagine the possibility that we would ever have to fight against our Polish friends because there are no reasons for fighting and never will be," Szabo wrote.

"On the other hand, we are ready at any minute to fight against those countries or people who would try to threaten the Hungarian state or the Hungarian people's honor."

This last was seen by some as an apparent reference to increasing Nazi German agitation in Hungary.

CADDY KILLED BY GOLF CLUB, GOLFER ON BAIL

Player Quoted as Saying He Swung Club After Poor Shot and It Slipped Out of Hand

CHARGE IS LAID

Philadelphia, Aug. 14—(AP)— A 27-year-old amateur golfer, James McFarland, was charged with killing a caddy with a heavy golf club hurled aside in disgust after a poor shot.

Held in $2,000 bail on an involuntary manslaughter charge, McFarland was quoted by authorities as saying:

"I was angry before I made a bad shot and I swung my club rather strongly and it slipped out of my hands."

The caddy, John Klemming, 35, was carrying a bag for a member of a sixsome with which McFarland was playing at the Huntingdon Valley Country Club yesterday.

Other golfers said he was standing about 15 feet from McFarland.

Joe Burk Chalks Up 36th Victory

Philadelphia, Aug. 14 (AP)—Joe Burk, holder of the Diamond Sculls, United States and Canadian championships, won his thirty-sixth consecutive sculling race in the Navy Day Regatta on the Schuylkill River Saturday.

Possible Effort To Settle Dispute Is Seen by London

Daily Sketch Believes Danzig Senate to Give Danzigers German Nationality

RUMORS OF PLANS

Mussolini Favors Five-Power Conference to Settle Question, but Hitler Opposes, Says Report

London, Aug. 14—(CP)— Talks between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Professor Carl Burckhardt, League of Nations High Commissioner for Danzig, over the week end were seen by British official circles today as a possible preliminary to efforts to negotiate the Danzig dispute.

A government spokesman, commenting on Burckhardt's visit to Berchtesgaden, said the High Commissioner now was "in a position to make contacts with the Polish government and the Danzig Senate."

No report on the talks has been received here, but official circles said Burckhardt made the call at Hitler's invitation and it was assumed the Fuehrer must have had some settlement plan to present.

Confidential Notification

Britain as a member of the League Committee of three responsible for Danzig affairs was notified confidentially of the invitation a few hours before Burckhardt left Danzig Friday.

It was not known here whether the commissioner saw Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, who also was at Berchtesgaden over the weekend. He was understood to have returned to Danzig today; Ciano returned to Rome yesterday.

The foreign office minimized reports that Ciano might have laid before Hitler an Italian peace plan and said Britain had not been approached with proposals of a peaceful settlement of Europe's problems.

Activity in London

Diplomatic activity in London continued to reflect the concern which has been apparent for the past few days.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax returned to the foreign office after a weekend at his Yorkshire home.

Callers at the foreign office included the Turkish Ambassador, Tevfik Rustu Aras, the French Charge D'Affaires, Roger Cambon.

London, Aug. 14—(CP)— The Daily Sketch (Independent) reported today that before the Nuremberg Nazi party congress next month a decree granting German nationality to all Danzig citizens will be passed through the Danzig Senate.

The British press generally expressed belief, in the absence of any communique following the Salzburg and Berchtesgaden talks of Foreign Minister Count Ciano of Italy with Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Fuehrer Hitler, that Premier Mussolini has put a brake on German ambitions.

"It was known early yesterday," said the Sketch, "that Ribbentrop has confirmed to Ciano Hitler's decision to pass a decree through the Danzig Senate granting all Danzigers German nationality.

"Ciano made the condition that if the Danzig Senate passed such a decree no step likely to lead to war shall be made without consulting Italy.

Says Danziger Has Plan

Berlin, Aug. 14—(AP)—A Nazi source with unusually good connections said today that Professor Carl Burckhardt, League of Nations Commissioner for Danzig, has a plan for peaceful settlement of the dispute between Germany and Poland over the Free City.

The plan, according to this source, calls for the reunion of Danzig with the Reich and for "a direct and guaranteed connection between East Prussia (including Danzig) and Germany proper."

Reichsfuehrer Hitler, Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland and Albert Forster, Danzig Nazi leader, were said to be acquainted with the plan and to have accepted it as a possible basis for discussion.

Secret Trip to London Reported

This Nazi source said that Commissioner Burckhardt was making a secret trip to London to present the plan to Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary.

It was only today that authoritative quarters acknowledged Professor Burckhardt was in Berchtesgaden last week to see Hitler.

This disclosure came as officials were weighing the results of the weekend conferences among Hitler and the German and Italian Foreign Minister in which Germany and Italy were said to have set a joint course of action.

PICTON SAILORS NOT TO SPONSOR REGIONAL RACES

One Thousand Dollar Guarantee Demanded by A. P. B. A. "Too High" They Declare

ROTARY 'OUT'

Famous American and Canadian drivers of the flying 225 cubic inch hydroplanes will not vie for regional supremacy on the Prince Edward Yacht Club course this year, members of that organization decided at a special meeting held in Picton on Saturday.

The general consensus of opinion of the club was that the guarantee of $1,000 demanded by the Regional Committee of the American Power Boat Association was too high a figure in view of the fact that this amount could not be collected through the medium of the turnstiles.

This in turn would force the club to rely on private sponsors in order to secure the guarantee, and this, members felt could not be done at this time of the year.

Interviewed early today, members of the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club of Belleville, stated that they did not, think it possible to hold the regatta here. Weather conditions, especially in the autumn, would not be conducive to good speed-boat racing on the Massassaga course.

While the local yachtsmen have not definitely turned the proposition down, there is very little likelihood that the regatta will be run here, an informative Rotary source revealed.

How to Choose a Ruler, Says Shaw, Is Unanswered Riddle of Civilization

London, ug. 14—(CP)— George Bernard Shaw at 83 startled the critics into panegyrics today with an actionless play offering two hours of philosophical debate which sums up Shavian thoughts of everything from functions of art to the theory of kingship.

The new production "In good King Charles's golden days," moves through a long series of drawing room discussions among such characters as Charles II; his mistress, Nell Gwynn; his wife, Catherine; Isaac Newton, the philosopher; Godfrey Kneller, the painter, and George Fox, founder of the quakers.

London critics hailed it as "sheer mental enjoyment," "the reaffirmations of a great man" and as being like "sitting at a dinner party with five good talkers going at it hammer and tongs."

The conversations grandly encompass religion, women, politics, mathematics and science. Newton and Kneller, for instance, set forth the proposition that curves of science and art actually are the same curve viewed from different angles—art and science being two facets of the jewel which is consciousness.

The arguments subside finally with this regal reveries near the end of the play:

"In every nation there are the makings of a capable council and a capable King three or four times over, if only we knew how to pick them. Nobody has found out how to do it; that is why the world is so wisely governed. The riddle of how to choose a ruler is still unanswered, and it is the riddle of civilization."

RURAL MAIL COURIERS GET SPECIAL MARKERS

Rural mail couriers will in future carry identifying plates on automobiles used for the transportation and delivery of mail.

According to word received this week by Postmaster J.V.C. Trualsch of the local office, from the Postmaster-General, special metal markers will be issued each courier. These markers will be approximately the same size as the present automobile licence plates to which they will be attached.

The new marker will display the Royal Crown and the words "Rural Mail."

When the vehicle is not actually being used to carry mails, the marker must be reversed and the blank side shown.

Issue of the new markers is the result of an application by the Rural Mail Couriers' Association for some identification mark, and the new marker has received unanimous approval.

Frankford Territory Under Trenton Port

Through the efforts of Mr. Wm. A. Fraser, Member of Parliament for Northumberland, the portion of Sidney township, in the County of Hastings, lying between the Trent River and the easterly boundary of Northumberland County, has been transferred from jurisdiction of Belleville and has been placed under the Town of Trenton for Customs supervision.

The transfer of such territory from Belleville to Trenton means that the future manifesting of goods consigned to the Bata Import and Export Co. Limited, in Customs bond will be handled under the Trenton port.

BEARS AT BANCROFT BRANDED AS KILLERS

Black bears have become more numerous and troublesome in Bancroft district lately, and reports of sheep killing by the animals have become more frequent of late. Gideon Jessup, resident near the village, discovered three of his sheep badly mangled and with carcases partially eaten. Bears and not wolves are believed responsible for the loss.

N. HASTINGS SCHOOLS HAVE MUSIC SURVEY

With a view toward undertaking the teaching and supervision of music in the rural schools through the North Hastings inspectorate, Miss Ann Collins, A.T.C.M. of the Department of Education, Ottawa, has been visiting a number of the schools through the county. Under the plan weekly lessons in music are taught by the music supervisor who travels from school to school at regular periods. Grants are provided by the department of Education for the work. Miss Collins hopes to work chiefly in the district between Bancroft and Millbridge.

BOUNTY ON STARLINGS URGED BY ORCHARDIST

"Unless the government takes some action in the matter of a bounty or something on starlings, the birds are going to eat us out of house and home;" complained George Foster, Ameliasburg Township orchardist, who declares that recently thousands of the birds making their home in Prince Edward County have been ravaging grain fields and orchards alike with methodical regularity.

The birds, complains the resident, travel in sun-darkening flocks, settling in trees and grainfields in flock after flock, apparently guided by an advance guard of the birds. Their weight has caught smaller limbs of the apple, cherry and plum trees to break from the trees, while their maddening chatter resounds long after dusk. The birds are apparently immune to 'cat's eyes', scarecrows, and even shot gun blasts from the worried owners. Lots of dozens of bushels of grain in each field is reported by some farmers. "If they'd put a bounty of two cents a head on the birds some of us would get rich," declared Mr. Foster.

TOURIST CAMP BUSY AS SEASON ADVANCES

Tourists with trailer and tent have apparently strengthened in numbers through the district during the past week or so, and for the first time this season reports from the East Dundas Street city tourist camp indicate that camp facilities are being taxed to care for the overnight callers.

DECORATION DAY CEREMONIES HELD BY WAR-VETERANS

Kingston - Belleville Salvation Army Bands Head Parade to Belleville Cemetery

DECORATE GRAVES

Major Alderman in Charge of Service That Attracts Many in Spite of Rain

An afternoon sun breaking through rain-drenched clouds shone fitfully on the colored berets of city and district representatives of Canada's famous fighting divisions yesterday in beautiful Belleville Cemetery where the "remnants' of once proud battalions that carried the Maple Leaf of Canada to victory in the Great War, paid floral and other tribute to the memory of those of their comrades who "went west" for the Empire in that great struggle for civilization.

Miniature Union Jacks, the brght colors of which enhanced the vivid hues of floral bouquets were planted on the graves of the departed veterans. Civilians and members of City Fire Department took advantage of the Decoration Day ceremonies and in spite of rain and sullen skies that momentarily threatened to send down a deluge, reverently passed along the graves "row on row", to pay tribute to departed loved ones and former colleagues.

Salvation Army in Charge

The service at the mausoleum was in charge of Major Alderman, of the local Salvation Army Corps. The joint bands of the Belleville and Kingston Citadels under the baton of Bandmaster D. Wardle provided the musical accompaniment during the service and gave a sacred concert during the decoration ceremonies.

The familiar tune of "Sun of My Soul" rang out in the afternoon air as the service opened. Veterans were drawn up in a square in front of the mausoleum, with the blue berets and white garb of members of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion providing an additional touch of color.

Sergt-Major Hart read the scripture lesson followed by "Deep Harmony" by the band.

Two-Minute Silence

A reverent hush, broken only by the distant hum of passing automobiles on the highway, fell over the green carpet of the cemetery as the haunting notes of "Last Post" blown by Bugler-Sergeant Flinden, Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) rank out in the afternoon air. Two minutes silence followed, and the stirring notes of "Reveille" brought memory crowding back to the present.

"What are you going to do with your life" was the theme of a brief address given by Major Alderman. Then "Lead, Kindly Light" echoed in the cemetery, the benediction followed and the proud strains of the National Anthem brought to a close a ceremony that was impressive as it was beautiful.

Veterans "fell in" at the Armouries shortly after one-thirty, and headed by the Salvation Army Bands marched to the foot of the East Hill where they entered cars and buses and were driven to the cemetery. Motor-cycl Officer Sam Ervine, escorted the parade with City Motor-Cycle Officer Douglas Ellis assisting.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the verteans drove directly to the Armouries where they were dismissed by Sergeant-Major Sam Johnson, in charge of the parade. Veterans organization officials expressed their appreciation of the many beautiful donations of flowers, and also for the generous offers of automobiles.

OUNTY ON STARLINGS RGED BY ORCHARDIST

Unless the government takes e action in the matter of a nty or something on starlings, birds are going to eat us out house and home," complained rge Foster, Ameliasburg Town- p orchardist, who declares that ently thousands of the birds king their home in Prince Ed- rd County have been ravaging in fields and orchards alike with thodical regularity.

The birds, complains the resident, vel in sun-darkening flocks, settling in trees and grainfields in flock after flock, apparently guided by an advance guard of the birds. Their weight has caught smaller limbs of the apple, cherry and plum trees to break from the trees, while their maddening chatter resounds long after dusk. The birds are apparently immune to 'cat's eyes', scarecrows, and even shot gun blasts from the worried owners. Loss of dozens of bushels of grain in each field is reported by some farmers. "If they'd put a bounty of two cents a head on the birds some of us would get rich," declared Mr. Foster.

TOURIST CAMP BUSY AS SEASON ADVANCES

Tourists with trailer and tent have apparently strengthened in numbers through the district during the past week or so, and for the first time this season reports from the East Dundas Street city tourist camp indicate that camp facilities are being taxed to care for the overnight callers.

On Saturday evening eight registrations of cars from as many different states were reported by Caretaker Geo. Wilder, while on Sunday evening the number of cars was increased to nine. An average of four occupants to each car was reported.

DECORATION DAY CEREMONIES HELD BY WAR-VETERANS

Kingston - Belleville Salvation Army Bands Head Parade to Belleville Cemetery

DECORATE GRAVES

Major Alderman in Charge of Service That Attracts Many in Spite of Rain

An afternoon sun breaking through rain-drenched clouds shone fitfully on the colored berets of city and district representatives of Canada's famous fighting divisions yesterday in beautiful Belleville Cemetery where the "remnants' of once proud battalions that carried the Maple Leaf of Canada to victory in the Great War, paid floral and other tribute to the memory of those of their comrades who "went west" for the Empire in that great struggle for civilization.

Miniature Union Jacks, the brght colors of which enhanced the vivid hues of floral bouquets were planted on the graves of the departed veterans. Civilians and members of City Fire Department took advantage of the Decoration Day ceremonies and in spite of rain and sullen skies that momentarily threatened to send down a deluge, reverently passed along the graves "row on row", to pay tribute to departed loved ones and former colleagues.

Salvation Army in Charge

The service at the mausoleum was in charge of Major Alderman, of the local Salvation Army Corps. The joint bands of the Belleville and Kingston Citadels under the baton of Bandmaster D. Wardle provided the musical accompaniment during the service and gave a sacred concert during the decoration ceremonies.

The familiar tune of "Sun of My Soul" rang out in the afternoon air as the service opened. Veterans were drawn up in a square in front of the mausoleum, with the blue berets and white garb of members of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion providing an additional touch of color.

Sergt-Major Hart read the scripture lesson followed by "Deep Harmony" by the band.

Two-Minute Silence

A reverent hush, broken only by the distant hum of passing automobiles on the highway, fell over the green carpet of the cemetery as the haunting notes of "Last Post" blown by Bugler-Sergeant Flinden, Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) rank out in the afternoon air. Two minutes silence followed, and the stirring notes of "Reveille" brought memory crowding back to the present.

"What are you going to do with your life" was the theme of a brief address given by Major Alderman. Then "Lead, Kindly Light" echoed in the cemetery, the benediction followed and the proud strains of the National Anthem brought to a close a ceremony that was impressive as it was beautiful.

Veterans "fell in" at the Armouries shortly after one-thirty, and headed by the Salvation Army Bands marched to the foot of the East Hill where they entered cars and buses and were driven to the cemetery. Motor-cycl Officer Sam Ervine, escorted the parade with City Motor-Cycle Officer Douglas Ellis assisting.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the verteans drove directly to the Armouries where they were dismissed by Sergeant-Major Sam Johnson, in charge of the parade. Veterans organization officials expressed their appreciation of the many beautiful donations of flowers, and also for the generous offers of automobiles.

Hay Fever Victims Await with Dread Coming of Aug. 15

Some Leave for Various Districts to Escape

August 15th is just another day on the calendar to the average citizen. But to those unfortunate men and women, who look askance at the glowing beauties of the golden rod, it is a day filled with ominous portent.

While the fateful day does not dawn until tomorrow, already signs have appeared that within a few days will send these unfortunates about their business with bleary eyes, noses of a roseate hue, and a heavy stock of handkerchiefs about their respective persons.

"Ids here. Igodit" wheezed a Front street merchant this morning as he dabbed at his nose with a handkerchief.

"I should have god to Sarnia to the codvention", he moaned.

The convention of which he spoke convened in Sarnia today. It consists of victims of the pollen of the golden-rod who yearly congregate at northern spots in an effort to defeat the inconvenient results of inhalation of the pollen. Here they listen to remedies, hear suggestions, and make motions, then hike for the northern holiday spots where they hope the glories of the golden-rod are conspicuous by their absence.

In the meantime those poor unfortunates who are chained to stores, factories, farms and offices with the links of occupation, must stay at home and suffer. Life is just one wheeze after another for them, while drugstores and other relief-dispensing mediums will in all likelihood do a land-office business.

However, the season is here, and the air within a few days will carry the misery-bringing pollen that brings anything but happiness to those allergic to its effects.

7-YEAR STOWAWAY GRINS AT OFFICERS

Robert Taylor of Glasgow is Found in Liner's Lifeboat

Glasgow, Aug. 14.—(CP Cable)—Seven-year-old Robert Taylor, possibly the world's youngest stowaway, grinned and said "hullo" today when officers of the Cunard Liner Andania plucked him from the gloom of a lifeboat.

A wireless message from the Andania's captain, received by Robert's parents here, was the first news of the wandering Glasgow boy since he walked up the liner's gangway at Greenock on Saturday, telling seamen: "I'm one of the passengers."

The Taylor family returned seven months ago to Scotland from Montreal where Robert was born.

When Robert disappeared from his Greenock home James Taylor and his wife did not think of kidnappers or street accidents. They looked at each other and said "ships".

That long trip from Canada gave the boy ideas. A week ago the youngster disarmed waterfront guards with a grin said to be as powerful as that of his Hollywood namesake, and slipped onto a steamer for Rothesay, Scotland.

Police brought him home from that adventure.

POLICE COURT

Eleven persons were summonsed into the city police court today charged with harbouring dogs, without first having obtained a dog licence and tag, contrary to the city ordinance. Eight of the alleged delinquents admitted their guilt prior to the opening of court and upon the purchase of their 1939 dog licence only the costs of the Justice of Peace were assessed. In the remaining three cases those in default were found guilty as charged and ordered by a warrant of distress, issued by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., to procure their dog licences forthwith.

Two speedsters pleaded guilty in writing and were fined the conventional $5 and costs.

A charge of non-support heard in camera at the conclusion of the regular court, terminated one of the shortest proceedings of the month.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., represented the Crown, while Robt. McCulloch was present as council in the case of the family controversy, which was subsequently left in the hands of Mr. McCulloch for possible and amicable settlement.

Police Blotter

Sneak thieves were reported active at an auction sale on Albert Street last Saturday. At the conclusion of the sale two fountain pens and a wrist watch were reported missing. The matter was reported to local authorities by Clifford Crooks, 281 Albert St., whose property was stolen, he said.

Oshawa police reported the theft of a 1935 De Soto sedan over the week-end. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates, number 5 N 774, when taken.

Following two weeks' vacation at the family summer camp on Crowe River, Chief Alexander Kidd returned to his customary post today. Chief Kidd reported a splendid fortnight of fishing and camp life.

Police activities were at a low ebb over the week-end, two inebriates and an equal number of transients being the sole occupants of the cell block since Saturday.

60 Alberta Teachers Visit World's Fair In Trailer Style

Toronto, Aug. 14.—(CP)—Sixty Alberta School teachers who paid Toronto a brief visit yesterday set out for Chicago in their two big double-decker trailers today. The girls are returning home in easy stages after a 17-day stay in New York.

Members of the Alberta Recreation Society, organized in 1933, the girl teachers will have travelled 9,000 miles by the time they reach home August 26. The cost of the tour is approximately $110 each, including the 17 days in New York.

Tour Manager Arthur Toogood, who drives one of the trucks hauling the trailers, said the secret of such a tour is planning. A different trio wash the dishes each day and three others do the cooking in the trailer's built-in kitchens. The girls make their own beds.

"We got a $2 tour of radio city for $1 and a $2.50 bus tour for 65 cents each," he said. "That's how we do this thing so cheaply. The government should be all for these tours because of the value to the work of the teacher when she returns to her duties."

STEERING COLUMN CAUSES ACCIDENT

When the steering column of the automobile which he was driving broke, a motor car driven by R. M. Bibby, Barrie, went out of control and into the ditch immediately south of Foxboro on Highway No. 14 yesterday. Mr. Bibby escaped serious injury when the vehicle was badly wrecked. Highway Traffic Officer Sam Ervine investigated and found the matter to be purely of an accidental nature. The motor car was badly damaged about the under-carriage and radiator, necessitating the employment of a tow truck to release the vehicle.

CLAIMS AIRPLANE STOPS POACHERS

Algonquin Park, Ont., Aug. 14.—(CP)—Frank MacDougal, a superintendent of this National Park, today credited the airplane with curtailing poaching in the park.

MacDougall said the airplane had made illegal hunting so dangerous, few violations are reported now. He said two years ago a ring of poachers were broken up through the use of planes.

Airplanes sight poachers from the air and drop down ahead of them, so Rangers trailing the poachers capture them.

SUMMER WEEKEND TOLL

Drownings again led in the heavy weekend toll in Canada. Fourteen out of twenty-seven deaths being in the lakes and rivers and off beaches. Highways claimed eight lives.

Muggy weather naturally sends many out for relief from the oppressive heat. Many are tempted to bathe or to go boating and there are accidents. Hundreds of thousands of cars take to the highways and side roads laden with those who seek a place of less heat or the enjoyment of a ride in automobiles when the heat is less felt.

There were other fatal accidents, from lightning and gas.

THE WAY TO WIN BATTLES

The weapons of battle have changed in recent years, but the way to win battles has not altered since the beginning of time. Tanks, airplanes, and all other equipment are simply preliminaries to getting the infantryman home with the bayonet.

It was old General Nathan Bedford Forrest of the United States Confederate Army who put battle strategy into these few words: "Git thar fustest, with the mostest men."

That same thought predominates in all military strategy and tactics today. The side which gets in the deadly punches is the one which is on the job first with the strongest forces.

If old General Forrest were alive today, he would advise the British, if they sought his advice, to have so many airplanes available, that in the event of war the British would be over Germany "fustest and with the mostest."—Windsor Star.

GHOST STORIES

Some great ghost stories have been written and will continue to be written as long as there is a mystery in the mind of man and something he cannot solve.

At the hands of great ghost-story writers, readers tremble. That is what their intention is — to have the most thrill it is possible without seeing a ghost.

Now and then crop up "ghost stories" which however seem to have little significance. There is something unexplained and yet in many cases perhaps if there were slightly more knowledge the secret would be out and there would be no more ghost. Any way, most of these ghosts, as they are called because of rappings or knocks or balls of light, fail to thrill as the ghost story writers' tales thrill their readers. There is a society which seeks information on what is hidden or occult. Not long ago on the radio experiences were given during a season and explanation given of mysterious creakings, groanings as all having a very material basis.

Then of course outside of these are the great stories of the past as of the appearance of the ghost in "Hamlet" or of Banquo, slain by Macbeth. These stories were of another age than ours. In the first case the ghost was seen by a number on guard on the battlements, according to the play and by the son of a murdered king, but later that ghost was seen by the son but not by the woman who had been his wife. In the second case, that of Banquo, the ghost was seen only by Macbeth, the general who planned the murder. These stories teach powerful lessons and are intensely dramatic but are not quite from the modern standpoint. Doctors today would probably put "ghosts" only in the mind.

In a community where a "ghost" story is centred there is much interest of course, as it opens a theme of speculation as to the causes. In a nearby town the dwellers are wrestling with just such a modern version which is amply verified of peculiar knockings in the attic, the sounds having been heard even after the police arrived. What the explanation is, is not yet known.

One of the strangest things about modern "ghosts" is that they are so shy of their "presence." They are credited with ability to make sounds, to use lights, but never show themselves.

Ancient ghosts according to the stories were more bold and made their presence visible, yet it must always be remembered that the past is the past, that the mind of man in other ages was very fertile, could often make a bush look like a bear, and could see fairies and hear the banshee wailing. But these stories are so far, far away. "Ghost stories" which come to light in settled communities of today seem tame as compared with these appearances as recorded in Celtic and other folk lore.

GROVER WHALEN WON A GREAT VICTORY IN ERECTING A GREAT WORLD'S FAIR on a swamp in Flushing Meadows, New York, but he is facing financial defeat when his creation should have been an unqualified success, the verdict of everyone who has seen the show being that it is worth while and everything it set out to be. Grover Whalen's colossal victory in showmanship is being changed into colossal defeat through lack of attendance. Grover Whalen was persuaded to put his faith in press agents for free advertising to supply the World's Fair attraction with sufficient vigor to make financial success. The press agents cost him plenty but they failed to get results. and now there is a great cry going up from the fair grounds for greater and sensational publicity to save the fair from ruin. Thirty thousand free passes a day make a splotch of red on the fair books which shows one defect in the management, for Annie Oakleys fail to create good will any more and the best booster a good show can have is one who has paid his full price of admission and is satisfied. Demands are being made by prominent fair exhibitors for newspaper paid advertising to save the show, even at this late hour sums up to a million dollars being mentioned as necessary and an investment which will pay for itself in cash returns. Some very harmful publicity was given the fair right at the beginning when newspaper stories of boosted prices for hotel accomodation and meals appeared in a number of newspapers outside New York City. This should have been met and vanquished by paid newspaper publicity, but was permitted to ride with but feeble free publicity comeback which got nowhere.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY STUDENTS COMPLAIN that hitch-hiking isn't what it used to be. They claim that on an average it is necessary to thumb 500 motorists before one responds with a pick-up. Seems funny that university students get the impression that they are entitled to free transportation, but even at that more motorists would give them rides if they were sure they were students and not just super-tramps. Picking up unknowns on the highways and giving them free transportation has an element of danger in it which most folks consider it is not necessary to take, and in fact foolish, for there are vicious characters on the highways seeking whom they can despoil.

CEYLON IS A BRITISH CROWN COLONY, in close proximity to India, with chief products of tea, copra, rubber, cocoa, cardamoms, timber, graphite . . . area 25,332 square miles. Ceylon is thus briefly described in the encyclopedia, but the Times of Ceylon, published at Colombo, asserts that the chief industry of Ceylon is getting into the government service. The total number of taxpayers in 1938 was 16,350. Of these as many as 6,732 were government employees. Thus 41 per cent of the income taxpayers were government employees, and the Times of Celyon states that "The keeness of competition to enter government service is said to be responsible for the communal passions and jealousies prevailing among the people."

JAPAN HAS BEEN HELPED CONSIDERABLY IN HER 'UNDECLARED' WAR AGAINST CHINA by Canada and other nations which have supplied scrap iron from which those death-dealing bombs have been fashioned to kill and injure women and children. United States has supplied aeroplanes and war materials of all kinds to Japan, as have other nations, under a screen of 'undeclared war,' but signs are multiplying that these sources of supplies will soon be cut off. Japan is also quarrelling with her best customer, for the British Empire takes fifty per cent of Japan's exports. Japan's efforts to conquer China and make her an unwilling consumer of Japan goods does not seem to be any nearer consumation than it was a year ago, and although the Island Empire is trying to line up beside the Rome-Berlin Axis there does not seem to be much sustenance to be expected there.

Where Tourists Play Santa Claus

This district has tourists, many of them, but we have yet to hear of any of these visitors who possess the Santa Claus instincts to the credit of yachtsmen from Detroit who have been touching at Goderich in the course of their cruises.

Last year, one of these yachtsmen took a pair of urchins from a Goderich pier and outfitted them with new clothes from the skin out with the one stipulation that they should attend Sunday school regularly.

This year the yachting tourists' generosity has taken a new turn. One of a party of four motor executives voyaging in a large yacht spotted a man in Goderich who looked like his father. He immediately declared that he wanted to do something for the man in question, who is 75 years old and who is in the habit of repairing to a beverage room each afternoon for a glass of beer.

Accordingly, he deposited the sum of $20 with the manager of the beverage room who is in return to give the septuagenarian not more than two glasses of beer a day with the provision that under no circumstances is he to be allowed to treat others. Since the beneficiary was born in Scotland, it is felt that this stipulation will work no hardship. The same party contributed a total of $15 in tips to waiters at a Goderich restaurant which they patronized.

It seems too bad that Brockville is so far removed from Detroit. — Brockville Recorder Times.

Hazy Days of British Columbia

These are the days (speaking among ourselves) when we are sorry for people who do not live in British Columbia.

These are the days of full and ripening Summer, when the sea at our doors is as green as emerald and spiced with the keen smell of salt.

These are the days when the sand of our beaches is hot and clean, the water warm upon the skin.

These are the days when the coast woods are cool with the sweet smell of fir and cedar and the interior woods heavy with the sharp, stinging, hot smell of pines in the sun.

These are the days when our gardens reach the high tide of bloom, when the green vegetables, the peas, and beans, and lettuce, are at their tenderest, when the marrows and cucumbers are ripening on the vines and, up in the Interior, the cantaloupes of Oliver, the watermelons of Lillooet way, the apples from Salmon Arm to Osoyoos and over in the Kootenay country, are getting heavier on the trees.

These are the days when the trout are biting in every interior lake, and the first salmon are moving in towards the coast, poor, foolish creatures eager for the tinsel lure of the fisherman.

These are the days when the Summer camps are open from one end of British Columbia to the other, beside the sea, in the mountains, on the shores of countless lakes, with a gree, healthy, suntanned life which is as near heaven as mortal man can ever hope for.

These are the days when even the city worker of British Columbia tied to his shop or office, is only a few minutes from the outdoors, a few blocks from the water and the trees.

There are not many such places in the world and we do not like to talk about them out loud, lest we make other peoples feel envious and unhappy. But speaking between ourselves, we repeat that these are the days — Vancouver Sun.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Medical Treatment of Goitre

When you see an individual with the usual signs of exopthalmic goitre or Grave's disease — rapid heart beat, nervousness, indigestion, sleeplessness, and later, bulging eyeballs —you may think that removal by surgery is the only cure. Many surgeons, however, have the family physician use medical treatment and rest for some weeks before the operation and it frequently happens that this rest and medical treatment bring about such an improvement that operation may become unnecessary.

Dr. Israel Bram, Philadelphia, in his book "Exopthalmic Goitre and Its Medical Treatment" states

"First and foremost, we must bear in mind that treatment for exopthalmic goitre is not treatment for a lump on the neck. To be effectively managed, this disease requires intensive conscientious study."

The five points outlined in Dr. Bram's method are (a) removal of infection—tonsils, teeth, gall bladder, (b) varying rest program to overcome the ravages caused by the very rapid rate at which all the body processes are made to work by the overactive thyroid gland, (c) a properly outlined diet, (d) the use of medicines, and (e) application of psychotherapy—persuasion, suggestion, reeducation."

The removal of any infection present will require good judgment as to condition of the patient and the severity of the goitre symptoms.

The treatment by rest will depend upon the mental, physical, and, perhaps, financial ability of the patient, and likewise requires close supervision by the physician.

In regard to diet, flesh foods—fish, fowl, lamb, veal and calves' liver—may be included in the heavy meal of the day only. Tea, coffee, condiments, spices and alcoholics are forbidden. As extra nourishment may be necessary, milk, eggs, with occasionally cream, buttermilk, bread, cookies and ice cream may be given.

Among the medicines used are iodine, quinine, extract of ovary, and other gland extracts, and quieting drugs.

The psychic treatment is to try to get patient better adjusted to his circumstances and surroundings.
removing infection, rest, proper

It can be understood, then, now, by treating the whole individual—food, necessary medicines, and correcting poor adjustment to life—the cure of early goitre and even moderately advanced goitre may be possible without operation.

A FROG SHOWER

A shower of small frogs fell during a heavy storm between Southport and Coombabah Creek.

Mr. W. McKean, of Indooroopilly, said the road was white with frogs, giving the appearance of a hail storm. Some of the frogs appeared to be beads of jelly, others had bodies 1¼ inches long. A number hopped off when turned over.

When the matter was referred to the Ichthyologist at the Queensland Museum (Mr. T. C. Marshall) he said there had been several instances of fish being found after a storm in Queensland. The fish were caught up in the eddies and whirpools from shallow water. It was possible that similar winds had caught up frogs from swamps.

Professor W. J. Dakin said the report was about as correct as a statement that it was "raining cats and dogs." No zoologist would believe it. The fact was that frogs hibernated underground, sometimes for years, and after a dry spell and the return of water to the earth's surface the frogs emerged from their hibernation.—S. A. News Bulletin.

SEAGOING CAT

This is the story of Kees, the cat, and may prove, among other things, that a boy is never sure how a sea trip is going to turn out. Kees is the diminutive for Cornelius, and that cat for the first six weeks of his life led a careless existence aboard the Holland-American liner Zaandam.

The ship docked in Hoboken last week and when no one was looking Kees just strolled ashore for a quick turn around the New Jersey docks. Well, what with one thing and another, Kees found life on the pier a mighty fascinating affair and he stayed among the mice and bales until the Zaandam had sailed.

The watchman finally found and fed Kees, but it was obvious that here was a seagoing kitten who would never be happy ashore for long, so, when the Rotterdam put in, Kees slipped aboard. He sidled into the master's cabin and promptly went to sleep in Captain Lagaay's cap. Kees probably thought he was on his way back to Holland and he is going to be a mighty surprised and much older kitten before he looks upon Maas River again.

The Rotterdam is off on a cruise of fifty-three days to South America and when she returns she will go away on other cruises until the Fall. All in all, Kees will be travelling almost 40,000 miles. In the meanwhile he has indicated that he wil settle for two meals a day and the captain's hat—New York Sun.

CHAMP SPUD PEELER

A one-time champion potatopeeler of the Cunard Line arrived in Durban recently aboard the Mahia.

He was Mr. J. J. Hickman, now chief cook of the Mahia. In seven years he peeled more than 3,000,000 potatoes for passengers travelling between London and Montreal. In those days potato-peeling was a full time job. Five men were required to handle the 200 bags which the 1,140 passengers consumed during the voyage.

Mr. Hickman said he never tired of the work. Even now his idea of a rest was to peel a bag of potatoes which took him about an hour. There was an aspect of this work which appealed to him. It was possible to sit down and gossip at the same time.

The best potato-peelers, he thought came from Lancashire. It took about 4½ months to make a man proficient at the work.—South African News Bulletin.

Roomers Prefer Private Homes

There were 555,806 lodgers in Canada in 1931 of whom 89.29 per cent. lodged in ordinary households and the remainder in hotels, rooming houses, institutions and camps, says the Brockville Recorder and Times. The high proportion of lodgers living in rural parts of Canada who lodged in households where they were the sole lodgers (61.9 per cent.) is readily explainable since, being scattered they had to lodge apart, but it is most significant that 38.4 per cent. of the urban lodgers lived in households where there was only one lodger. Adding the percentages of urban lodgers living in one-lodger and two lodger households it is found that 58.2 per cent lived in households where there were not more than two lodgers.

This tendency for lodgers to live in small households where they may enjoy maximum home privileges would seem to indicate that Canadians are a home loving race, especially in view of the fact that comparison with United States figures reveal a lesser tendency there. The rooming-house population is largely composed of floating elements of foreign races, particularly the Chinese and Japanese, while the typical Canadian lodger seeks a private home.

Since so many lodgers are found in private homes, it is interesting to determine the types in which they most frequently are found. Examination reveals that tenants take in lodgers more frequently than do home-owners. Since data relating to households with lodgers were very meagre it has been necessary to resort to correlation analysis. The households dealt with in the analysis are a homogeneous group, viz., those of one family with tenant wage-earner married male head living with his wife and paying at least ten dollars and less than sixty dollars for monthly rent.

The average number of lodgers per household has been correlated with four factors, viz., rent per room, children per household, persons per room and earnings per person. From these correlations the following inferences may be drawn: lodgers prefer rooms of good quality as measured by the rent paid for the houses in which they lodge; they avoid overcrowded households; they avoid children only in so far as the children monopolize the available accommodation and they are more common in families whose earnings are above average than in families with low earnings, since the former families can provide the most suitable accommodation. The keeping of lodgers, therefore, can seldom be reported to as an amelioration for poverty.

Wearisome Party Conventions

The political organizations which ask the electorate to entrust them with government of the country do not give a particular impressive demonstration of efficiency at party conventions. They flounder around as if such a gathering had never before been held.

At several recently attended, the proceedings, scheduled to commence at eight o'clock, began at nine instead. In the interim the registration of delegates was conducted. They knew the meeting would not begin at eight, so they ambled in when they were good and ready. On the other hand, members of the audience seemed to entertain a hope that a meeting called for eight o'clock might start about that time, so they sweltered in their chairs for an hour unnecessarily.

At long last, the president announces that "he hour has come" to begin. He does not apologise for the delay, but asks the secretary to read the advertisement calling the convention. That seems to be a ritual without which the affair would not be legal.

Then the candidates are proposed. Sometimes a time limit is placed on their speeches, sometimes not. It makes no difference, for the long-winded ones, of whom there are always too many, speak as long as they can keep going. No chairman ever restrains them.

During counting of the ballots, the chairman calls upon several local politicians who had not expected to speak, have nothing in particular to say, and proceed to say it at considerable length.

Finally, at 10.30 or 11 p.m., the speaker of the evening is reached. He incites a hopeful feeling on the part of the audience by admitting that it is a warm night and that the hour is late and stating that, therefore, he will be brief in his remarks. After which, he goes to town for an hour and a half.

Most wearisome item in such a program is usually the speech of the gent who introduces the distinguished visitor. He may take 15 or 20 minutes reciting biographical information. It is one of the many superfluous items which cause the meeting to last over the midnight hour.

All of which seems to justify a small bouquet for the introducer of Lt.-Col. George A. Drew at Simcoe on Thursday evening. The chairman called upon Dr. R. N. Berry, ex-M.L.A., of Caledonia, to perform that duty. He did it in the following words, and then sat down amidst applause:

"You will all know Colonel Drew when he is through, so just give him your kind attention."—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

CANADIAN FIRSTS

The Winchester Press lists some of the outstanding contributions to general advancement which originated in this country. They are as follows:

Canada built and sent the first steamboat across the Atlantic.

Canada built and demonstrated the first compound steam engine in the history of the world. The effect of this invention was the doom of the sailing ship as a factor in ocean commerce.

Canada built and demonstrated the first railway sleeping cars.

Canada built and demonstrated the first submarine telegraph in the history of the world.

Canada originated the idea of making paper from pulp wood.

Canada demonstrated the first practical electric railway in the history of the world.

Canada built the world's first electric stove.

Canada originated the idea of electric heating.

Canada originated the idea of standard time, which has since been adopted by every civilized country in the world.

Canada originated the idea of the panoramic camera.

Canada originated Marquis and other more recent wheats which have built up the commerce of the west, both in Canada and the United States.

The idea of the telephone originated in Canada and the first long-distance trials of the instrument were made between Paris and Brantford.

Insulin is of too recent date to require more than mention in this list.

The list, of course, is not complete, but it contains enough "first" achievements to give grounds for boasting about our resourcefulness, provided we feel inclined that way. But Canadians, as a rule, are not egotistical.—Kitchener Record.

THE WOLF CHILDREN

Scepticism in regard to wolf-boy stories can be disposed of only by an examination of the evidence in concrete cases. When I was in India—it must have been in 1893 or 1894—I was shown an actual wolf-boy, and there must be many other people still alive who have seen him. He was kept in a mission school at Secunderabad. When I saw him he had reached middle life, but the missionaries told me that at the time of his capture from the wolf-pack he was apparently under seven. He and a little girl were both running on hands and knees with the pack.

Both, on capture, were quite savage and snapped at raw meat; the little girl soon diet. Their physique, inconsequence of the unnatural life and the insufficiency of food obtained in competition with the young wolves, was wretched.

The boy was deaf and dumb. Although in the end he was tamed and lived on under the roof of the missionaries, he was never taught any kind of language, and communication with him was accordingly limited. He was encouraged to show visitors the scars on his knees and elbows which had been got from running with the pack, and also the scars made by the teeth of the young wolves with whom he had fought for food. — Dr. Edward Bevan in the London Times.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said Maud Hews told me about the most marvellous uncanny tea leaf reader, she's in Hookbinder's tea room and it seems she can read your passed like a closed book.

People can read their own passed, but how about their future it takes genius to read that, pop said, and ma said, Well naturelly, but who can really do it?

Not many, pop said. Just a few, among whom I am proud to include myself he said, and ma said, O yes, a likely story, you cant even read your future or you wouldn't be taking so many helpings of liver and onions you'll have to have a soda tablet after dinner heehee..

Like fun pop if you can read peoples future, why read mine why dont you? I said, and pop said, With pleasure just what point of your long future would you care to be enlightened about?

What am I going to doing tomorrow, for instants? I said, and pop said, My first glimpse of you will be washing your face, and when I enter the bath-room you will suddenly decide to extend your efforts to your neck. During breakfist you will listen with an intelligent expression while I remind you to go and have your hair cut, but you will forget the incident so completely that even the sight of the barber shop will awaken no responsive cord in your memory. You will show up for dinner at least 15 minutes late with a pitifully old and shaky excuse, and you will not eat your vegetables until you have been informed you'll get no more meat until you do and later in the evening your memory will again collapse so utterly that you will be told 3 times to go to bed before the command stops half way between your 2 ears. Would you like to bet I am wrong in any particular? he said, and I said, No sir.

Wich he proberly wasn't.

Your Diary WOULD BE SHORTER!

Only 67 years ago, Rev. G. M. Grant's journey from Halifax to Vancouver in only 133 days was so memorable that he published his diary — 368 fascinating pages of adventure over untamed lands. Today — Montreal to Vancouver by Trans-Canada Airways in 17½ hours.

In Mr. Grant's day — "In twelve working days we had travelled 506 miles . . . A month from Toronto and we are on the Saskatchewan". Now — "Leave Montreal 9.00 p.m. Breakfast in Winnipeg. Lunch in Vancouver . . . a hostess who serves refreshments aloft". While you sit back and smoke, the plane sweeps across lakes and rivers, plains and mountains following the trail of pioneers — men who toiled laboriously with axes, plows, picks making today's Canada.

As the maplike panorama unrolls, you see a country which enjoys luxuries our forefathers never dreamed of, free institutions they forged for us, security, space and resources which are the envy of a harassed world. Canada is a good place to live in — and the tobacco industry has helped to make it so. For the industry has invested millions in factories and processing plants, has helped to add tobacco-growing to our agricultural wealth, and supplies thousands of Canadians with employment in manufacturing and distributing products which increase the enjoyment of all.

Mussolini Favors Conference

"Mussolini is said to be in favor of a five-power conference to settle Danzig once Hitler's initial step has been taken. Hitler is not. But diplomatic opinion believes the Fuehrer has made the above concession to Il Duce. There is a conviction that the Danzig decree will be made before the Nuremberg rally."

"If there is to be any war of nerves it will not be ours that will fail this time," said the Daily Mail (Ind.)

Referring to "arbitrary pronouncements of German leaders that such a European question is one for Germany alone and must be settled exactly as Germany desires," the Times (Ind.) said:

"There can be no peace in Europe as long as any one country assumed that impossible attitude toward the rest. The only certain consequence of assuming it is that it will in time band all others against it."

View of London Times

The Times said that if Germany and Italy were seeking "peaceful revision of some of the remaining terms" of the Versailles treaty they would "no doubt find a general readiness to confer among all the interested states."

"No object could be more worthy of statesmanship today than a peace settlement fully and freely accepted by all the powers concerned," added the newspaper.

Several papers published rumors of various "plans" purportedly from continental sources, looking toward a possible 'negotiated settlement' of Europe's problems. None had confirmation here.

'POWDER BARREL'

Italy and Germany were said by informed quarters to have set a joint course of action during the three-day conference held by Foreign Minister Count Ciano of Italy with Chancellor Hitler and his Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop.

An official source said "100 per cent agreement on all issues" was reached and that there was no need for further talks. What was described as the "burning world problem" of Danzig was said to have been the main theme of the talks.

A reliable informant hinted that a plan of action to restore the Free City to Germany had been decided on but questions as to details met with the response that it was "strategy to keep the others guessing."

'We Stand Together' Says Hitler

Ciano returned by airplane last night to Rome where he reported immediately to Premier Mussolini. The Fascist press declared there had been no divergence of views on Danzig.

"We stand together come what may" was the general trend of the comment of Nazi newspapers.

Field Marshal Hermann Goering's well informed Essener National Zeitung, which underscored the determination of the "two friends to march shoulder to shoulder to the end," said:

"This applies to the burning European problems as well as to all political and diplomatic decisions confronting the axis powers outside of Europe. But the Danzig question, which became a decisive European problem through the policy of the Polish government and that of the encirclement powers, stands in the foreground."

The Zeitung's reference to "decisions outside of Europe" was taken in informed circles as an indication that the far eastern situation and the question of Japan's joining the Rome-Berlin military alliance were considered.

Test Case in Danzig

"Italy feels, like Germany," the Zeitung said, "that the solution of the Danzig question and the establishment of a connection between East Prussia and the Reich is a test case to show whether Europe can be led into a progressive reorganization and into a lasting appeasement."

It added that Italy and Germany "are not looking for war but they do not fear it."

Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter advised "democratic politicians to take their 10 fingers out of the foreign pie."

Indian Woman Loses Ancestral Boundary Rights

Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 14—(CP)—For a year at least the family of Thomas Flexen will not be divided, Mayor Charles Rettie of Port Huron has received notice from the United States Department of Labor that a stay of 12 months has been made in the order to deport Flexen's Indian wife and three older children to Canada.

Flexen a Canadian, entered the United States as a boy in 1896 and has taken out first citizenship papers. He married his wife, whom he met on Muncey Indian Reserve near London, Ont., in 1922 and three children were born in Canada before Flexen established a home in Port Huron.

Mrs. Flexen has lived here since 1926 and was not troubled until she was forced to accept welfare recently. Then with the three eldest of her five children she was ruled ineligible to receive relief. Deportation proceedings were taken but delayed when Canada refused to accept the father and the American children.

United States laws forbid naturalization of Indians and by marrying a white man, Mrs. Flexen lost her ancestral right to cross boundary lines unhampered.

Canadian Girl Athletes Rank As Beauties Too

By Muriel Adams
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 14.—(CP)—Let the disparaging voices about the beauty of Canada's women athletes be stilled, or let those who believe that beauty and athletes don't mix take a look at some of the girls who compete in Canadian track and field.

On occasion a voice has been lifted to question the place and the beauty of women in sport. To the unbiased Canada's feminine track stars looked more like chorus girls than high jumpers or fast runners when they stepped out of the dressing rooms after the Canadian championships here Saturday.

Blondes, brunettes and red-heads, with hair curled up on the latest fashion, nails neatly manicured and polished and garbed in the most feminine frippery, they are just as pretty as any representative group of Canadian girls.

Even on the wide, green lawn of the track stadium, they resembled front-row high kickers as they limbered up before events, making a leg show of high merit. Figures among the racers and jumpers would be hard to beat anywhere. Discus and javelin throwers generally are heavier than others but still retain their feminine curves.

There's Phyllis Lafoy of Sault Ste. Marie, who brought her strong legs to the east from Saskatoon, two years ago. She wears her nut-brown hair curled high on her forehead and is headed toward a stenographic career but may enrol later at a university to study physical training. She has plenty of beaux but they are not all athletes. However she likes a man to be "interested" in sports—"it doesn't matter whether on the cinder track or the dance floor, I get along all right with them." And Phyllis is pretty too.

Tiniest competitor of the 116 entrants, five-foot, 14-year-old Beryl Nurse, of Chatham, Ont., has the makings of a "glamor girl". Although only in second form high school she thinks she would like to be a school teacher "like my Dad". Looking more like a child movie star than a medal-winning jumper, she wore blue and rose pin-striped shorts and a white blouse and caught her long brown curls at the top of her head with a rose bow.

QUINTE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The Quinte Women's Institute held their regular meeting at the Front Road Church hall on Tuesday, August 8 with a fair attendance.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Connors, by singing the ode followed by repeating the Lord's prayer in unison.

Miss Hazel Greatrix was chosen as local leader and Miss Alma Snider as assistant to attend the local leaders' training school in "vegetable cookery" to be held at Melrose.

An invitation was extended to all the Quinte branch from the Melrose branch to a social afternoon.

It was decided to invite the district president, Mrs. White, to attend the November meeting.

The meeting was then turned over by the president to the junior girls who took the centre of the stage for the afternoon and the youthful speakers are to be complimented on the ease and graciousness with which they conducted their part of the meeting. Miss Flossie Terry capably acted as leader for the afternoon. The girls then delighted all by singing a chorus accompanied by Miss L. Haight whom everyone was very pleased to see able to attend once more after her recent serious illness.

Miss Alma Snider and Miss Helen Brown then gave an excellent report of their trip to the girls' conference at Guelph in May. Later they both very heartily thanked the Quinte Institute for making it possible for them to attend this very interesting and instructive convention.

Miss Laura Keeve then favored with a solo which all enjoyed.

The roll call, "a humorous story", was well responded to and caused some merriment. A skit was given by the Misses Alma Snider, Mildred Greatrix, Lorena Haight, Doris Atkins, Helen Brown and Audrey Bradshaw, created much laughter as well as being educational and was enjoyed by all.

Miss Lulu Mitchell dressed as an old fashioned grandmother delighted all with a reading "If I were a girl again" and a suitable encore was also given.

Community singing brought this part of the meeting to a close.

Mrs Connors then had charge of the meeting. She and several other members thanked the girls for the splendid program which they had so capably given. Collection, $2.50.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem followed by singing the Grace after which a lovely lunch was served by the girls to which all did ample justice.

BAY OF QUINTE INSTITUTE

The Bay of Quinte Woman's Institute held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. F. J. Carr on Tuesday, Aug. 9 with an attendance of nearly thirty.

The meeting opened by singing the opening ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was answered by each giving a home-made remedy. A quite lengthy business session was conducted by the president, Mrs. R. Ketcheson.

A letter was read in which it was learned that different clubs are to meet in Stirling but no action was taken Letters, cards and personal thanks for gifts and flowers were received. Mrs. R. Ketcheson and Mrs. C. Ketcheson were appointed to interview Mr. Graham regarding the lease of the Orange Hall for the use of the Girl Guides and Institute projects. It was decided to buy pins and books for the Girl Guides. Mrs. Fred Aikins was appointed as delegate to attend the Girl Guides' convention in Belleville. A tea and card party is to be held in the Orange Hall (if it is leased) and failing that Mrs. Fred Wilson kindly offered her home.

Mrs. W. Jeffrey took charge of the program for the afternoon. Current events were ably presented by Mrs. Fred Wilson and Miss Ethel Rush sang very sweetly. A helpful reading was given by Mrs. Bonisteel and all were delighted with the tap dancing of little Miss Barbara Carr. A contest conducted by Miss Rhoda Hunt was won by Mrs. Fred Wilson who received a suitable prize.

Mrs. Carr and her assistants served a very dainty lunch and after the President expressed a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Carr, Mrs. Jeffrey and those assisting on the program, a most pleasant afternoon came to a close.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Gave Up Her "Steady" Boy Friend For a New One

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 16 years old and love a boy who lives about 150 miles from my home town. I frequently visit in that town, as I have some relatives there. This isn't puppy love either. He is from a poor family, and can't treat me much.

When I came back from there the last trip, I gave up my "steady" boy friend, because I don't love him any more. The boy who lives away from my home is 19 years of age. Please do not think we are just children. Did I do right to give up the boy in my home town, whom I have known for five years, and had been going with for six months, for the other boy?

Edith

In matters of the heart, my dear Edith, there is no hard and fast rule. Our affections, like the tides, ebb and flow. If you discovered after you returned home that you didn't care about the old boy friend, he probably would have noticed a change in your attitude toward him. It seems to me unnecessary to drop him entirely. At your age, it's well to have all the friends possible, as you're too young for "exclusives".

He Fell in Love at Fifteen

Dear Miss Fairfax

Perhaps I seem very young to you, a mere child—if that's what you consider a boy of 17. But at 15 I fell deeply in love with a girl who also fell in love with me. She was the same age. For two years I went on adoring her, and for her there was nobody else either. And all of a sudden she told me she didn't love me any more. It seems impossible that this could happen to me and I just don't believe it. Miss Fairfax. Am I just another fool, or would it be too much to hope that she'll reconsider?

In Gloom

This is no time to add to your troubles by rubbing in your youth. You say you've been in love for two years and that the girl now tells you she doesn't love you any more. Well—why not accept this calamity as a springbroad to real success? At 17 you have the whole world before you. Begin by making something of yourself.

Is Twenty Too Young to Care For a Child?

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 20 years old, and have been married a little over a year. I have no child, because my husband does not want one. He thinks I'm too young to know how to care for a child. I just worship children, and am so anxious to have one of my own.

My husband was divorced from his first wife, and they had a little girl, who is now ten years old. She is with her mother, and as his wife has remarried, my husband hopes he can regain possession of this child, but I don't believe there's a chance.

Do you think I'm too young to raise a child? I think children should come into a home when the parents are young. Since he will not allow me to have a baby, I plan to get a job so I have something to do in my spare time.

Lonely

No, indeed, I don't think a girl of twenty is too young to have children. Perhaps your husband has another reason for not wanting you to have a baby. He may be hoping to recover the little daughter of whom you write, and feels he could not provide for two, at this time. Or he may no want to go through another siege of those first burdensome years of bringing up a child.

Be patient, and he may be willing later on. In the meantime, if you can, try and get a position somewhere which will help fill in the spare time. I think that would be a grand idea.

Hints or Travellers

"One . . .two . . .three . . . four . . .five. . . six. . ." It's the weary voice of the traveller counting pieces of luggage. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, probably a little wise forethought would have made the counting stop at three, perhaps at two!

The more pieces of hand luggage you take with you, the more responsibility you will have, the more wear and tear on your memory and convenience, and probably the more tips you will have to give.

Look critically at every piece of luggage you are planning to take, for real convenience and adaptability to your travelling needs.

If you are going to spend your vacation in one place, you might like to consider this hint: Send a box of "extras" or an extra piece of luggage, by parcel post or express, and thus relieve yourself of the responsibility and trouble of taking these with you. Save tips, too. This is an especially helpful hint for the traveller who has collected books and other difficult to pack items during a trip. As you travel, mail or express "back home" any extras or accumulations you are sure you will not need during your further travels.

When you are travelling, your attitude toward strangers reveals, inevitably and accurately, the kind of person you are. Gracious you should be, and poised you must be, if you wish to be considered a well-bred person. No excessive affability, on the one hand no boorishness or frozen-faved snobbery on the other hand.

Pleasant travellers have an ever-active concern for other people, their wishes, their comfort. Be considerate, be thoughtful, be human.

When some people enter a train or other public conveyance, they act as if they were its owners. The ideal attitude of travellers is that they are shareholders. . . . .share and share alike.

Cocktail Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I am planning to have a cocktail party in the near future.

1—Please tell me how to have the invitations engraved, as my home is small and the least I can invite is about one hundred people.

2—Could I state on the invitation that the hours are from "four to seven"?

3—What shall I serve besides the drinks? I thought of having canapes and small sandwiches.

V.

1—Your invitations should be informal. Instead of having engraved invitations, I suggest that you write your invitations on your visiting-cards, just as you would a tea-invitation. If this is not convenient, I suggest that you buy some invitations especially designed for this type of party. "Informals" (the folded cards) are appropriate for these invitations.

2—Yes, it is customary to write the hours on these invitations. "Four to seven o'clock" or "Five to seven o'clock", as you prefer. Usually "Five to seven o'clock" are the hours chosen for a cocktail party.

3—You should, definitely, have alternatives for the cocktails. This is expected of a thoughtful hostess these days. I suggest that you offer both hot and iced tea. Or, if you don't wish to do this, offer a non-alcoholic punch. Or have a large pitcher of ice-cold orange juice, or a fruit-ade. Or offer tomato juice as an alternative.

Serve very small, slim sandwiches, perhaps the majority bread-and-butter sandwiches, and perhaps made of several kinds of breads . . . . white, whole wheat, rye, pumpernickel. Simple canapes, too, if you wish. And such accessories as nuts, thin slivers of carrot, rosebud radishes, hearts of celery, even the so-fashionable small pieces of cauliflower.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"PRISON WITHOUT BARS"

Now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, "Prison Without Bars" an Alexander Korda production, starring Corinne Luchaire, the sensational European star, with Edna Best, Barry Barnes and the screen's new "Dead End" girls, is a picture of Universal appeal, that before the closing performance at the McCarthy Theatre, will be the talk of Belleville.

Rated four stars by every critic, "Prison Without Bars" is packed with scenes of dramatic and emotional intensity, as well as with romantic sequences of tender beauty. Roly Young, movie columnist for the Globe and Mail, Toronto, has this to say about "Prison Without Bars", in addition to rating it four stars. It is a picture that is a very striking and worthy addition to the finer things that the screen has to offer.

"Always in Trouble"

Jane Withers, at her funniest, is presented in a gala companion feature offering which both adults and children alike will be delighted with, entitled "Always In Trouble", besides the big little star Jane, the supporting cast of this gay comedy includes lovely Jean Rogers and Robert Kellard in the romantic interest, Arthur Treacher, famous for his character roles as an English butler, and the following other featured players, Jean Woodbury, Eddie Collins, Andrew Tombes and Nana Bryant.

AT THE BELLE

JACK BENNY & ROCHESTER

Jack Benny, who has amazed millions of Americans and Canadians with the consistently high calibre of his good-natured fun on rado, stage and screen, really gets a chance to go to town in his latest screen offering! Never has Jack had co-stars like Dorothy Lamour and Edward Arnold! Never has he had a story so well-tailored for him as the one contrived by Morrie Ryskind for this new comedy with music, "Man About Town", which is now on at the Belle.

As a matter of fact, no Benny picture has ever offered a supporting cast with such diverse and lively talents as the one assembled by Paramount for this picture. It includes, Binnie Barnes, Phil Harris, Betty Grable, "Rochester," E. E. Clice and Matty Malneck and his Orchestra.

As far as "Rochester", is concerned, he is sensational in his screen debut with his radio boss. He does two eccentric dances which are nothing short of terrific as laugh-provokers. And incidentally the big harem sequence of the picture reveals the world-renowned Merriel Abbott Dancers doing the most amazing acrobatic dancing ever seen on the screen. And that's not all! Twenty gorgeous Petty Girls, selected by artist George Petty to bring the magazine Petty Girl to life on the screen, decorate the sequence.

Jack is Jilted

The Ryskind story—he will be remembered as the author of "My Man Godfrey" and "Stage Door"—casts Jack as an American theatrical impressario who intends to present his show in London. Jack's in love with the girl singing star of his show, Dorothy Lamour, but she seems to prefer the show's orchestra leader, Phil Harris. On the advice of his valet "Rochester," Jack decides to show Dorothy that he is a man of the world.

In an hilarious sequence, Jack meets Binnie Barnes, lady of the English nobility, who is just a little bit lonely because her husband Edward Arnold, is far too preoccupied with his business manipulations. Jack succeeds in getting himself invited to her country home for a week end, and then the fun really begins.

Director Mark Sandrich has cleverly interspersed the farcial situations with three grand new song hits, "Strange Enchantment" and "That Sentimental Sandwich" by Frederick Hollander and Frank Loesser.

Director Sandrich rates a special bow for so cleverly integrating the comic, romantic and musical ingredients of the picture. The production values offered by producer Arthur Hornblow, Jr., prove that he is without a peer in presenting this type of picture.

Another of the ever-welcome crime-does-not-pay stories, "While America Sleeps", the Belle Newsreel and Popeye in "Leave Well Enough Alone," completes the program.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Ultimate Recovery in Nephritis Predicted on Strict Adherence to Doctor's Edicts

When the child who has recovered from an attack of acute nephritis achieves the point at which he can begin to take exercise again, he has been lying in bed for at least a month or six weeks—often longer. The first exercise will consist of sitting up in a chair. About ten minutes of this and he will be glad to get back into bed again.

Naturally the amount of time spent out of bed will depend on the urine. If he develops a return of blood to the urine when he sits up first day, then it's back to bed for him for another period of rest before he again tries getting up.

There are three things which may cause of recurrence of nephritis—too much exercise for the patient, too much exercise for the kidneys, and a return of the infection. Knowing how harmful these things can be, we watch them very carefully. The diet is increased only when the patient is in bed and the infection is clearing. The centre of infection is cleared up after the patient has reached full diet but is not yet exercising. After this the child may begin to take some exercise.

The reason these changes are made separately is that we will know in case the blood returns to the urine, just what is causing it and how to correct it. If we increased diet, operated on the infected area and began exercise almost simultaneously, if blood showed in the urine again we wouldn't know which factor to blame.

Treatment of acute nephritis, when it isn't too seriously complicated, is simple and remarkably successful. But there must be, throughout the treatment, strict observance of orders on the part of whoever is doing the nursing—and strict obedience on the part of the patient. Given these, from 85 to 95 per cent of victims will recover.

Those who do not recover either fall before the first attack, or succeeding attacks of the disease reduce the number of organs functioning in the kidneys until not enough remain to carry out the normal functions. Occasionally children will lapse into a chronic nephritic condition; kidney damage will increase slowly until they have insufficient kidney tissue left to sustain life.

Let me impress on all parents that almost every case of nephritis caught in time, will recover. The deaths are among those who were not treated soon enough, or those in whom the source of infection wasn't removed.

I believe that many children who die of pneumonia, actually die because of nephritic complication. The child develops pneumonia, nephritis follows but is overlooked because the restlessness, the pallor, the convulsions, the delirium are all attributed to pneumonia. So for many years now I have made a daily examination of the urine of my pneumonia patients. I have frequently detected nephritis in this way and brought the victim through the illness.

WHAT THE CATBIRD KNEW

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Went away and never has been heard from," asserted Captain Halliday, as he re-filled his pipe and pulled out a battered matchbox. "I always ask folks from the city if they know Robert Landis, but no one ever had up to the time you came to the village."

"It may not be the same person" said Mrs. Mently, as she knitted busily. They were sitting on the bottom of an upturned boat on the shore, and the captain had been relating many stories to the city boarder. "I have met a Robert Landis; he is a young newspaperman, and he lives in the same boarding house that I do in the city. I have often talked with him, but he never mentioned Shellbeach [illegible] he knew I was coming here, but he [illegible] to be interested."

"Hum! Is he married?" asked the captain.

"Oh, no."

"Does he seem to like the girls?"

Mrs. Bently laughed. "I cannot say that he seems much interested in them; he seems like a rather grim, silent young man, absorbed in his work and not particularly happy."

"Sho! muttered the captain. "That sounds like he ought to be, but not how he uster be around [illegible]re. He was just wild about my [illegible]ce Sally—"

"The pretty, black-eyed girl who lives with you?"

"Yes. Five years ago she was eighteen, and prettier than she is now—more color, and her eyes were happy. She was engaged to Robert Landis. They quarreled about something and he went off; she's that proud she never mentioned his name after that—only she's wistful and never so gay and happy as before."

"I am so sorry," murmured Mrs. Bently. "Is there anything I can do to bring them together? It is a delicate situation. But it seems dreadful that they should miss their chance for happiness."

"My theory is that there is some misunderstanding," commented the captain. "There they were, happy as clams at high water, having a postoffice in a hole in a hollow tree in the orchard. One day not so long ago I was coming across the orchard, at dusk—and there was Sally, leaning against the old tree, crying as if her heart would break."

"Don't!" cried Mrs. Bently, taking out her handkerchief.

"There's the case!" said the captain gruffly. "Thank you, ma'am, for listening—good afternoon." He trudged up the beach with his fishing tackle and string of fish and disappeared through a hole in a broken fence.

"The poor little thing." murmured Mrs. Bently, thinking of Sally and her sad love story. "I believe I will go home for a week-end, and I will carry with me some snapshot pictures; one must be of that old orchard and the postoffice in the tree, and one must be of Sally at her prettiest; I must catch her secretly. And then some odd ones of the beach and other parts of the village, but those two will be mingled in and he cannot help but see them."

So Mrs. Bently spent one busy day with her camera, and then she took the train for the city. Captain Halliday missed her pleasant companionship on the beach, and went fishing every day. Sally sang about her housework in a soft, sad little voice, and sometimes her eyes wandered out to the old apple tree where there was a mossy hollow in the trunk—that was always empty now. A tangle of bushes had grown up around the old tree and amid the sharp thorns of brier a catbird had built her loosely constructed nest. Brown twigs, leaves, bits of grass, a scrap of old newspaper all helped to build the home for the hungry brood. They had flown away, and the parent birds still clung to the old nest, uttering their clever mimicry of other songsters or making that strange, mewing cry so like a cat. Sally liked the beautiful creatures, [illegible] returned to the same old nest year after year. How often she had seen them on her fruitless visits to the old trysting place!

That afternoon there came a terrific windstorm, and all the fishing boats hurried into port just before the storm burst in its fury. Captain Halliday was among the first to arrive, and he put up his boat and hurried home to help Sally close the heavy shutters and make the old house snug against the gale.

"We're in for a bit of windy weather, my dear," said the Captain as he sat down to a hot, savory supper.

"It is raining Uncle Peter; listen, [illegible]

There was the steady beat of rain on the roof, the chink of water running through the gutter pipes, the sound of thrashing trees.

They awoke the next morning to a sodden world of soaking land, fallen trees, and a beach strewn with driftwood from Wreckers island.

Captain Halliday went down to the beach to gather some of the driftwood for the winter fires, and Sally wandered through her ruined flower garden. There were cries of distress from the catbirds who were perched in the old apple tree. Sally found their frail nest blown to the ground, but strongly tied to the thorn bushes was the bottom of the nest—of many nests, for each year the birds had reinforced the old home with new twigs, bits of string and paper. Now the ragged remains of the nest clung defiantly to the stems of the bush.

"You poor things!" sympathized Sally.

"Mew-w-w-w-w—" warned the birds as they flew away in a circle to return again. "Mew-w-w-w—"

Sally heeded the warning and turned. Someone was standing near by looking at her with an embarrassed smile. It was Robert!

"Sally," he said biting his lip, "I came back to ask you why you didn't answer my letter."

"Letter? What letter?" Sally was clearly amazed; her color rose and her eyes shone. "There was no letter here when you went away—nor since."

"Have you really looked for one, Sally?"

"Yes," she confessed.

"I left one three years ago—I asked you to marry me, and because I could not bear to have you say no, I told you not to reply if you didn't love me."

"I never received such a letter," quavered Sally.

"I put it in the hollow—and when I found no reply I went away without seeing you, dear."

Sally stood with downcast eyes and aching heart. How could she convince Robert that she had never received the letter? He was looking at Sally, then his gaze passed her and saw the remains of the old old nest. There was something familiar sticking out of the sticks.

He rushed forward and pulled the sticks apart. From the bottom he pulled out a wet and torn envelope —it was thin and weather beaten—the ink was faded and pale—but the agitated catbirds who had appropriated the letter so long ago saw it pulled from the old nest, saw two young heads close together, reading the long-delayed letter, and saw the happy ending.

NEW COAT

By KARL GRAYSON

"I'm sorry Julie! You'll have to make that coat go another year. Things are pretty bad. I just can't raise the money to get you another."

There was a note of bitterness in Norman Sander's voice. Julie saw that he wasn't looking at her, and she knew a pang of pity. It was the first time that Norman had had to deny her.

"But I saw just the coat I want at Neathersole's, only this morning," she said doubtfully. "We have a charge account at Neathersole's; you wouldn't have to raise the money for at least 60 days."

Norman gestured annoyedly. "You mean we had an account at Nethersole's. They dropped us yesterday." He hesitated. "Their last statement showed a balance overdue for three months!"

Julie bit her lip. But sight of Norman's disconsolate figure stirred her sympathies. She came across the room and placed an arm about his shoulder.

"That strikes me as being pretty poor business. The minute we get a little hard up, they drop us like a hot iron. Next year, if our income is back to normal, they'll fall over themselves trying to get us back. Somehow it doesn't seem quite fair."

Norman stood up and leaned against the mantel, staring gloomily into the fire. "Oh, you can't blame them. Conditions are pretty uncertain these days, and they have to protect themselves."

"Well, that's not the way to do it. We've been good customers of Neathersole's for more than ten years. We've always paid our bills promptly and given them all our business. I hope they don't expect us to come back when things pick up."

There were other thoughts running through Julie's mind as she talked. She hardly heard Norman's reply. And after a moment she said: "Norm, I'm coming in town tomorrow noon and have lunch with you. We could run around to Neathersole's and talk things over with the credit department."

"It won't do a bit of good. They've made up their minds, and whatever we might say would be a waste of breath."

Julie smiled brightly. "We can't do any harm. And, besides, I haven't come in for lunch with you for ages."

Neathersole's is located in the heart of Boston's shopping district. Shortly after one o'clock when Julie and Norman arrived, the usual crowds of shoppers were gathered [illegible] where the great show windows. A bevy of painters were enriching the store-front woodwork with bright colors.

Julie tugged at Norman's arm and led him up close to one of the displays. "The coat that I spoke about is in here," she told him blithely. "I'd just like to have you see it."

Norman glanced sideways at his wife, shrugged resignedly and followed.

"Isn't it a beauty! It's that dark green, with the wolf collar!" Julie clasped her hands together and stared enraptured.

Norman's brow puckered as he squinted through the glass. "Can't [illegible] a thing. The light's wrong. All I can make out is a reflection of the street."

"Well, you must be blind. Here, move down this way."

Julie edged along, tugging at his arm, until she was standing directly beneath one of the painter's ladders. Its shadow on the window made visibility clearer in that particular spot.

"Trouble is," Norman explained, "they haven't got the awnings down. Suppose they can't, while the painting's going on." He glanced up at the man on the ladder. And at that exact moment someone jostled against Julie. She was pushed back against the ladder.

"Hey! Look out!"

But Norman's warning came too late. A can of paint, suspended from a rung of the ladder by a wire, got loose from its moorings and came tumbling down. It struck Julie on the shoulder, spilling its contents over her back.

Julie let out a little squeal and jumped away in dismay. But the damage had been done. A wide streak of bright red had hideously discolored her coat.

Norman swore beneath his breath and looked up at the painter, who was regarding the disaster apathetically, two rungs above them Julie began to expostulate in no uncertain terms about the carelessness of a store management that would permit the possibility of such a thing.

A crowd began to gather, expressing its sympathies. Norman feeling a bit silly about the whole business, tried to get Julie away, but he looked at him angrily, seemingly on the verge of tears.

"It's ruined," she wailed. "My brand new coat is absolutely ruined! Now whatever shall I do?"

Norman was on the point of uttering surprised protest, when the crowd parted to permit the passage of a bald-headed man, who, by his attire and demeanor, was connected with the store. At sight of him Julie renewed her wailing with a vehemence that stirred the sympathies of the crowd to a greater degree.

Norman was spared further embarrassment when the bald-headed man invited him and Julie into the store. They were ushered graciously into the manager's office, where Julie ruined a perfectly good chair by sitting on it. Unperturbed by the manager's exclamation of alarm, she sobbingly explained once more about how her brand new coat had been absolutely ruined through the carelessness of the store. Twice Norman was in the act of giving vent to the honest urge that surged through his blood, only to be interrupted by Julie's wails.

The manager drummed on his desk and finally wondered if Julie would be satisfied if they replaced her coat with a new one. Julie declared she wasn't particularly taken with any of the styles they were showing that year, but there was a dark green with a wolf collar.

Later, in a tiny restaurant, Norman looked sternly at his wife and said: "Julie, you did that on purpose. You brushed against that ladder because you knew the paint would spill on your coat!"

"Why, Norman!"

Norman gestured angrily. "Don't try to lie out of it. I know you did!"

"How? How could you know such a thing?"

"Because the coat you tried to point out to me in the window wasn't there at all. I looked in when we were inside the store. There was nothing at all in the show window."

"Oh, Norman!" Julie dabbed at her eyes. "Please don't be angry. We've been good customers of Neathersole's for ten years. I—I don't think what I did was unjust."

Norman considered. One thing he was sure of. He wasn't going back to that store and try to explain things. He'd been embarrassed enough for one day. "All right," he said, smiling faintly. "All right, I'll have to admit you did some quick thinking."

Julie beamed. "Quick thinking. Why, Norm, I've been thinking about it for days. Any woman will tell you you can't see into Neathedsole's windows between 1 and 1.30 o'clock. And yesterday when you told me about them dropping us from their books, I remembered they were painting and—" She broke off. Norman had ceased to smile.

That Mr. Smith

By SYDNEY FELL

"Now—you've got it all straight?" Ann Barrington leaned from the opened window of the car, her hands already on the wheel preparatory to starting.

"Yes, ma'am," she said. "Let me say it to you. When Mr. Smith comes I'm to show him into the par—living room. And give him his lunch on a little table in front of the fire. And make him comfortable till you come home."

"That's right, Susie," said Ann, as she started the engine. "And I'll be back about four."

And off she went, the loud purring of her engine falling away to a blur, and then to silence, as Susie watched her wind up the road and over the hill.

Susie was almost completely happy.

She had come to work for Ann Barrington straight from the orphan asylum that had always been her home. She had been with Ann two weeks, the two most interesting weeks, by all means, that she had ever passed.

Her life at the orphan home had not been unhappy. Indeed, it had been definitely happy. But it had been institutional. The freedom she enjoyed in Ann's kitchen and in the small, cheerful third-floor bedroom which she called hers at Ann's house was heaven to Susie.

Just one thing sometimes bothered Susie.

John Barrington, Ann's husband, was Susie's ideal of perfect manhood. To be sure, Susie's acquaintance with men at the home had been limited. Old Peter, the handy man—and occasional visits of inspection by members of the board of directors.

Susie's acquaintance was certainly limited.

Her idea of the perfect man had been formed largely from the heroes and villains she had seen on the once-a-week visit the home children made to the movies. And John Barrington certainly was nothing like those heroes or those villains.

At eighteen Susie had become acquainted, for the first time, with a real man. John was not good-looking, not glamorous in any way. Abut thirty, hard-working, rather solemn; but kind and considerate. He was devoted to his pretty young wife. And to Susie it seemed as if his devotion, his considerateness, his loyalty and attention must be enough to make the world a perfect place for Ann.

Yet sometimes Susie thought Ann was not quite as appreciative of her husband as she might be.

Today, Mr. Smith was coming, at Ann's invitation, to lunch.

Ann had invited him by telephone.

Susie had heard her.

"Do come for lunch," she had said. "My husband won't be home till dinner time. If you come for lunch that will give us five or six hours."

Then, at half-past eleven, there had been a telephone call for Ann. And a few minutes later Ann had come into the kitchen, dressed in her smart tweed coat and skirt, all excited and upset.

"Susie," she said; "I've just had a telephone call—my sister's little boy is ill and she's got to go away this afternoon. She has to go to court—some sort of suit she and her husband are involved in about his father's estate. So I've got to stay with the boy. And you'll just have to take care of Mr. Smith till I get back."

She had left the lunch all ready for Susie to serve, and had told Susie just what to do. And now, as Susie heard the last of Ann's motor as her car went up the hill, she was planning to do a little missionary work on Mr. Smith—work for Mr. Barrington.

Perhaps she'd tell Mr. Smith Ann had gone to lunch with another man—get rid of him before Ann came home.

So engrossed was she in her thoughts that she did not hear the car coming from the opposite direction.

Suddenly she was startled by a voice right at her side.

She looked up. There stood a young man—hatless, coatless, grinning.

"Oh," she said, startled. "Are you Mr. Smith?"

"Sure!" said the young man. "That's me. You Miss Barrington?"

"Mrs. Barrington's been called away. She couldn't help it. It's her sister's little boy—he's ill, and she has to stay with him. But she told me to tell you to come right in."

And Susie smiled, a smile that made her plain face radiant, and led the way to the house. She liked Mr. Smith—and she couldn't lie about Ann, when the chances really came.

"You go right in there and sit down," she said at the door of the living room. "And I'll bring your lunch right in. Mrs. Barrington said you'd be hungry."

"Well, sure, I'm hungry. Haven't had a thing since seven. Mrs. Barrington's swell isn't she? But say, if I'm going to have some lunch, I'd a heap rather eat with you. You eat in here?"

"Oh, no," said Susie. "I eat in the kitchen. You see, I'm Susie." And before she knew it she had told the strange Mr. Smith of her life at the home and of her present blissful existence as Mrs. Barrington's maid. A real home—real money—and the kindest people in the world to work for.

Mr. Smith gave Susie flattering attention. And in the kitchen he helped her set the oilcloth-covered table for two and, when she had the coffee ready to serve, and the salad and sandwiches, the cup cakes and shredded pineapple all daintily spread out—she tried to follow Ann's good taste in setting the table—he stood and held Susie's chair while she was seated.

Susie was thrilled. Never in her quiet life had she been so thrilled. She didn't blame Ann for being a bit interested in this jolly and very courteous Mr. Smith. He passed things to Susie, insisting that she help herself first. He said, "One or two—or maybe three—lumps?" and dropped them into her cup. He jumped up and went to the stove for more coffee. And he talked of the things that interested her.

"You look pretty in that pink dress," he said as they ate their dessert.

Susie blushed with pleasure.

"Like it?" she murmured. "I put on a white dress every afternoon—sort of a stiff one, like linen. And a cute little apron."

"Well," said Mr. Smith, through a mouthful of cake, "you'd look good to me even if your dress was mud-colored."

And they both laughed, as if at a great joke.

Then the doorbell rang and Susie went to the door.

A good-looking man, about Mr. Barrington's age, stood there. "Is Mrs. Barrington home?" he asked.

"No said Susie, "she isn't."

"Not home?" said the man. "When will she be home?"

"I don't think that's any of your business," said Susie, and slammed the door. "Fresh thing," she said, explaining to Mr. Smith in the kitchen. "Thinks just because I'm young I'll tell him all our affairs. Probably he's a burglar, come to pry around. I'm sort of glad you're here to protect—"

Mr. Smith beamed. "Sure, I'll protect you—always," he said. That was a swell feed you gave me. Sure Mrs. Barrington won't care?"

And then Mrs. Barrington herself burst in at the kitchen door.

"Oh, hello Sam," she said. "Come to fix the only faucet upstairs? You're the only plumber I ever knew that could be depnded on. Susie, wasn't it nice I didn't have to stay? The trial has been postponed—and anyway the baby's better. Mr. Smith come?"

And then between tearful apologies on Susie's part and half-exasperated explanation on the part of Ann, the thing was untangled, while Sam Smith, the young plumber, stood by very red of face and uncomfortable, ready to defend Susie if need be.

Mr. Smith—the Mr. Smith who should have eaten lunch in the living room—was an old friend of John's a college classmate, stopping at the house for a visit with Ann before he went on to town for dinner with John.

"And," said Ann, "I suppose he's the burglar you slammed the door on! Oh, well—"

Another ring at the door.

Ann answered it.

Sam and Susie heard her laughing, explaining. In a minute she came back to the kitchen.

"Hurry up, Susie," she said. "Let's scrape up some lunch for Mr. Smith—the other Mr. Smith—and me. Sam, you run upstairs and fix that leak. And—oh, Sam! Busy this evening? Well, why don't you invite Susie to go to the movies? I'm going to town to have dinner with my husband and the other Mr. Smith, and I don't want to leave Susie to a lonely evening. Have her home by eleven."

And as Sam's quick and cheerful acquiescence came down the back stairs as his noisy footsteps went up, Ann said: "He's a nice young man, Susie. You'll like him, lots."

"I do," said Susie, "already."

DANCE TEAM

By NED O'DOHERTY

The stage door of the only theatre in Hilltown swung open and the dance team of Elaine and Edmund stepped out into the glistening rain swept street. With hunched shoulders and lowered heads, they hurried towards the hotel.

The girl entered her unpretentious room followed by the man who slowly removed his coat and hat and, with a gesture of disgust, threw them into the farthest corner.

The girl, from force of habit, it seemed, picked up his discarded clothes and carefully hung them up.

"Elaine," the man said finally, "I'm completely fed up. For three years now I've been playing these one-horse towns, working like a Trojan, and what's the result? We all but break our necks doing difficult tap routines which brings us a lot of applause, but you can't eat applause!"

He turned to face the girl.

"Where's this break?" he shouted, "Where's this real money? Where's this mythical Broadway one hears about?"

Elaine came over and put her arm about his shoulders.

Blonde, silken hair fell down in waves about her neck.

Soft eyes filled with moisture which was somewhat prevented from becoming tears.

"Don't Ed," she urged. "Don't take it like that. Let's fight just a little longer."

He lifted her chin and brushed the tip of her nose with his lips. Just a peck it was; just a friendly, brotherly peck. Too brotherly, Elaine thought.

"O. K. kid," he mumbled, "I'll see you tomorrow."

And taking his coat and hat he left the room.

Elaine was sitting in the lobby when he came down next day.

He saw her, waved, and stopped to talk with the coquette who reigned supreme behind the cigar counter. Elaine smiled. Strange why she cared so much for him. Well, she did, and that was that.

A few minutes before they went on the stage, Eddie came to Elaine's dressing room for the usual limbering up. While they were in the midst of their intricate dance, someone knocked loudly upon the door and entered without the formality of waiting to be asked in.

Eddie was irritated at the interruption.

"Who are you?" he demanded angrily of the newcomer.

The man smiled.

"I," he began, "am the answer to a hoofer's prayer. My name is Lyons, which is beside the point, so I'll get to the point. I was sent down here to prevail upon you to pack your duds, and prevail further upon you to rush to Harrison's office in New York. Well here I am prevailing but you don't seem to be packing. How come?"

Eddie glanced about the room as if in search of something with which to tie up the lunatic. Not finding anything, he asked instead:

"What, my good man, are you talking about?"

The man laughed:

"I forgot. Dear me, I forgot to tell you Harrison is producing a new musical comedy and the old fool is laboring under the delusion that he needs a hoofer. And you're elected."

With some effort he searched for something in his pockets.

Eventually he found what he was looking for.

"Here's your railroad ticket," he said, and dropped it carelessly upon the dressing table.

When Lyons had gone, Eddie grabbed Elaine and danced her round the room.

"I'm made," he shouted. "I've got a break, at last! Broadway!"

Eddie danced that night as he had never danced before. Elaine was in a daze. She had never before been so heavy on her feet and she wondered, vaguely, if it was the weight of her heart that was holding her down.

Later in his hotel room, Eddie rushed about packing his clothes.

Elaine lay back in an easy chair and gazed intently at the discolored ceiling.

"Eddie, if you are sure they don't want me, too, what....well, what shall I do? I mean I can't do the act alone."

Eddie ceased packing.

He frowned, but only for a moment; then he smiled.

"Listen, Beautiful," he laughed. "A swell looking little dame like you would have only to lift her little finger and she would have a thousand partners."

Elaine arose quickly and hurried from the room.

She hated herself for crying, but she couldn't help it. At any rate it would be the last time. Never again would he be the cause of her tears.

People do not cry for those they no longer love.

Eddie arrived in New York next day and went directly to Harrison's office in the Strand building.

Harrison came from behind his desk and shook hands.

"Glad to see you, Eddie," he said, "but where's your pretty partner?"

"My partner?" Eddie frowned.

"Speak up, man!" he growled. "Where's the better half of your act?" Eddie fell back with a bewildered look in his eyes. "The better half? Oh! Why, I left Elaine in Hilltown."

Harrison chewed on his cigar ferociously.

"Listen, son," he said, tapping Eddie on the chest, "you get that pretty dancing partner of yours here in a hurry if you want to work in my show. Without her, you couldn't have a seat in the gallery." And he walked away.

Five minutes later Eddie had the Hilltown hotel on long distance. "Where's Elaine?" he shouted. "Yes, the cute little girl with the blonde hair. Where? Hollywood? When? Oh!...."

Then after what seemed like ages, waiting for the operator to put through a person to person call to Hollywood, Elaine's sweet voice on the other end:

"Hello?"

"Hello, Elaine, dear. This is Eddie. You know, your old partner. Listen, honey, could you come to New York right away? I have a swell proposition for you. You and I are going to dance together in the big show. I fixed it all up. What train will you take? I'll meet you."

Minutes ticked by before Elaine's cool, collected voice answered. Then:

"I'm sorry, Eddie, but I'm afraid you're too late. You see, for the past year I've been holding an option on a movie contract. Of course I wasn't interested while you and I were together, but when you decided to step out for yourself—well, I had no alternative. So I've signed a contract for a year at two hundred a week. But you should worry, Eddie. A handsome fellow like you need lift only his little finger, and ....but you know the rest of it."

For a long time Eddie remembered the final click of that telephone.

A World for Two

By OSCAR WALES

Rita hurried out the Spruce street door of the great store and made her way through the crowd of home-seekers to the motor bus. She had spent her noon hour window shopping and had decided to buy the stunning sports suit that had been reduced because of a small spot on the blouse. She knew that she could embroider a black flower on the black knitted silk—something formal that would not spoil the tailored effect, perhaps a symbol of cubistic square.

"I'm just agraid that Ed thinks me too shabby to take about," she told herself sorrowfully wishing she could stretch her small salary to the point where she could indulge in the frills that all girls love and especially those girls who work in the downtown stores and see the latest novelties.

For three weeks she had heard nothing from the young radio salesman and she had grieved until she had lost four pounds. And, when ane weighs a scant 100 pounds, four pounds is important.

She loved Ed and she was not ashamed to admit it to herself.

He had been taking her about for some months and his manner had become increasingly tender until that last night at the theatre. The heroine, a dreamy girl with golden curls and babyish mouth, had spent her last $50 for dozens of roses because she expected her lover to call. He had arrived hungry and cold, and looking forward to a good meal, and Rosamond had told him gaily of her depleted finances.

It was at this point that Ed had turned to his companion saying:

"Isn't she wonderful? To be so romantic—so appreciative of the beautiful things of life."

Rita agreed that the scene was indeed lovely, but she had qualified this by mentioning the unwiseness of spending one's all in a moment.

"Suppose her lover had failed to reach that country house that night? What would she have done for dinner? The empty pantry was shown and there would be breakfast, too, to consider."

Rita had wondered at his sudden coolness that night, but had never connected it with the play except—and this had loomed big in her mind—except that he might have fallen in love with the exquisite Rosamond in her childish frock of expensive white lace. Rosamond, with her background of nodding pink roses was beautiful, and Rita had contrasted her own blue serge smartness with that dream of girlhood.

Rita made her own blouses and most of her sheer collar sets, often working until far into the night in order to make a bit of real lace that she could not afford to buy.

Passing a florist shop in Rosemont avenue, Rita glanced in.

She knew the girl who owned it. Grace was in the far end of the small shop and she was bent over her tiny desk with a handkerchief in her hand. Rita stared in.

Surely Grace could not be crying. There was no one else inside and Rita opened the door.

Grace bit off a sob and mopped her eyes. "Oh, thank goodness it's you Rita. I'm a sight."

"What's wrong?"

"I lost my purse and, my rent money was in it. The agent will be here by eight o'clock in the morning and what I'm going to do is more than I know. Where in the world can I get $60?"

Rita stood in stunned consternation. Where, indeed?

"He warned me when I rented this that he'd accept no excuses. 'Pay or go' he said. There won't be any important sales tonight. It's seven o'clock now. What in the world shall I do?"

Rita looked down at her purse.

In that she had the savings that she had withdrawn to buy her summer clothes. Sixty-three dollars. She needed the clothes but—another girl needed that money—it meant her living. If she were put out what would she do? She knew that Grace had no near relatives, none in the city. Still, there was Ed. He might want to take her out and that meant clothes.

Motors whizzed past in the wide street and gay snatches of song or laughter drifted into the fragrant shop.

Ward Bond and Barton MacLane in a scene from the startling drama "Prison Break," playing with a second feature, "They Asked for It," with Michael Whalen and Jay Hodges at the Capitol

Spring had come definitely and the world rejoiced. The scent of lilacs came with the soft breezes and the smell of earth and bursting buds could be detected even in the wilderness of bricks and stone.

Love meant so much and modern love seemed to follow the girls who wore the prettiest frocks.

An unconscious sigh burst from Rita's pink lips.

She seemed to see Ed's face before her above the nodding flowers. Then she lifted her head gallantly.

She could not see another girl in need when she had surplus money.

"Take this, Grace," she cried, opening her purse and unpinning the little packet of folded bills from the safe inner compartment. "I have it extra, don't have pay a thing with it."

Grace crimsoned.

"Good heavens, child, don't think I'd take your savings. I'll get through somehow. The shop is paying—it's just that my mad carelessness has left me strapped for the moment."

But Rita had made her decision and she dropped the packet into Grace's cash drawer and hurried toward the door.

"You can't leave the shop you know," she smiled and was gone.

Up in her fold-up flat she shared with a teacher Rita began preparing for dinner.

The teacher was out and she had the partment to herself.

The sharp tinkle of the doorbell sounded before she had finished eating and she pressed the button that released the street door.

She felt sure it would be Ed and her heart sang as she smoothed backq her hair and cast a glance into the hall mirror.

"Flowers for Miss Johnson," announced a small boy, almost buried beneath his load.

"Miss Grace sent me up with them."

Rita's eyes blazed with pleased excitement as she filled vases and jugs and pitchers with the long stemmed roses of scarlet. Grace had sent her very best blossoms and the shabby little room was turned into fairyland.

Again the bell.

Rita pressed the releasing button without anticipation this time.

"Hello, Rita," came Ed's voice, "how's everything?"

She tried to keep her tone careless as she greeted him; he must never guess her secret.

"How beautiful."

Ed stopped in the doorway, his eyes upon the roses. "I thought you didn't care about flowers. I got to thinking that maybe you were like these city girls who live only for clothes and jazz. Red roses. They beat any other flower there is. Smell them, Rita, they are like you, some way, glowing and fragrant, yet not showy."

Speaking, he put out his hand and drew her towards him, gently, reverently, yet with a strength that would not be denied. "I'd about decided to say 'good-by' tonight, but—"

The walls of the living room seemed to dissolve until she saw down a glorious vista of joyous scenes. A world for two.

"Rita who sent them to you," he cried abruptly, a sudden fear leaping into his eyes, "tell me."

She smiled mysteriously.

Another girl had opened the gates to happiness through her generous gift and Rita gave her postponed shopping not a thought.

SPITEFUL WILLS

Great Britain's new Family Provision Act puts an end to an angry testator's right to cut off with a shilling certain members of his family who displease him.

As the law now stands he must make suitable provision in his will for his widow, unmarried daughters, sons in their nonage, sons and daughters who because of mental or physical incapacity cannot earn their living. If any such person contests a will leaving property to charity or to persons outside the family, the courts will inquire whether reasonable provision has been made for these dependents; if not the will may be set aside and assets redistributed at the court's discretion.

A little of a testator's old privilege of resentment is nevertheless left to him. Under what some Britons call the "dirty linen" clause, the court may inquire about any appellant's conduct toward the person who has disinherited him. It may then proceed to make such allowance as it deems the appellant worthy of receiving.—New York Sun.

MASSASSAGA LADIES' AID

The regular monthly meeting of the Massassaga Ladies' Aid fas held on Aug. 3 at the lovely summer home of Mrs. John Weese at Roblin's Lake.

The cool breeze from the lake made the surroundings very pleasant on a warm day. Mrs. William Jose had charge of the program. An opening hymn was sung and prayer was offered by Mrs. Herrington after which a Psalm was read. The greater part of the meeting was spent in talking over the reopening of th church after its being newly decorated. An ice cream social was planned and ways and means of making money discussed for the future.

The roll was called by Mrs. Dulmage, secretary, and minutes of the last meeting read. Nineteen members were present. A delicious lunch was served by several ladies. Mrs. Weese served lemonade and a social half hour was spent.

Cardinals Trounce Reds Twice As Result of Pinch-Hitters' Circuit Blows Before 40,807

Redbirds Prove They're Definitely in National League Race Over Week-End

DIZZY DEAN WINS

All Doubleheaders in American League Are Evenly ivided

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Cincinnati's raucous Reds may or may not be "in" but St. Louis Cardinals definitely aren't "out"—either to callers or the National League pennant race.

They held a reception at Sportsman's Park yesterday for the senior circuit leaders and devoured both halves of a doubleheader to the noisy satisfaction of 40,807 fans, third larest turnout ever to a baseball game in St. Louis.

As a result of their 4-2 and 4-3 triumphs the Redbirds chiseled Cincinnati's lead to 6 1-2 games, took the "crucial" series two games to one and sent storm warnings skyward all around the league in anticipation of the stretch battle to come.

The fact that yesterday's bill attracted a throng in excess of St. Louis' biggest previous recorded baseball turnout proved the "show me" people of Missouri have been shown.

Home Runs Win

Enos Slaughter hit home runs in both games, his blow in the first coming with a man on in the sixth and putting St. Louis in front. Don Padgett delivered a pinch homer with one on in the eleventh inning of the nightcap, and pitcher Mort Cooper hit his second home run of the season for the deciding run in the eighth.

There were a lot of fireworks all along the Major League front.

Equal Record

For the second time this year New York Giants clustered seven home runs in a single game, tying the National League record, as they beat the Phillies 11-2 in the first game of the doubleheader. In the second game capable Carl Hubbell uncovered a four-hit hurling job to win 6-2. Roommate Mel Ott helped with his 23rd home run.

Dizzy Dean came out of hiding to give the Chicago Cubs their third straight victory over the Pittsburg Pirates, 5-4, giving the Buccos only one run after the second stanza.

Boston Bees pieced together 30 safeties in sweeping a double bill from Brooklyn Dodgers, 13-6 and 8-2. Dolph Camilli of the Dodgers hit his 19th home run, longest ever seen in Ebbett's field, in the first game, but Joe Sullivan pitched a six-hitter in the nightcap.

Split Dual Bills

All the doubleheaders in the American League were split.

A home run by Frank Hayes with two on in the ninth gave Philadelphia Athletics the first game with the Yankees, 12-9. Then the boys from the Bronx turned right around and won the second, 21-0, Behind Red Ruffing's three-hit pitching. Babe Dahlgren and Joe DiMaggio each hit two homers in the second game.

Bob Feller pitched a three-hitter to give the Cleveland Indians a 2-0 victory over the White Sox, but in the second game Lefty Thornton Lee turned the tables, 3-0(on five hits.

Red Sox Win

Boston Red Sox ran their winning string to seven straight by walloping the Washington Senators, 9-1, on Fritz Ostermueller's seven-hit pitching, and then lost the second, 6-3, in spite of home runs by Ted Williams and Bobby Doerr.

St. Louis Browns outslugged Detroit to take their second straight from the Tigers 11-7. The Browns crowded seven runs into the eighth inning.

In Saturday's play the Yankees routed Philadelphia 18-4 while St. Louis downed Detroit 17-3. Boston Red Sox beat Washington 9-5. The Indians edged out Chicago 3-2.

In the National League bill the Reds defeated the Cards 8-4. Brooklyn won from Boston 10-3 and Chicago beat Pittsburgh 6-4. The Phillies nosed out the Giants 4-3.

ERNEST YOUNG WINS CANADIAN SOAP BOX TITLE

Boy From White Plains, N. Y., Wins Major Honors

Ernest Young, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Young, Belleville, won the Canadian "Soap Box Derby" championship, defeating Donald Vanwinckle, Toronto, in the Canadian finals at Akron, Ohio, yesterday afternoon. Over 40,000 persons braved a torrential downpour of rain in the early part of the world's championship "Soap Box Deby" races at "Derby Downs" in Akron to witness the races, that saw Young finish third in the International or world's championships, that followed the American National and Canadian events.

Clifford Hardesty, of White Plains, N.Y., won the National and International events, winning the American National after two dead heats had been declared. Hardesty continued on to defeat Young and Harvey Wright of Panama in the world's championship event.

Canadian Title

In winning the Canadian championship at Akron, Young experienced little difficulty in vanquishing Vanwinckle, his closest rival, who hails from Toronto in one of the most spectacular races of the day. The entire crowd of 40,000 persons stood to a man and heralded Young in victory, but were more paramountly interested in the Akron entry lad, who advanced to National American finals only to be eliminated by Hardesty, the new world champion "Soap Box Derby" champion. Strangely enough the International champion last year who defeated Bobby Wilson of this city, was also a native of White Plains, N.Y.

A new course record was established yesterday in the elimination heats by a youthful driver from North Platte, Neb., whose machine was "cracked up" in the semi-final heat and could not be repaired in time to compete in the final event for the United States championship, which was won by Hardesty.

Special trophies and medals were won by Ernest Young in his achievement of winning the Canadian "Soap Box Derby" championship.

Pretty Toronto Girl Headed For Another Olympic Boat Ride

Jeanette Dolson Sews Up Sprinter's Role on Eve of 21st Birthday

MEET AT HAMILTON

Several Records Shattered as Girls Compete in Canadian Track and Field Championships

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 14 (CP)—Veteran of an Olympiad and a British Empire meet at 21, pretty Jeanette Dolson of Toronto is heading toward another Olympic boat-ride to Finland next year. She just about has a sprinter's role all wrapped up.

On the eve of her 21st birthday Saturday, Miss Dolson spread-eagled some classy opposition in the 60 and 100 metres races at the Canadian Women's Track and Field Championships in Hamilton's Municipal Stadium. She showed the famed Dolson "kick"—that last-yard spurt—at its best.

Miss Dolson shared the spotlight with two intermediates, Phyllis Lafoy of Sault Ste. Marie, and Nancy Murrall of Toronto, who cleaned up five events between them, and with the individuals and teams who shattered four Canadian records. The marks fell in the junior baseball throw, the intermediate discus throw and the junior and intermediate 400-metre relays.

Gains Revenge

Beaten by Helen Morrison of Toronto in the recent Ontario championships, Miss Dolson gave proof her supporters had nothing to worry about as she beat the British Columbia sprint champion, Marion Borden of Powell River, in the 60 and 100. Miss Borden raced with Miss Dolson from the start of the shorter race but the "kick" brought the Toronto miss home in front by inches.

The 100 was Miss Dolson's from the break. Miss Borden and Miss Morrison stayed close until the last five yards when the winner drew away to win by six feet with Miss Morrison a like distance behind Miss Borden. Miss Dolson ran the 60 in 7.8 seconds and the 100 in 12.5.

In the relays and a team from Toronto Laurel Ladies brought the junior 400-metre record down 4-10-second to 51.4 to defeat Toronto St. Clair Ladies and Toronto Lakesides took the intermediate record down 1 2-10 seconds to 51.2 in winning from another St. Clair team.

The other records went to Betty Stark of Laurels who tossed a baseball 204 feet, six inches, breaking the old mark for juniors by more than five feet and Jessie Smerdon of Toronto, who upped the intermediate discus mark 2 1-2 inches with a heave of 100 feet, nine inches.

Good Prospects

Grooming for a place on the Olympic team Miss Lafoy and Miss Murrall gave promise of big things when they become seniors. Miss Lafoy, who learned hurdle only this summer, equalled the Canadian record of 13 seconds in winning the 80-metre hurdles from Jessie Stott of Hamilton. She also won the high jump, clearing five feet, and the broad jump with a deap of 16 feet, 4 1-2 inches.

Alternating between the jumping pit and the track, the 18-year-old Soo girl won her heat in the 80-metre intermediate race and finished inches behind Miss Murrall in the final. Miss Murrall took the intermediate 100 in 13 seconds, beating Peggy Davis of Montreal.

There were other good performances notably by Robina Higgins, of Winnipeg, who won the senior baseball throw and her specialty, the javelin throw, and was second to Lois Schoenberg of Hamilton in the senior discus. Corinne Cooper, Montreal negress, won the 200-metre dash from Geraldine Wilson of Saskatoon in 26-7 and Mary Haydon of Ottawa easily was best of the high-jump field, clearing five feet, 1 1-2 inches. The red-haired Miss Wilson won the senior shot put with a toss of 31 feet, 5 3-4 inches.

Beryl Nurse of Chatham, Ont., was another junior to do well. She finished second in a heat of the 60 metres for girls 14 years and under and got a third in the final to Grace Gray of Toronto and Agnes Langeson of St. Catharines.

Miss Nurse won the junior broad jump with a leap of 14 feet, 9 1-2 inches to beat Corona Waldrum and Marjorie Cordner of Toronto.

About seventy members and visitors took part in a mixed jitney on Friday evening. The winners were Miss Fitzpatrick, Stirling; Mr. Belch, Dr. Gowlby, Tweed; Mr. Leworthy, Trenton; and Mr. Correll, Mrs. Cross, R. Backus, Mrs. M. Vanner and Carl Fisher of the Belleville Club. After the play lunch was served and a real time was had by all.

The men's singles will commence on Monday, Aug. 21st, have you put your name down yet, if not give it in to Harvey as soon as possible.

Ab Wonnacott and Don Osborne were playing doubles on Thursday night against Charlie McGuire and Doug Row. On one of the ends Charlie drew the cat back and the following is the conversation that took place:

Ab to Don: How many are they laying.

Don: Seven shots.

Ab: What will I do.

Don: You had better block the draw and stop them from getting eight.

Our mixed rink tournament is on Wednesday, have you made up your team yet we need you.

On Thursday evening one of the best games of doubles was played in the club doubles competition, Ossie Hales and Mac McLean vs. Jim Fraser and Bob Wray. Ossie bowled one of the best league games I have seen in many a long day, and Bob's partner was not taking any back seat, it was very close affair until the fourteenth end when Bob broke away. It was a good game for Bob to win and a hard one for Mac to lose.

The Tip Top cup is now in the hands of Joe Black and Alf Symons, it has changed hands every time to date. Ab Wonnacott is next in line to redeem it. "Can you do it Ab."

Philadelphia, Aug. 14 (AP)—The International Baseball League is seriously considering a 1940 schedule calling for twin bills every Sunday with the clubs taking Monday off....The bout promoter Jim Mullen really wanted to take back to Chicago for a Comisky Park showing was Billy Conn vs. either Bob Nestell or Buddy Knox—but he could not get Conn....The Pirates have just about decided to let that floodlights contract....Mike Jacobs personally guarantees Ambers and Armstrong will go on as scheduled and that Armstrong will make the weight......Philly looks about the same after a three-year absence except that the Athletics are in seventh place instead of eighth.

Conn vs. Guz Dorazio may do a $20,000 net business tonight if the weather is good....Odds on Conn now are down to 5-8 which is more like it....The White Sox are using the yellow ball in infield practice, but are not overly excited about it ....Max Baer got even with Lou Nova by beating him in a bowling bout, 449 pins to 313, the day before Lou left for the east....Leo Durocher has served notice on the Dodgers than the main idea now is to finish ahead of the Giants.

They'll have to enlarge the hall of fame if this keeps up....A Richmond, Va., softball team used three pitchers in one game and every blooming one of 'em twirled hitless ball......Dixie Walker, Dodger outfielder, is advertising in the papers for a lot hair pin which he carried as a luck piece.

Corbys A.C. were denied their request for affiliation in the senior "B" series of the O.A.S.A. at a special executive meeting of the Association held in Toronto on Saturday, executive member Harry Rollins informed us this morning. The Corby entry was a post entry as it was and the Association did not desire to set a precedent in accepting such entries, however, one of the more prominent senior "B" clubs in Toronto assured Harry they would be glad to play a two-game series with the Corbys in the near future. It seems Toronto is the only centre outside of Western and Northern Ontario to sponsor senior "B" league and the Toronto play-downs will not be concluded for at least a month. "If the Association had have accepted Corbys' entry into the senior "B" ranks, the local nine would have had to lay idle for four or possibly five weeks," explained Mr. Rollins. However, the O.A.S.A. is quite anxious that a senior "B" zone is sponsored in the east including Kingston, Peterboro, Oshawa and Belleville. In order to test the relative strength of our own local softball and that of a senior "B" classification Corbys may accept the proposal of a home and home series with one of Toronto's better esnior clubs.

It was disclosed at Saturday night's Bay of Quinte League meeting that the Air Force should be credited with one more win than was announced last week. It seems the Flyers journeyed to Picton last week, without the knowledge of the league heads, and played their postponed game of some time ago with the result the Flyers handed the Rorke-led nine a 5 to 4 defeat. Now Picton has completed their schedule, with the exception of a tie game with the Flyers. The Airmen's win over Picton gives them three victories, eleven defeats and three tie games left. The Belleville "Orfuns" have won five, lost 11 and have a tie and a postponed game with the Airmen left to play. The postponed game will be played in Belleville Tuesday as a twilight fixture, when it's practically do or die for both clubs concerned.

The standing of the Bay of Quinte League:

	Won.	Lost.	Tie
Picton	13	4	1
Napanee	11	6	1
Belleville	5	11	1
R.C.A.F.	3	11	3

Very little was accomplished at Saturday night's Bay of Quinte loop conclave, Secretary Crossman and the Napanee delegation being absent owing to motor car difficulties. However, it was disclosed that Belleville is only one full game afront of the vastly improved Flyers. As the picture now stands the Airmen have won three and Belleville five, but the Flyers have three tie games and a postponed game yet to play, while Belleville only has two games unfinished, leaving the edge slightly on the side of the Flyers in this respect. Nothing was done regarding the league play-offs. President Lorne McDougall intimating that another meeting would have to be held later this week. In the meantime the replay of three games left was ordered by President McDougall with the post-schedule reading as follows: Tuesday, Flyers at Belleville; Wednesday, Flyers at Picton; Thursday, Belleville at Flyers and there is a possibility that the Airmen may still have to play their remaining tie game with Napanee on Friday.

"The Major League's All-Star game is slowly, but surely, degenerating into a contest between the respective league-leading teams," complains Maurice O. Shevlin, sports editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, who wonders why players from other clubs are ignored in the starting lineup and advances the suggestion that "a rule could be set up that all eight teams in each league must be represented in the starting lineup—not just on the squad—before a second member of any team could be named, and the game would have a real interest in each city."

American league batters say Detroit has the best hitting park and the ball carries best in St. Louis. The Yankee stadium in New York and Comisky park in Chicago have the poorest backgrounds.

Kid McCoy, the old-time boxer, always puts his socks on standing up. He is 66 now and has no waistline.

Ernie Young won the Canadian Soap Box Derby championship at Akron, Ohio, yesterday winning over Canadian representatives. However, in the world's championship race Ernie finished third the American and Panama drivers finishing ahead of Young. In winning the Canadian championship, however, Ernie received due recognition and the awards that go to the winner of this event. Strangely a lad from White Plains, N.Y., 11-year-old Cliff Hardesty, won the American and International events, duplicating the feat of another lad from the same city, who won last year. Over 40,000 people witnessed the races as rain fell during the early part of the day. Young defeated Donald Vanwinckle, Toronto, to annex the Canadian championship to qualify him for the world's championship event.

Sport Spice — Cec Perdue's Peterboro ballsters won two on Saturday in the Intercity senior loop to fatten their average..With a blast of home runs the Cardinals put the Reds to route for a dual loss yesterday before 40,000 Mound City fans....Pinch-hitters came through for Manager Ray Blades in a seventh inning attack of the second game, after Curt Davis had won the opener....The Reds are still 6 1-2 games in front of the Cards, while the Yankees added a half game over the week end and are leading the Red Sox by six full games today....With one of his periodic comebacks Dizzy Dean halted the Pirates march with a 5-4 win for the Cubs before 25,000 or more yesterday in the Windy City ....Tony Paczkowski, former Kingston moundsman now hurling for McIntyre Mines in the Nickel Belt loop, won his own game with a home run over Toburn in the 11th frame Saturday....Joe Burk, the world's ace amateur sculler, chalked up his 36th consecutive rowing victory at the Navy Day regatta yesterday.

APPRECIATION SHOWN

Ottawa, Aug. 14 (CP)—Ottawa Senators of the Canadian-American Baseball League were presented with gifts Saturday by the Twilight for a lost hair pin which he carried baseball fans all of whom are at least 65 years old.

Between games with Saturday's doubleheader with Cornwall Bisons the oldtimers lined up on the diamonr to give each member of the team a set of military brushes in an impressive ceremony.

Wally Schang, popular 48-year-old playing manager, was given a Gladstone bag, by the old timers, who presented the same gift to business manager Vic Wagner who admits members of the club free of charge to all games.

PORT HOPE WINS

Port Hope, Ont., Aug. 14 (CP)—Port Hope eliminated Cobourg Ponies from the Lakeshore intermediate baseball league playdowns Saturday by beating the Ponies 5-4 for their second straight victory in the best-of-three series.

Three double plays featured the winners play. Port Hope never was headed after netting four runs on two walks and three singles in the first nining. The Ponies tied the game in the fourth, however, only to have Port Hope win out with a single run in the fifth inning. Port Hope will meet Bowmanville for the group honors.

LITTLE GIANTS TAKE REDWINGS FOR DUAL LOSS

Jersey City Enjoy 2½ Game Lead in International League

Having proved to their entire satisfaction that the early bird still catches the worm, Jersey City's Little "big Giants" enjoyed a 2 1-2 game hold on first place in the International League today.

By the simple means of scoring early and then just barely holding off the opposition to the end, the Little Giants nipped Rochester in a doubleheader yesterday, 5-4 and 6-5, to add a half-game to their league lead.

They tallied three times in the first inning and two in the third of the first game and splurged in the opening frame of the nightcap for all six of their runs.

The double defeat dropped the Wings a game-and-a-half out of second place, since Syracuse Chiefs blanked Toronto Maple Leafs 2-0, behind Ted Kleinhans' five-hit elbowing in their single game. A walk to Kleinhans and consecutive singles by Len Kahny, Dan Taylor and Ed Longacre in the sixth netted both the Chiefs' runs.

Buffalo split with Baltimore in a night bill, taking the nightcap 4-3 behind Bob Kline's six-hitter, after dropping the opener 7-3, when the Orioles went on a spree for five runs in the sixth. This even break enabled the Bisons to move within half-a-game of Rochester.

Newark Bears, aiming at a first division berth, clubbed Montreal 11-4 by the combination of George Barley's seven-hit pitching and a 13-hit batting attack in a game cut to eight innings by rain. The nightcap of the scheduled doubleheader was washed out.

The Maple Leafs were defeated 4-2 and the Royals downed the Chiefs first 7-2 in Saturday's play. Baltimore blanked Bisons 3-0. Rochester won 5-3 from Jersey.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday August 15

A DAY of memorable events is presaged from the astrological "mixed influences" holding sway. It is probable that following a sudden upheaval a new regime may be entered, in which enduring good and stability of affairs and fortunes is assured. A decisive change of interests, plans and contracts may call for new surroundings, disconcerting at first but followed by promise for sound future underfooting, with elders and superiors lending a hearty hand. "Let patience have its perfect work" is a good motto for this day.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of far-reaching influence on the future life and its fortunes. Wholly unforseen events may call for an abrupt about-face in the affairs, with new interests, environs and associates. This upheaval, unwelcome at first, may reveal very definite promise of an increase of possessions and substantial cooperation from superiors.

A child born on this day, although changeable and possibly restive, will have much stolidity of character, being steadfast, industrious and persistent winning its way with the support of elders.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

O. B. A. RESULTS

(By The Canadian Press)

All the hopes of Stratford Nationals for a second straight Ontario Baseball Association senior championship can still be cut short in their own group, for the Nats have no bed of roses in their Intercounty Association finals' with Brantford Alerts.

Playing at home, Stratford needed 10 innings and a mighty home run by Bob Carrick to defeat the Alerts 4-3 Saturday as the best-of-seven series for the Intercounty senior "A" title began. Games will be played Wednesday and Saturday this week.

Carrick smashed the first ball pitched over the right field fence in the extra inning to decide the contest. Buzz Given went the route on the mill, allowing seven hits, striking out five and walking one, while Brantford used Chuck Silverthorne and Flash Gordon on the mound.

Scoring seven runs in the eighth inning, Guelph Leafs defeated Kitchener Panthers 8-4 in the first game of the best-of-five round for the Intercounty senior "B" championship. Gordon Richter was the pitching victim of the late uprising.

Niagara Falls Brights made sure of first place in the Niagara District league by whipping St. Catharines 12-2 hammering the pitching of Dick Vanstone and Roy Martin for 16 hits while Johnny Anderson restricted the St. Kitts team to seven blows. Marbison, Brights first baseman, had a perfect day with a double and two singles in three official times at bat.

In another Niagara district battle, Port Erie defeated Thorold 9-1. In the Intercounty senior group, Peterborough defeated Columbus Grads of Toronto 10-4 and downed Toronto Findlays 6-1.

MOON ON THE WATER

INSTALMENT 26.

Miss Shaw smiled.

"I know you didn't say anything about being heartbroken—but bigger fools than I am know that most of the unhappiness in life lies at the masculine door, more's the pity. Mine did." She laughed a little scornfully. "There's nothing very romantic about me now," she said. "But there was a time when I lost my appetite and pounds in weight, and mooned about reading poetry by the yard, and all because some young jackanapes threw me over for another girl." Her cheerful laugh came once more.

"He's a married man now—a grandfather, too, so I hear—and I reckon I've been the lucky one." And then with an abrupt change of subject she asked?"

"Have you any people?"

"Two sisters."

"Fond of them"

"Well," Jane said in perplexity. "Yes, I suppose I am—but we're so different."

Miss Shaw nodded. "I can never see why we should be expected to love our relations because they happen to be relations," she said calmly. "It's against all logic; however, don't let me corrupt your ideas about things."

Jane laughed. She felt as if she had known this woman for years instead of less than an hour. There "I like you—and I don't like many Jane's thought, Jessica Shaw said, was something about her blunt friendliness which was like a tonic.

And then, as if she could read people—but I hope when we get to Par, we shan't just shake hands and say good-bye."

"I hope so, too," Jane answered, and meant it, and then Miss Shaw said surprisingly. "If you're tired and would like me to shut up, say so and I shan't be offended."

Jane shook her head. "I should like you to go on talking," she answered, and then irrevantly she asked. "Why don't you like men?"

"Oh, I like them all right," Miss Shaw said breezily. "But I've no illusions about them—they're too selfish and they've too good an opinion of themselves—but that's the fault of us women, I suppose. We stick them up on pedestals, and then when the poor things turn giddy and topple down, we blame them for not being able to stick there." She snipped open the suitcase lying beside her on the seat and produced a book. "I'm going to read—and you're going to sleep—you look tired out in spite of what you say," and without another word she settled herself in the corner. Jane curled up and shut her eyes. She tried hard to think—to make her mind blank so that she would fall asleep, but the noise of the train seemed to be saying over and over again as Gavin had said, "You do care—you do care, you do care."

"And of course I do," she told herself hopelessly. "And in spite of what Miss Shaw says about forgetting I shall always care."

The train rushed on through the night, and presently Jane slept. It was getting light when she opened her eyes. Jessica Shaw was still wide awake and apparently engrossed in her book.

"Had a nice sleep?" she asked cheerfully.

Jane tossed back her untidy hair and rubbed her eyes. "Are we nearly there?" she asked.

"Nearly—it's six o'clock," Miss Shaw said. "And there's a sign of coffee—the attendant has just been along to ask whether we would like some, and I said yes."

Jane groped in her handbag for a comb and ran it through her hair. "What a sight!" she said, glancing at herself in the mirror.

"You slept quite peacefully," Jessica said calmly. "No tossing about or dreams." She shut her book and put it away, and then with her usual bluntness she asked, "Are you running away from home?"

"Oh, no," Jane said quickly. "I'm going to write to my sister as soon as I've decided where to stay and give her the address."

Jessica said, "Humph", and then after a moment, "I'll tell you why I asked, it's because—and you'll probably think I'm crazy seeing that we've only just met—I wondered whether you'd care to come abroad with me?"

Jane gasped. "Abroad? With you? But I couldn't afford it — I haven't much money, besides —" She stopped and the older woman said.

"I like you—and I think we should get on well together. In a vague sort of way I've made up my mind to go to South Africa —it's one of the places I haven't seen—and if you care to come, too, as my guest, of course, you're welcome. Don't answer in a hurry — think it over. Here comes the coffee."

Jane went back to her corner, her brain in a whirl. To go abroad had always been her ambition — she remembered how she had envied Gavin his experience—rough as it had been—and how willingly she would have gone with him to Canada, or any other part of the world—if he had wished it. And now this amazing woman had offered to take her, although they were almost strangers; it was unbelievable.

"What in the world would Pamela say?" Jane thought in bewilderment, as she stirred her coffee.

Did she want to accept? Then suddenly she thought, "It would be a way out. It would be an answer to everything."

And yet—this woman was a complete stranger! She could imagine what Pamela would say!

"Mad, that's what you are. Whatever next will you do? Why, she may be a murderess or anything."

Jane looked across the carriage at Jessica Shaw and met her eyes.

"Yes, I know what you're thinking," Miss Shaw said calmly. "You are wondering whether I'm out of my mind—or if I have some dark and dramatic ulterior motive—". Her merry laugh rang out. "I assure you I am exactly what I appear to be—rather an eccentric but perfectly honest woman. I can give you my solicitor's name and address if you like and you may make your own inquiries. Have you ever been abroad?"

Jane shook her head. "No, and I should love to go, but—"

Miss Shaw interrupted. "Think it over—there's no hurry. I don't propose sailing tomorrow or the next day." She suddenly pointed towards the window. "Look at that sky—did you ever see anything so blue? We're going to have fine weather."

She put down her coffee cup and went out into the corridor, letting down the window and sniffing the fresh morning air with keen enjoyment, and after a moment Jane followed.

"I can smell the sea," she said, and she was suddenly conscious of rising spirits. Life wasn't so bad after all; the great thing was not to let it get you down—never to look back but always ahead. Surely these must still be something good lying in store for her.

The woman beside her said suddenly. "I've been told of some people who let rooms close to the sea—people who have lost their money and take in lodgers for a living—would you care to call on them and see what we think of the place?"

"It sounds delightful" Jane answered, and then half dubiously she added, "but do you want me with you? I mean, it seems rather presumptious on my part to—"

Miss Shaw laughed. "You funny creature! Do you think I should have suggested it if I hadn't thought we were going to be friends?"

"I think you're wonderful," Jane said, and she knew that in spite of her fancied desire to be alone she had rather dreaded it. Miss Shaw looked pleased.

"Well, then, we'll call it a day, whatever that means," she said. "But don't imagine I shall expect you to be tied to me from morning till night—we're both perfectly free agents, only when you feel like companionship, I shall be there." The train was slowing down.

It was a very depressed Pamela who drove slowly home from the station. She was really a matter-of-fact person who took life without much enthusiasm, expecting very little in the way of excitement, but Jane's sudden departure had shaken her from her usual unruffled state of mind and had forced home the not very happy realization that their old life together was indeed over.

Dulcie came running down the stairs.

"Mary says that Jane's gone away! What in the world for! Has anything happened? She must be mad to go away at this time of night. Where has she gone? And isn't she coming back?

Pamela walked into the drawing-room without answering.

Dulcie followed her. "Why don't you answer? What is all the mystery about? If anything has happened, surely I have a right to know?"

"I should think you know already," Pamela said bitterly. "Eve' since you came home, you've done your best to make Jane's life a miser—you've tried to come between her and Gavin, and now you've succeeded, that's all—and I hope you're satisfied."

INSTALMENT 27

Dulcie laugher, not very mirthfully. "Don't be absurd" she said sharply. "I don't want Gavin — I never wanted him, and if Jane's so stupid as to be jealous—" She broke off to say presently. "If that's all the trouble, I can soon put things right. I'll see Gavin — and—"

Pamela turned. "You've done enough already," she said. "And it's too late to put things right. Jane has broken her engagement, and it will take more than you—or that precious Gavin either —to patch things up again. She was always too good for him." And then suddenly she began to cry. "She's gone, and I don't believe she means to come back and, it's you who have driven her away; you with your hateful conceit and —and always wanting every one's admiration. She was happy enough till you came home — you might have let her alone. Don't you know enough men without trying to take Gavin?"

Dulcie sat down on the arm of a chair; she looked a little pale. "Gavin was as much to blame as I am," she said sullenly.

"That's not true," Pamela answered, mopping her eyes. "He woudn't have bothered about you at all if you hadn't done your best to make him. You were always putting yourself forward—asking him to drive you places—going out of your way to meet him—you know it's true—and men are such fools. I suppose he couldn't see that Jane's little finger was worth a thousand times more than your silly face and stupid conceit."

Dulcie shrugged her shoulders. "How long have you been Jane's champion" she asked. "But you needn't worry. I'm sick to death of this place—and I'm going to marry Josh Hallard and get out of it. I'm evidently not wanted here."

"No, you're not," Pamela answered. "And it's the best thing you can do—if Mr. Hallard really wants to marry you," she added cuttingly.

Dulcie laughed. "That's merely silly. "She stifled a yawn. "Well, I'm going to bed." She walked to the door, turning to say, "I've written to Josh and I expect he'll be here in the morning, and if it's all the same to you, you might be decent and not try to queer me with him—not that you could," she added.

Pamela turned out the lights The tears were still running down her cheeks when she went up to her room. She felt as if some ruthless hand had scattered the ordered peace and contentment of her life, and even the thought of Sidney Dale and of his quiet devotion brought her little comfort.

But in the morning Pamela felt a little ashamed of her loss of self control. Jane would be all right—she always muddled through somehow, and perhaps after all she and Gavin would make it up and every thing would settle itself happily.

But the house still seemed empty and the sight of the breakfast table laid for one was a fresh reminder—Dulcie seldom had breakfast except in her own room—and Pamela's heart sank again. Funny that the absence of some one who had never seemed of much importance could make such a difference. She sighed and took up the paper, wandering painfully where Jane was, and how soon she would write; Jane hated writing letters.

And then her attention was arrested by a headline on the front page of the newspaper:

"Fatal Accident on Portsmouth Road—Midnight Collision."

Her fingers suddenly tightened their hold of the paper, and her heart began to beat so violently that she could hardly breathe as her eyes caught a well-known name.

> The dead man — Augustus Hallard—better known to his many friends as Josh Hallard—was driving back to London when his car came into collision with—

"Pamela! Pamela!" Dulcie's voice suddenly rang through the house. "Pamela—aren't there any letters for me?"

Pamela tried to answer, but she could find no words, and then she heard her sister's footsteps running down the stairs, and a moment later she was in the room.

"Hasn't the postman come yet? I'm expecting a letter from Josh. Why—what's the matter?"

Pamela crumpled the paper into her lap.

"Nothing—at least—"

But Dulcie broke in quickly. "Something has happened — it's in the paper," and before Pamela could move or prevent her, she had torn the paper from her sister's protesting hands.

In spite of her promise to Pamela, it was four days before Jane wrote to give her address.

Once she and Jessica Shaw were safely installed in the little cottage by the sea of which Jessica had spoken, Jane suddenly collapsed. She fainted unexpectedly while she was unpacking her suitcase, and Jessica promptly put her to bed, where she stayed for forty-eight hours, sleeping, and sometimes waking to the soothing voice of the sea, too weary to trouble about anything.

The cottage, which was picturesquely called the Shell, perched on the top of a cliff with a wonderful view of the sea and with a tiny winding path leading down to the sands from its own diminutive garden.

It was kept by a middle-aged couple named Barton, a husband and wife who frankly admitted that to take paying guests was the only means by which they could add to a small and inadequate pension.

"And we like it." Mrs. Barton told them the morning of their arrival. "And we have been very fortunate—we always seem to get delightful people."

They had nobody to help them with the work, but that did not seem to matter the cottage was spotlessly clean and the food was good, and after Jane's collapse both husband and wife did everything in their power for her.

And on the third morning Jane woke up feeling, as she whimsically expressed it, "as if I'd shed all my old clothes and got a brand new rigout," and then when Jessica laughed she added, "And I'm going to get up. It's sheer waste of time to lie here any longer with that glorious sunshine and the sea at the front door."

Jessica did not argue. "Have your breakfast first anyway," she said sensibly.

It was something new for Jane to be waited upon—she could not remember that she had ever had a day's illness in her life, at any rate since she was quite a child, and she ate her breakfast, luxuriously propped up with pillows, and with the latticed windows wide open to the sunshine and the sea breezes.

And then quite suddenly she remembered Pamela.

"She'll be so worried. I promised to send my address directly I knew where I should be staying."

"You can do that this morning," Jessica said soothingly. "Or you can wire if you would rather."

But Jane wrote—just a short note of apology for not having done so before, and saying that she was very well and that The Shell was an ideal place for a rest cure.

Pamela answered that letter by return.

"I've been so worried," she wrote. "We've had more trouble since you went away. Mr. Hallard is dead — he was killed in a motor smash—I enclose a cutting from the newspaper."

Dead! Jane closed her eyes for a moment against the bright sunshine, with a terrible feeling of loss.

She had thought of Josh so often since that strange day when she met him in London, and she sometimes wondered whether, at some time in the future, she might not write to him, and now he had gone.

It was some time before she could find the courage to read the rest of Pamela's letter.

". . . Dulcie is in an awful way, of course, not because she cared about him, because I am sure she didn't, but because of what she thinks she has lost. She went into hysterics as soon as she heard, but it didn't last long, and since then she has been worrying as to whether he had left her any money. Isn't that just like her? I am glad you are all right—I was afraid something had happened to you when you did not write. We have not seen anything of Gavin, but I hear he had left the Binghams, and Mrs. Bingham says she does not know where he has gone. What a dreadful year this has been! I do hope we have reached the end of our troubles and that next year will be brighter. Sidney and I have decided to be married in June —probably the first week, but, of course, you will be home before then."

June put the letter away and went down on the sands.

Josh Hallard dead! And yet the sunlight still danced on the sea, and she could feel its warmth on her face; and then she thought, "Supposing it had been Gavin!"

Supposing Gavin had been killed! For the rest of her life she would have had to bear the knowledge that they had parted in anger and that she could never have forgiven him, or asked him to forgive her!

INSTALMENT 28

Where had Gavin gone, Jane wondered, and, what had happened about the partnership upon which she had built such hopes for their future together? But that seemed to matter surprisingly little, and at the moment anyway she felt that she did not want to think about the past at all; she just wanted to be left alone and to forget.

And she thought, "I suppose I'm very lucky in some ways, because I've got Miss Shaw."

Already they were like old friends and only that morning Jessica had said, "Don't you think we might be 'Jane' and 'Jessica'? It's so much more informal."

When Jane returned from the beach Miss Shaw was ensconced in a deck chair reading a book, but presently she laid it aside to ask, "Have you though any more about coming abroad with me?"

Jane flushed a little; she had thought a great deal about it, but always there was something in her heart like a touch of a restraining hand which refused to allow her to say "Yes," for, if she went abroad with Jessica it would mean good-bye to so many things.

And so it was a little while before she could answer, and then she said, "I have thought a good deal about it, but, you see, I have two sisters at home—"

"You told me," Jessica answered, and then, after the slightest pause, she said, "And is there any one else at home?"

Jane did not pretend to understand. "There was," she said faintly. "But that's all over."

"Is anything ever—all over, do you think?" the older woman asked, and then as Jane turned her face away she said, "I suppose you wouldn't care to tell me about him, would you?"

And presently Jane told her; just the simple facts of her meeting Gavin. "There was a moon," she said, and she had the queer feeling that she was relating some one else's story and not her own at all. "And I have always been superstitious about the moon; it seems to be unlucky for me," and then she stopped as she seemed to hear again Gavin's voice as he had spoken to her that first night:

". . . And be their rest unmoved,
By the white moonlight's dazzling power,
None, but the loving and beloved,
Should be awake at this sweet hour . . ."

She gave a half sigh and went on with her story, ending with the words, "You see, he never cared for me—not really."

Jessica was lighting a cigarette, and she threw the match away before she answered, "I wouldn't be so sure of that if I were you."

"But I know," Jane said.

"And—where is he now?" Miss Shaw asked.

Jane shook her head. "I don't know. I don't suppose I shall ever see him again anyway."

"I wouldn't be so sure of that either," the elder woman said. "Life has a queer way of doubling back on itself, and the world is very small."

She smoked in silence for a moment before she went on. "And so it's this man who is preventing you from saying that you will come abroad with me?"

"Oh, no," Jane answered quickly, but in her heart she knew that Jessica was right. For it is one thing to say good-bye and to swear that you never want to see some one again—but tomorrow or the next day the bitterness fades and the memory of happier days returns, and the old longing raises its bruised head and will not be denied.

"Well, there's no immediate hurry," Jessica said presently. "But don't forget that my offer holds good, will you?"

"I shan't forget," Jane said, and she leaned over to touch the older woman's plump hand. "I shall never be able to thank you for all your goodness to me," she added, but Jessica said in her brisk way, "Nonsense; it's one for you and two for myself, and besides, it would be a poor sort of world if we couldn't help one another now and then, wouldn't it?"

Jessica was always optimistic and cheery and bright, and yet life had not given her a great deal except money; at heart she was a lonely woman in spite of her declaration that she was thankful she had no relations.

There was another letter from Pamela the next day.

THE TOWN LOAFER

The most original idea of the year is probably that of Thomas E. Pratt, a retired railroader of Missouri.

His idea of retirement is to loaf, and he has beaten the loafers at their own game. He went to work and fitted up a downtown office in which to do his loafing. It was fitted up with a desk, papers, filing cabinets full of old pictures and mementoes, and a jug of drinking water. There he sits, seven hours a day, loafing.

When old friends want to loaf with him they come to his office and loaf. They don't bother people who want to work. They just loaf.

It is possible that Thomas Pratt has done his share toward solving a great world problem. He has put loafing in its proper perspective. — Hamilton Spectator.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 14 (CP) — Small gains were recorded in the early session of Toronto Exchange today. Western oils were unchanged. Trading continued slow with volume at 91,000 shares.

Gains outnumbered losses in the mining section. In heavy trade, Kerr Addison picked up four cents to 2.04 and similar advance was made by San Antonio, Lake Shore rose ⅜ while prices were up for Pickle Crow, Wright Hargreaves, Chesterville, Preston East Dome and Teck Hughes.

Noranda, ¼ at noon, improved in later trade while Consolidated Smelters held its early advance.

In the industrials, Massey Harris, International Nickel and C.P.R. were up fractionally. Oils were steady.

Western oils posted unchanged prices for Okalta, Davies, Petroleum and Union Gas.

New York, Aug. 14—(AP)—Buyers, while timid, were out in sufficient numbers today to put up stock market leaders fractions to a point or so.

The list limped a bit in early dealings, but subsequently began to edge forward. Prices, near the fourth hour, were around the best with volume small.

Stocks fairly popular at one time or another included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, American Can. Kennecott, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, Orp., and Loew's.

In a mixed Canadian group fractional gains were scored by C. P. R. and Dome. Distillers and Lake Shore slipped back while most others, including Dominion 4s in the bond market, were unchanged.

Oils were hardly buoyant notwithstanding the proposal of the Texas Railroad Commission to shut-down all the state's wells for 30 days, cutting the petroleum supply around 40,000,000 barrels based on July output.

Trading Slow on Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 14.—Egg prices were generally easier on the Toronto open produce market Saturday, while butter and cheese held steady. Trading in all lines was extremely quiet.

Although prices weakened, a slight improvement in enquiry for eggs was noted. Receipts, however, were still quite sufficient for the demand, and ungraded eggs drifted downward in price. A-large eggs in this section declined to 23c and A-medium to 22c, down 1 cent from Friday. Retailers' prices moved irregularly, A-large eggs dropping to 28c and A-medium to 27c, while B grades advanced slightly to 21c. Demand improved for B's as the large spread between retailers' prices on grades A and B made the undergrade eggs attractive to buyers.

First-grade creamery butter was unchanged at 21¾c lb. Receipts were not exceptionally heavy and demand was fair. The market remained quiet, and although trading was light, there was no accumulation. Holders of Western butter were asking 22¼c, but no sales were reported.

Business in butter on the Canadian Commodity Exchange during the week continued largely of a storage and distributive nature, with no further reports of export sales. Shipments for the week amounted to only 600 boxes of creamery butter.

Montreal Potatoes Drop.

Montreal, Aug. 14. — A drop of about 15 cents marked potato prices on open produce markets here last week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Cheese, eggs and creamery butter prints and solids all eased slightly while Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter firmed ½ cent.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-¾ cents a pound and solids for 22-22¼. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter in wholesale jobbing lots made 21¾. Receipts: 19,596 boxes, compared with 18,245 a year ago.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11¼. Quebec white and colored were both quoted at 10½. Receipts: 32,762 boxes, compared with 31,256 a year ago.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27 cents a dozen for A-large, 25-25½ for A-medium, 19-20 for B-large, 14½-15 for C. Receipts, 6,676 cases, compared with 8,040 a year ago.

20 DEAD

been moved four inches inward and the rail tie plates respiked to the ties in the new position, said T. J. Foley of Ogden, Utah, assistant Southern Pacific Division Superintendent.

As this evidence of what Foley termed "clearly a case of sabotage with murderous intent" was uncovered, Nevada State Police asked officers throughout the State to be on the lookout for a man whose ears had been cut off.

Police Chief Andy Welliver of Reno said he was informed this man had been "acting suspiciously" at Fernley, and had inquired yesterday morning at a Fernley garage, "has anything happened?"

Part of Train Crosses on Momentum

The diesel-powered cars on the crack limited, which was on its regularly scheduled 39 1-2 hour run from Chicago to San Francisco, carried across the steel bridge by their own momentum, but the derailed baggage car lurched out of control and dragged most of the other cars in a wild topple from the tracks.

Some of the cars crashed into the bridge, causing it to collapse into the river 15 to 20 feet below. Six of the cars crashed after it in a deafening roar. The streamliner was travelling at 50 to 60 miles an hour.

Sleeping passengers were hurled from their berths at the crash. All except the rear four cars were derailed.

The horror and the heroism of the night were told by A. C. Munger, Omaha attorney who, riding in one of the rear cars, escaped unhurt.

Victims Torn to Pieces

"Many of the victims were literally torn to pieces, with hands, feet or arms cut off and their bodies otherwise mutilated," he related.

"I had just gone to bed and was lying in my berth awake. Suddenly there was a violent bump, apparently caused by part of the train leaving the track. This was followed by a succession of bumps and swerving as the cars started piling up in the creek bed.

'As soon as the movement and noise stopped, uninjured persons ran out into the dark and started breaking glass in the car windows to get the living out.

Terribly Lonely Spot'

"It was a terribly lonely spot. We had to tear up articles in the cars to build bonfires for light, because the power supply was put out of commission.

It was an incredible sight to see that big train piled up like matchwood. The steel bridge across which the engine jolted was literally torn to shreds as it was struck by gyrating cars."

Like others of the survivors, Munger paid high tribute to the courage of Thelma Ristvedt of Chicago, stewardess and the only registered nurse aboard, who administered to the injured despite a "terrific blow on the head."

. P. Hecox, veteran engineer aboard the crack flier, ran and stumbled about a mile to the nearest phone to spread the alarm which brought medical aid rushing to the scene.

Evidence of Deliberate Wrecking

Heloox said a section crew found "positive evidence that somebody had deliberately wrecked the train."

"It looked as if the spikes had been loosened on the rail leading to the bridge, and the angle iron connecting the rails had been removed. Then the rail had been moved in about four inches.

"Whoever did it placed tumbleweed so I couldn't see it, but that wouldn't have made any difference. The train was going 60 miles an hour, and even if I had seen the rail out of place I couldn't have stopped it."

As an anti-climax the dining car of the rescue train caught fire enroute to Reno. Outside of more shock to nervous passengers, no damage resulted.

Foley estimated damage to the train at more than $500,000.

The man "with both ears off" wanted for questioning about the disaster was described as 35 years old and weighing 135 pounds.

Motorists Overhear Drunken Man

San Francisco, Aug. 14—(CP)—Description of a possible suspect in wrecking of the $2,000,000 streamlined train, "City of San Francisco" was furnished police by two young Michigan motorists.

Police said the men, whose names were withheld, related that early Saturday they overheard a drunken railroad man at Wells, Nev., say:

"The railroad never gave me a break. I've worked as arailroad man since the war, but I never got anything."

The man then showed his feeling by touching a match to his cap and throwing the blazing cap at a Chinese in the restaurant. Police were told he had dark hair, weighed about 160 pounds, and wore blue denim.

Wells is a small railroad town in eastern Nevada, about 85 miles from the scene of the wreck.

'Tomatoes' on Potato Plants Prove to be Natural Seed

Strange Growths, That Resemble Green Tomatoes Seen on Herbert Muir's Plants

VERY RARE

One of those rarities of Nature, and incidentally one that in all probability will explode the theory of the Niagara Falls farmer who declared he had tomatoes growing on potato plants, was seen today, when Herbert Muir, Bleecker Avenue produced a cluster of green cherry-like growths that have appeared on his potato plants.

The growths approximately one-half inch in diameter have appeared in clusters of from three to five. They resemble a green tomato in every respect and are about the size of a black cherry. The bud-leaves fall over the end exactly like those of the tomato while inside are rows of seeds in a juicy formation.

Mr. Muir sought the advice of an agricultural expert who declared the growths to be the natural production of the potato seed. "They are very rare" he said, "and are used to improve the varieties of potato." He laughed at the theory that they were tomatoes. "The only similarity is in their appearance", he stated.

Mr. Muir, who declared he had never seen the growth before, added that several plants from seed sown this year produced the strange additions. The seed was purchased at the Bishop Seed Store, Front Street.

PEACE OR WAR DEPENDS ON HITLER SAYS BALDWIN

New York, Aug. 14.—(CP)—If a general war breaks out, "aerial warfare may leave a legacy of hatred no war has left before", according to Earl Baldwin.

The former British Prime Minister, who arrived here yesterday to address a session of the World Congress for education in democracy, told interviewers that peace or war in Europe "depends on one man—Hitler".

"Hitler has a brilliant mind, but it is abnormal", the former Prime Minister declared.

The 72-year-old statesman said the British hate war and think it a "ridiculous" method of settling disputes.

"But the realization of what totalitarianism stands for has caused intense hardening in the minds of our people", he added.

LOVE AND BUSINESS LETTERS MIXED 25 YEARS AGO

Weatherford, Okla., Aug. 14 (AP)—Twenty-five years ago Max Bachum sat down to write a couple of letters. One was a message to his sweetheart. The other was an order for a 12-gauge shotgun.

Before long, he received a reply to the love note—from the Chicago mail order house where he had intended to buy the shotgun. He liked the letter from the girl clerk who wrote the reply, so he answered her. That started a regular correspondence.

Finally Bachum went to Chicago, visited the mail order house, and met the girl. Today they are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary on a farm near here.

In all those 25 years, Mr. Bachum has heard nothing more about the order for the shotgun.

SWIMMER SAVES 2 TRAPPED IN CAR

Timmins Man Sees Car Plunge Into River and Jumps in and Opens Door

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 14 (CP)—Heroic action by Christie (Fred) McNulty, well-known Timmins swimmer, saved the lives of two persons who were trapped in a car which plunged into the deep water of the Mattagami River about a mile from Timmins late last night. The near-victims were A. Golka, Hollinger miner, and William Gore, a restaurant cook, both of Timmins.

McNulty, who was swimming at a riverside dock about a mile up the Mattagami River from the town limits, saw a car suddenly leave the road and plunge over a high embankment into the deep water of the river.

McNulty ran along the shore to a point where the auto had disappeared below the surface. He dived in and worked frantically to open one of the car doors to allow the trapped inmates to escape and rise to the surface.

One of the trapped men was unable to swim but McNulty assisted him in getting to the shore of the river in safety. The other man was able to swim to shore after he had been released from the car.

Golka, who was driving, said that he had been driving along the road when the right wheel of the car suddenly seemed to stop turning causing the car to swerve.

"It happened so quickly that I wasn't able to bring the car to a stop,' Golka told police. He and Gore said the auto turned a complete somersault in the air before landing far out in the river.

The car has been salvaged.

27 FATALITIES ACROSS CANADA DURING WEER-END

Highways and Water Account for 22 of These Deaths

2 DOUBLE DROWNINGS

By The Canadian Press

Highways and lake and river water accounted for 22 of Canada's 27 week-end fatalities as muggy weather in many districts lured thousands away from towns and cities to seek relief on country roads and at bathing places.

The toll included two double drownings and two double motor fatalities. Altogether, 14 met death at bathing places and eight were killed on the roads. Two died in railway accidents and three encountered other forms of violent death.

Both double drownings and one double-toll road accident occurred in Quebec. At Point Calumet, Ernest Paquette, 42, and Henri Bechard, 35, both of Montreal, were drowned when a canoe overturned in a mountain lake there.

At Three Rivers a similar fate took Alphee St. Arnault and Leo Neaumier. Their canoe capsized in swift St. Maurive River.

Two Die in Car Crash

In a head-on collision near Ste. Marthe, Hubert Brideau, St. Isidora, N.B., and Joseph Lanteigne of Three Rivers were killed and two others critically hurt. The other dual highway fatality was near London, Ont., when two London men, William Lamphier, 18, and Norman Beatty, 20, were pinned under their overturned car after Lamphier, the driver, swerved to miss a buggy.

Six of the other 10 drownings were reported in Quebec. In the Blanche River at East Templeton, Sam Smith, 29, Hull, and Louis de Repentigny of Gatineau were drowned a day apart at the same spot. Alphone Theberge of Quebec drowned when he fell from a barge in Louise Basin, Quebec City.

Drownings

Other Quebec drownings were at Grand Lac A L'Epaule in Laurentides National Park where Paul Verret, 18, Beauport, a park employee, drowned when his small boat overturned; at Chicoutimi, when Desneiges Martel, 26, drowned while swimming; and at Lake St. Louis, when Harry Clayton, 23, jumped from a canoe for a swim.

Names of two Ontario holidaymakers were added to the drowning toll. In Windsor, Fred White, 30, Detroit, was thrown from his small craft into the Detroit River by the wash of a passing ferry. When his punt collapsed, Earl A. Leckie, 29, Sarnia, drowned in Lake Huron at Bright's Grove near his home.

The Bow River at Calgary and an inland lake in Nova Scotia each took a victim to complete the drowning list. Paul Sergerrie, 21-year-old Quebec transient drowned while swimming in the Western River and Leon Scanglebury, 20-year-old Negro of Sydney, N. S., died in a lake near his home.

Struck by Train

Victims of train accidents were Edgar Lampreau, 26, killed when struck by a Canadian National Railways train at Sudbury, Ont., and Jean Baptiste Cote, 63, Ste. Perpetue, Que., who died at a level crossing under a Quebec Central passenger train.

Robert Long, three, died in hospital from injuries suffered when struck by an automobile driven by George Ellis near his Toronto home. Philip Yarn, 42, was killed near Liverpool, N.S., when a truck struck a car he was helping to repair.

Lightning killed Allen Fleming, 36, in a field near Orillia, Ont., and Theresa Szassi, nine, died after escaping gas exploded in her parents' Welland, Ont., home. In the case of J. Edgar Connell, 31, Quebec pulpwood firm employee, a verdict of accidental death was returned Saturday following the man's death from a bullet wound suffered as he prepared for a hunting trip.

Joseph Poitras, 11, was killed instantly on the highway near Sudbury, Ont., when struck by an automobile allegedly driven by D. A. Sevan of Toronto.

Leonard A. McCombe, 30-year-old Durham lineman, died in hospital from injuries suffered when aiding members of a Hyrdo-Electric repair gang in cleaning up after a storm which swept the district.

Poles Distrust New Peace Plans By Compromise

People Appear to Feel Concessions to Germany Could Do Nothing but Postpone War

'PROPAGANDA MOVE'

Poland Seems to Fear Possible Settlement Which Would Give Germany Some Success in Campaign to Isolate Poland by Making Her Appear "Aggressor"

Warsaw, Aug. 15—(CP)— Polish press and official circles indicated open distrust today of various rumored plans to save peace by new forms of compromise.

There was no evidence that Poland had altered her opinion that concessions to Germany in the conflicting German-Polish claims to rights in the Free City of Danzig could do any more than postpone war.

The newspaper Ilustrowany Kurjer of Krakow said that Germany obviously hopes to arrive by Sept. 15 at a political arrangement whereby "Poland can be mastered in three or four weeks."

'What is Burckhardt Up To?'

Reports concerning the visit of Professor Carl Burckhardt, League of Nations High Commissioner to Danzig, to Adolf Hitler last week were carried in the Warsaw press under such captions as: "What is Burckhardt up to?"

Polish circles had described the Berchtesgaden meeting between Burckhardt and the German Chancellor as a "propaganda move" by Hitler.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Clouds do not burst, but they seem to, judging by the devastation caused by exceedingly heavy rains which have given rise to that designation An inch of rain an hour is called excessive by the U.S. Weather Bureau. This rate may easily be greatly exceeded for a short time when strong ascensional currents of air, which may have kept aloft large quantities of rain and hail, are suddenly by the storm moving over a crest, thus releasing the suspended moisture. This released water added to the normally heavy downpour causes the torrents of rain called a "cloudburst".

Military Writer Says 'Even Balance' of Axis and Democracies in Land Forces Exists

400,000 'BYSTANDERS'

Biggest Counterweight is Soviet Russia With 2,000,000 Under Arms

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—Europe's men under arms, exclusive of naval and air forces, were estimated at 8,500,000 by a military writer for Reuters news agency.

The writer concluded that there appeared to be "a fairly even balance" at the moment between the land forces of the Rome-Berlin axis and the British-French front and associated powers.

The breakdown of the estimates: France 1,000,000; Britain 600,000; Poland 500,000; Turkey 300,000; Rumania 275,000 and Greece 200,000; total 2,875,000.

The Rome-Berlin axis: Italy 950,000; Germany, 1,750,000; total 2,700,000 or 2,900,000 if 200,000 is added for Hungary.

Spain And Yugoslavia

Segregated were figures of 150,000 for Spain and 300,000 for Yugoslavia.

In still another bystander or neutral category were 400,000 for Bulgaria, Belgium, the Baltic States, the Netherlands, Portugal and Switzerland.

The review concluded:

"The biggest counterweight is naturally Soviet Russia, whose 2,000,000 men would give a marked predominance to any group with which they made common cause."

STEEL ORDERED FOR THE POST OFFICE

Toronto, Aug. 15.—(CP)—Redfern Construction Company officials said today they have ordered $524,000 worth of steel from the Hamilton Bridge Company Limited for the new $2,000,000 post office to be constructed on Fleet Street, just across the railway tracks from Postal Terminal A at the Union Station.

Construction Company officials took possession of the site of building yesterday.

Roosevelt Advances Thanksgiving One Week, Raises Protests, Praise

New York, Aug. 15—(AP)—President Roosevelt's announcement he would break a 75-year-old tradition by moving the American Thanksgiving Day up a week—to help out business—stirred both protest and praise today from governors, turkey growers and bootball coaches.

The President said at Camop Bello Island, N.B., yesterday he had decided the last Thursday in November was too late for thanksgiving, so he was advancing the date from Nov. 30 to Nov. 23 this year.

Many different dates have been used since the Pilgrim Fathers celebrated the first thanksgiving in the United States in 1621, the President said. He said business people had complained the "last Thursday" date established by President Lincoln usually threw the holiday too close to Christmas and cut down on Christmas shopping.

The changed promised to upset the United States' multi-million dollar turkey day football industry.

Some of the season's biggest and oldest football games are scheduled for Nov. 30, which the schedule makers thought would be Thanksgiving Day. Moving the games back to Dec. 2 or up to Nov. 23 will be impossible in some cases, because the teams already have games on or near those dates.

James Frasier, Chairman of the Selectmen of Historic Plymouth, Mass., where Thanksgiving started, said he "heartily disapproved" the change and would place the matter before the Selectmen.

"Plymouth and Thanksgiving are almost synonymous, and merchants or no merchants I can't see any reason for changing it," he said.

Governor George Wilson of Iowa said that if he had anything to say about it, the date would remain Nov. 30. He's a Republican.

On the other hand, Governor William Vanderbilt of Rhode Island, another Republican, said "there appears to be some common sense in the idea."

Most produce men agreed the change would have little effect on the supply of turkeys available for the Thanksgiving market, although one said, "a week can make a lot of difference."

WORK OF SABOTEURS?

Twenty people were killed and 114 injured when the crack Southern Pacific train, "City of San Francisco" was derailed in Eastern Nevada. Authorities claim that the wreck was caused by some person uprooting a rail, moving it slightly and then spiking it down again—out of line with the other rails.

JAPAN AWAITS INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS

Evidently Nation is Not Ready to Extend Operations to Europe

PRESENT POLICY

Tokyo, Aug. 15—(AP)—A source close to the government said today Japan would await "international developments" before radically altering her foreign policy.

(Among the most pressing problems of policy has been the question of a military alliance with Italy and Germany. Japan and the axis powers already are members of a pact for the exchange of police information to combat international Communism.)

It was reported Japan's decision to preserve her present policy was reached Aug. 8 at a session of the five key ministers of the government—Premier Kiichiro Hiranuma and his Ministers of War, Navy, Finance and Foreign Affairs.

German pressure for an alliance was said to be one factor prompting the conferences among Japanese leaders. However, Berlin was said to want more than a guarantee that Japan would oppose Soviet Russia in the event a military alliance were concluded and called into force.

PASSENGER IN CAR LOSES HIS LIFE

His Car Breaks Down, He Accepts Ride in Another Which Strikes Truck

Whitby, Ont., Aug. 15—(CP) — Harry Sweetman of Port Perry, Ont., was carried with manslaughter by police early today as result of the death last night of Andrew Bryant, elderly Ashburn, Ont., resident. Bryant died in an automobile-truck collision on Highway No. 12 at Myrtle, 10 miles north of here.

Bryant's own automobile had broken down and he accepted a ride home with Sweetman.

Provincial Traffic Officer G. R. Waude of Whitby said Sweetman drove his car from a side-road and struck a fruit truck which was proceeding south. Several other passengers were slightly injured.

MANY VACANCIES MUST BE FILLED BY FEDERAL GOV'T

Decision on Election Date Deferred Until After Some of Posts Are Filled

OVER 25 APPOINTMENTS

Ottawa, Aug. 15—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his colleagues now have in their gift more than 25 appointments to high public positions, and a start toward filling these vacancies may be made at Thursday's cabinet council.

It is believed, however, that decision on the date of a general election may be awaited before the bulk of these appointments will be disposed of, particularly the nine senate vacancies and two cabinet portfolios.

Outstanding among the administrative posts awaiting the attention of the government are the following: penitentiaries commission of three, chairman of the tariff board, Lieutenant Governors for Quebec and Prince Edward Island, Deputy Minister of Fisheries, King's Printer, Parliamentary Librarian, Clerk of the Privy Council, Auditor General, Minister to Japan, National Film Board of eight, Finance Minister and Secretary of State.

Nine Senate Vacancies

In addition there are nine vacancies in the Senate, several judgeships, a vacancy on the Board of Transport Commissioners, and the likely retirement of W. S. Edwards, Deputy Minister of Justice, who has been ill for a year.

Dogs Believed Wild In Bush and Swamp

Erin, Ont., Aug. 15 (CP)—Farmers in this Wellington County district said today poultry and livestock have been destroyed by dogs believed to have gone wild in an 150-acre bush and swamp lot north of here.

Wilmer Thompson said his flock of geese were mauled. Four died and several were crippled. Three sheep belonging to other farmers were killed by the dogs.

Fred Nurse said he went to hunt the dogs and saw a large animal which looked half-collie and half-hound.

"I shot at her and missed," he said. "A half-grown pup jumped from the underbrush and I shot at him and he fell."

MANION ATTACKS PRIME MINISTER ON RELIEF ISSUE

Says Mr. King's Suggestion Was Uncalled for That He Was Promoting Dissension

WARRANTS

Says No Man Has Contributed So Much to Disruption of Canadian Harmony as Mr. King

Ottawa, Aug. 14—(CP)—Declaring "no man" has contributed so much to the disruption of Canadian harmony" as Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Conservative Leader Manion today issued a statement commenting upon the Prime Minister's attitude toward Quebec relief problems.

When Mr. Mackenzie King last week told Premier Duplessis and a Quebec delegation he would not consider using the authority of Governor General's warrants to authorize additional expenditures for relief works, Dr. Manion issued a statement recalling that some $27,000,000 had been spent by the present government by warrant in one year, some of it for relief.

Reply to Mr King's Statement

Replying to Dr. Manion's statement last Friday night the Prime Minister suggested the Conservative leader was promoting dissension by entering the argument between Quebec and the Federal Government.

HULL AND QUEBEC POLICE SEEK MAN WHO CARRIED KNIFE

Hull, Que., Aug. 15 (CP)—Hull and Quebec Provincial Police continued their search today for a 50-year-old man who created some consternation in the suburbs yesterday by brandishing a two-foot butcher knife as he walked along little used roads.

Police began their search last night when they were swamped with telephone calls from alarmed men and women who believed the mysterious stranger to be demented. Earl Istead, night foreman at a cement company near here reported to police he saw the man sharpening the knife on railway tracks leading into the plant.

WITHHOLD MILK SEEK HIGHER PRICES

Utica, N.Y., Aug. 15.— (AP)—The Dairy Farmers Union began withholding milk today in 30 upstate New York counties in a strike for higher prices, launched with a protest against what was termed the "anti-farmer" position of the State Agriculture Department.

Archie Wright, general chairman of the Union, said the strike started "with a bang" and added the largest plant at Ogdensburg in northern New York, was "one half dry".

The Union, which conducted a strike two years ago and which claims 15,000 members, is seeking a uniform base price of at least $2.35 a hundred pounds (47 quarts) for milk in August, September and October.

Royal Visit News 'Shots' Replace Nazi Pictures in Pocket Cinema

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—Newsreel shots of the visit of the King and Queen to Canada will replace shots from Nazi-propaganda films which made their way into this country in the form of a sixpenny "pocket cinema" toy, scores of which have been sold to English children.

The "pocket cinema" supposed to contain the advertised "sport, topical and scenic" films, were sold over the counters of many stores throughout the country until the manager of one discovered the contents.

Most of the 25 pictures showed such subjects as: Hitler addressing a mass meeting of Nazis, and giving the party salute; Reich Propaganda Minister Goebbels at the microphone; Mussolini arriving in Germany to meet the Fuehrer; axis flags intertwined.

Officials of a chain of stores said huge quantitites of the toy had been bought in what was former Czecho-Slovakia, but "did not dream" they would contain pictures of the dictators. Further orders for the toy have been cancelled, they added.

The present films are being removed and scrapped and will be replaced with shots from the royal tour of Canada.

Men Threaten, Then Run Away As He Wields Chair

Peter Boychuk Wakened Out of Sleep Grabs Bathrobe and Gives Chase

POLICE JOIN PURSUIT

Two Men Corralled as Suspects in Nearby Lane by Boychuk and Plainclothesmen

Toronto, Aug. 15.— (CP)—Peter Boychuk, 44, early today routed two thugs who broke into his sleeping quarters and threatened to kill him unless he gave them money.

The men pushed in the door to the sleeping porch and grabbed Boychuk. "Give me your money, or I'll kill you," one said. The intruders flung him to the floor and punched him several times before Boychuk grabbed a chair and they fled.

Boychuk grabbed a bathrobe and chased the two. Aided by two plainclothesmen, he corralled two suspects in a nearby lane. Harry Laranee, 39, and Edward Larel, 22, were arrested on burglary charges.

Duty of Canadians To See Canada Says N. S. Premier

Vancouver, Aug. 15—(CP)—Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia, here after a flight from Ottawa, said the main reason for making his first trip across the Dominion was that he felt it his "duty" to do so.

"I feel it is the duty of Canadians, particularly those in public life, to see those parts of the country which they have not seen before," he said on arrival yesterday. "Only in this way can those in one section obtain a grasp of the problems which face those in another."

The Nova Scotia Premier accompanied Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, and J. G. Turgeon, Liberal member of parliament for the Cariboo, (B.C) on a special trans-Canada Air Lines plane.

Mr. Howe, here on his annual inspection of harbor and airport facilities, said the T. C. A. hoped to double its main line service across Canada "by next spring at the latest." At present the main delay was the lack of qualified pilots and "we're training them as fast as possible."

FRUIT TRUCKERS ALLAY FEARS BY RETURNING HOME

There Were Some Fears Held That Kidnap Ring Might Be at Work

Toronto, Aug. 15—(CP)— Fears that a kidnapping ring might be operating in Toronto, with truckers the principal prey, were somewhat dispelled today by the return home of two fruit truckers who had been missing since last Tuesday.

But still unaccounted for were a poultry dealer and his assistant, a milk-truck driver and a tailor whose disappearances have baffled police. Scarcely a clue to the manner in which the four vanished confronted the authorities.

NO DEPRESSION IN PORTO RICO SAYS RESIDENT

Natives Work for 2 Months a Year—Beautiful Weather and No Economic Problems

GUESTS OF ROTARY

An island paradise nestling in the blue waters of the Caribbean; a strip of land one hundred miles long and thirty-five miles wide that forms the largest isle of the Greater Antilles group a paradise in more sense than one since the modern meaning of the word "depression" is unknown within its palm-fringed shores. That is Porto Rico according to Mr. Bud Hill, former Canadian, now resident of San Juan, and a visitor to his former business haunts in Eastern Ontario.

The magic lure of the islands enticed Mr. Hill to its beauties a year ago where he entered the tire business in the capital city of the island.

"A grand place to live," he says. "There you have no worries. Everything, keeps more or less on an even keel the year round. The natives which form roughly sixty-seven per cent of the population work approximately two months of the year during the sugar-cane cutting season. Some of them save their money for the slack season while the greater majority "blow" it, assured of their rice and beans at least when no work is to be had."

"Clothing is the least of their worries. The weather is delightful the year round and the native children up to ten years of age dispense with the formality of wearing even the slightest approach to clothing."

Business Good

"Business generally is good" Mr. Hill stated. "There is very little fluctuation down there and the people generally take things as they come with the result that everybody is, or appears to be, happy." "We have no economic problems. The word 'depression' is as yet unknown as Canada and the rest of the world knows it. There is enough for everyone to live on, so what more do you want?"

Mr. Hill is at present visiting with friends in Toronto but took time off yesterday to dash through Eastern Ontario a territory he covered during his commercial traveller days.

He with Mr. Garffer also of Porto Rico, were guests at the weekly luncheon of the local Rotary Club yesterday.

Miss Rothschild Has a Problem—To Collect Fleas Off Live Grizzly

Toronto, Aug. 15—(CP)—Miriam Rothschild, sister of the Third Baron Rothschild and member of the famed European banking family, is in Toronto with a problem on her hands. Frankly, she admits, she doesn't know how she is going to collect fleas off a live grizzly bear in the Rocky Mountains.

"I can't very well chase a grizzly with a pair of tweezers," said the young graduate in zoology of London University.

Miss Rothschild said she collected worms when she was five years old and has been interested in bugs and insects ever since. Study of fleas was the hobby of her banker-father, the late Baron Rothschild, whom she credits with discovering accidentally the flea which carried the bubonic plague.

CANNIBALISTIC BASS CHOKES ON DINNER

The tragedy of a glutton was disclosed by the find of Wilfred Boyer youthful Pinnacle Street, resident yesterday on the shore of the Bay near the civic bathing beach of a large-sized bass of the small-mouth species which had died in a vain attempt to swallow a smaller fish of the same variety.

The fish which had apparently died of suffocation after being unable to swallow the second bass was found with the victim securely lodged in its throat with only a section of the tail protruding

PULLMAN NAMING INVADES CAR FIELD

A new fad which is likely to capture popular fancy has been observed on the city's streets, the naming in prominent letters of private passenger cars by owners.

This morning a sleek couple parked on lower Front Street to which was attached a stream-lined trailer, rejoiced in the name "Odd Trails" painted in gold lettering on a blue background of the car. The trailer bore the name "Resteasy".

Several cars have lately been observed with fanciful names printed on sides and rear and the fad south of the border is spreading, according to latest reports.

FRUITS ARE CHEAPER BUT DEMAND SLOW

Limes, lemons, oranges and other citrus fruit have been a little cheaper this year in spite of the extreme dryness of the summer, and the heavy consumption of cooling drinks, it was reported by one of the city's dealers today.

"Lately the market for these fruits has not been as good as it should be due to the fact many synthetic preparations for the making of soft drinks have been enjoying good sales, and with soft drinks so cheap and plentiful now, few people are bothering to make the real article out of fruit," it was stated.

A BOATING CLASSIC IT REALLY HAPPENED

"Throw out the anchor", ordered the skipper of a trim C Class sloop which entered port last evening at the government dock.

Quick to obey instructions, a member of the crew seized the 40-pound anchor and tossed it from the deck into the bay. Forty or fifty feet of heavy rope uncoiled itself from a neat pile and snaked over the gunwale to the depths below after the anchor. The untied end of the rope disappeared with a quiet splash into the depths.

Skipper and crew of the Toronto craft after donning bathing trunks and diving repeatedly managed to locate and recover the anchor after considerable difficulty.

NIGHT FLYING PLANES DRONE OVER CITY

Residents of the city last evening were given but a little taste of the preparedness and night flying now engaged in over the British Isles by night flying squads of bombers and defence planes when several planes from the Royal Canadian Air Force base circled the city several times, its motor droning loudly through the darkness. Many residents deserted homes to view the night flying plane whose white riding light glowed like a star as it followed its course through the darkness.

Will Re-decorate The Entrances To Fair Grounds

Elaborate plans for the redecoration of the entrance to the Belleville Exhibition Park were approved at the fortnighly meeting of the Belleville Parks Commission last evening, while additional expenditures upon other buildings, paramountly the grandstand, were suggested by the board.

The main entrance will be restuccoed, painted and made generally more attractive, while the roofs on the cattle sheds and grandstand are to receive the attention of the board in the matter of repair before the opening of the Belleville Fair some two weeks hence. "We may have to spend several hundred dollars in redecorating and repairing the entrances and roofs of buildings before the Fair moves in," revealed Chairman Commissioner W. A. Woodley before the board last night.

Commissioner Harold Armstrong reported that the race track had been carefully groomed and weeded during he past fortnight. "The track is in splendid shape, but we intend to drag it just before the Fair opens and in time for the races," reported Mr. Armstrong. Commissioner M. Callaghan and Secretary F. Wiggins were also present.

The passing of accounts terminated the meeting.

OBITUARY

MRS. C. B. SCANTLEBURY

To many citizens of Belleville, the death of Mrs. C. B. Scantlebury, which occurred suddenly on Monday afternoon at her late residence, 80 Highland Avenue, has brought sincere feelings of regret, and to her intimate friends her passing is a great shock.

The late Mrs. Scantlebury was born 72 years ago in Cannifton. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Elizabeth Vickers Osborne, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Osborne. All her life was passed in Belleville and vicinity. In her passing a useful life, one filled with good deeds and kindnesses rendered has come to an end. She was a friend to many in need and she gave freely of her time in the furtherance of the work of church and charitable undertakings. In Bridge Street United Church she was a prominent and valued worker in the Women's Missionary Society and the Women's Auxiliary. The Wome's Christian Temperance Union also received her active support and in the Women's Auxiliary to the local branch of the Y.M.C.A. she served long and well. At one time, before it became necessary to limit her activities in public service, she was a valued worker in the Children's Aid Society and in the Women's Christian Association. Her work in the latter organization was done principally in connection with relief in Coleman Ward. Mrs. Scantlebury will long be remembered with affection by those who were near to her and by those who enjoyed her friendship.

Surviving to mourn her loss and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended, are three daughters, Mrs. L. B. Morrison, Toronto; Mrs. N. C. Wilbur, Belleville, and Mrs. C. M. Watters, Belleville; two sisters, Mrs. P. F. Canniff, Belleville, and Mrs. C. T. Raymore, Toronto; one brother, Mr. Fred E. Osborne, Calgary, Alberta. Her husband died some years ago.

JUNIOR WINS FOR HE KNOWS

No Need of Two Pairs of Trousers to His Suit for He's Not Like Grandpa

There was a determined look in the eye of the family's young hopeful as he strode into a Front street gent's furnishing store to purchase a new suit.

Mother and the remaining members of the family followed him to lend assistance and advice in his selection of new autumn apparel.

Everything went well for the first few minutes. Color, style, etc., offered no resistance o the combined opinions of the family.

The Climax.

Then came the great question—one or two pairs of pants. The salesman told the family of the distinct advantages of the extra pair of garments. The young hopeful shook his nead. "One pair or nothing. The family argued, coaxed and cajoled, but junior was adamant. One pair was sufficient.

Then mother's face became illumined with a beatific smile. This argument would clinch the thing.

"Son," she smiled, "do you remember what happened to your grandfather's trousers last week. They met with an accident and you know he had only one pair with his suit."

She leaned back to watch the effect of his argument to end all arguments.

Junior's Reply.

But junior was undaunted. "O.K., ma," he grinned, "you asked for it. "Grandpop came home after a night with the boys, sat down on a chair that wasn't there and lost the most important part of his trousers."

Mother stared aghast. Then in a stately manner she gathered her family in tow, and strode out of the store.

Junior bought one pair of pants.

New Lights on Catherine St.

Gleaming three-hundred watt lamps, throwing a brilliant light over the shadows of Catherine street, greeted residents of that thoroughfare last night.

Replacing the old system of "one hundred watters", the new lights fill a long-felt want in that district, according to residents.

Installed by the Hydro Commission as part of their yearly program of lighting one street per year with the new system, the lights are the same as were installed on Bridge street a year ago and extend the full length of the street from Yeomans to Coleman.

Police Blotter

Ralph Greatrix, R. R. No. 6. Belleville, reported to police last evening that his car had become out of control and collided with a pole on the second concession of Thurlow early in the evening. Mr. Greatrix assured the authorities that no person had sustained injuries, the pole was not damaged, but that his car had been somewhat damaged during the impact and was being repaired. No further action was deemed necessary following Mr. Greatrix's detailed report, however.

A slight accident, that resulted in fender damage to a parked automobile, was reported on Front St. and caused some little excitement yesterday. According to police reports a motorcar driven by Chas. Smith, R.R. No. 2, Frankford, grazed the rear fender of a parked vehicle, owned by W. A. Potter, Kingston. P. C. Taylor heard the sound of the impact and halted Mr. Smith, who assured the police he did not realize the collision had been as forceful as had resulted. The matter was later amicably settled, however.

Police today were investigating the theft of two motor car batteries reported to have been stolen from parked used cars at the southern end of Front St. Two alert teenaged boys informed the police they saw the batteries taken, with the result that arrests were expected in the matter this afternoon.

COUNCIL HOLDS SPECIAL MEETING

Members of city council at a special meeting called this evening by Mayor Bone will discuss the purchase of further equipment for the city fire department, equipment which has been recommended by chairman of the Fire Committee, Alderman Laurie Lewis, supported by Mayor Bone.

Among other matters to be dealt with, a report of the civic Beach Committee will be received by Council, and a review of the building situation will also be undertaken, it is expected.

CATTLE STEALING CHARGES LAID AGAINST 3 MEN

Two Durham Heifers Missing from Farm in Richmond Township

HELD AT NAPANEE

Police Hold Belief Missing Cattle Disposed of in Toronto

Three men were lodged in Napanee jail yesterday on charges of theft of cattle, preferred by Provincial Police. The men's names, now in custody, were given as William Gibson, Lennox County, Arthur Sexsmith and James Rogers, of Tyendinaga. The trio are charged with the theft of two Durham heifers, the property of Milo Schamerhorn, Richmond Township in Lennox County.

The apprehension of Gibson, Sexsmith and Rogers culminated an extensive police investigation. Provincial Constables W. E. Smith and C. Fisher placed the three men under arrest at their homes yesterday. Provincial Police today said that signed statements had been voluntarily tendered by the men, but the authorities would reveal no further information, except to say the cattle mentioned are believed to have been disposed of in Toronto.

On several occasions this summer complaints that grazing cattle have been stolen were received by Provincial Police from the vicinity of Richmond Township.

The theft of Mr. Schamerhorn's cattle is not the only incident of its kind reported to the authorities, Inspector Frank Gardner revealed today.

Other cases are being probed as well.

Letters to the Editor

Belleville Aug. 15, 1939.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir:

In your issue of July 29th., a Mr. Robertson of Toronto in a letter said that I was wasting my time in opposing amalgamation for there was no such proposal before the Canadian people. Before he finished his letter he said the only way out of the railway problem for the Canadian taxpayers was through an arrangement with the C.P.R.

There has been a lot of time and money, thousands of dollars spent on commissions and investigations to solve the railway problem and still no solution is in sight so I am not alone in wasting time on the railway question.

The latest proposal is enforced co-operation but if Dr. Manion knew what the majority in this section thought of his plan, I do not believe he would advocate enforced co-operation. Let the Canadian National Railways run on their own with no favor to either road.

Mr. Robertson does not seem to realize that there are nearly 100 C.N.R. shareholders to one of the C.P.R. living in Canada and if it were not for the C.N.R. shareholders the C.P.R. could not operate then why should we not be interested in what becomes of the earnings of the railways. The profits should go to reduce the debt instead of going out of the country. Don't forget that if the C.P.R. has any profits 88 cents out of every dollar would have to go out of the country and if the C.N.R. has one dollar left it remains here to redeem our debt just that much. Mr. Robertson should know that in times of depression the C.N.R. also was able to pay all operating expenses and at times to have surpluses but did not get enough to pay the interest on the debt.

What better off would the C.P.R. be than the C.N.R., if it had to pay interest on all the cash subsidies land grants it received in the past fifty years. This question is open to anyone.

Here are a few sayings that the taxpayer would do well to think about:

The C.N.R. is yours use it.

You will benefit yourself by reducing taxation.

You'll do better than par if you ship by C.N.R.

Mr. Robertson may think I am wasting more time but I believe I am on the right track.

I know that a great many agree with me along with the editor of the old Toronto Globe.

My solution for the railway problem is ship and travel C.N.R. whenever possible.

D. S. LaRue.

POLES DISTRUST

What Poland fears is a possible settlement which might give Germany some success in what the Poles consider to be a German campaign to "isolate" Poland and establish this country as the "aggressor" nation.

Meanwhile Poland today observed the 19th anniversary of the battle of Warsaw, the victory of Poland over the Bolsheviks in 1920.

Official quarters say Poland never would accept a mission such as that which Britain sent to Czecho-Slovakia a year ago, headed by Viscount Runciman, now Lord President of the Council in the Chamberlain government.

Hitler, Poles believed, gave Burckhardt a "last proposal" to transmit to the Poles. Hitler's distaste for negotiations "in the Geneva style" is well known, Polish observers said, but this latest 'offer'—if impossible for Warsaw to accept—would let him tell the world that Poland had turned down a generous compromise.

If the Czecho-Slovak experience was any criterion, these sources said, the Fuehrer's next move would be to harness all his propaganda for the final blow.

"You may now expect," a well-informed diplomat predicted, "all the familiar slogans of last September: 'Germany's honor is at stake. The situation of the German minority in Poand is becoming intolerable. The Reich has exhausted all peaceful means.'"

Danzig Issue
League is Ready

Geneva, Aug. 15—(AP)—The League of Nations is ready to abandon its protection over the Free City of Danzig, League sources said today, if Poland approves such action as a step toward solution of its quarrel with Germany.

Dr. Carl Burckhardt, the League High Commissioner to Danzig, has returned to the Free City after a weekend of consultations with Chancellor Hitler.

A formal report by Burckhardt on his talk has not been received by the League Secretariate, but unofficial reports indicated that negotiations were under way for a Polish-German "compromise."

Weight was lent to these indications by Burckhardt's conferences with Nazi and Polish officials upon his return to Danzig.

Procedure Outlined

Any settlement, it was assumed in these quarters, would involve the League's withdrawal from Danzig and its replacement by a joint German-Polish authority.

The question of League abandonment of Danzig has come up twice before the council—once last January and again last May—but each time Poland opposed it.

Now, League officials said, a proposal to take the League out of Danzig would certainly be adopted at the coming council session Sept. 8 if supported by Poland.

The procedure, they said, would be for Burckhardt to file a report requesting abolition of his post of High Commissioner and severing the League's power over Danzig as set up by the Versailles Treaty.

Such a report would go first to the committee of three of Britain, France and Sweden, handling the League's protection of Danzig, and then to the council.

Believes Settlement Possible

London, Aug. 15—(CP)—The Financial Times (Independent) said today Great Britain believes that under "certain conditions" the Danzig problem can be settled peacefully.

Commenting on the meeting during the week-end between Fuehrer Hitler and Professor Carl J. Burckhardt, League of Nations High Commissioner in Danzig, the newspaper said:

"Efforts are being made to create an atmosphere favorable for negotiation of the Danzig dispute. Their success will depend very largely on whether Germany is prepared to abandon force and the threat of force.

Resistance to Aggression

"The British government remains firm in its decision to resist direct or indirect aggression, but at the same time believes that, given certain conditions, the problem of the Free City can be satisfactorily settled.

"It is known the Professor Burckhardt was invited to meet Hitler, bu official circles in London have no knowledge that 'a new plan for Danzig' was submitted to him."

The Daily Herald (Labor) warned Germany not to mistake the 'composure' of the democracies, as contrasted with the activity of the axis, for weakness, but added that greater "vigor" in British policy would do much to correct any such misunderstanding.

No Haste in Offering Concessions

"Can the contrast between the axis' activity and the peace front's composure be regarded with satisfaction?" The Herald asked. "Yes and no. It is a healthy change that in crisis the peaceful nations do not hurry to offer 'concessions.' It is some contribution to the future well-being of Europe that the democracies remain so plainly unaffected by the familiar 'psychological warfare' and do not answer threat with threat.

"But the German government, as all its recent propaganda shows, has but the smallest understanding of Britain and its people. It is only too likely to mistake composure for indifference and assume that the absence of fever in our preparations betokens a lack of earnestness in the whole policy of the peace front.

"The danger of any such misjudgment would be less if the vigor and positiveness of British policy were greater."

NO WINNER IN S. HASTINGS LOOP AS TEAMS TIE

Shannonville Battle Cannifton to 6-6 Draw in Fifth Game

VENUE DECIDE

Sixth Game Moved to East; Cannifton Forced to Rally

Foxboro, Aug. 15 (Special)—Held to a limit of seven innings by a league ruling made at the last executive meeting, umpires were forced to call last night's final playoff game between Shannonville and Cannifton just as the interest was getting to fever pitch and the score all tied up at six all, with the result that today the winner in the South Hastings League championship series is yet to be decided. Regardless, however, of which team is eventually returned as champions, the Shannonville nine have at least won a moral victory in that their arguments to have the next game played at Shannonville were finally accepted after a verbal battle of over an hour's duration following last night's no-contest.

Despite the almost unparalleledl show of interest by the fans in the ballgame, this was far excelled by their absolute determination to have the final say as to where the game was to be replayed. Cannifton fans held for the Cannifton diamond and likewise the Shannonville lads for their home town and with the rival managers unable to come to any agreement, it was left to the league executive to decide. Again the issue resulted in a deadlock, however, and the rival managers eventually fought it out with Shannonville winning the verbal argument and the game will be replayed in that town on Wednesday evening. All this excitement merely increases the interest of the fans and Wednesday evening should see records broken insofar as attendance is concened, as with the final series this year between two clubs never before participating in this event, the popularity of the league is regaining all the prestige which it lost a few years ago when importations caused the fans to become disinterested.

Ace Pitchers Used

Just as was expected, Lorne Jarrell, for the homesters and Ken Juby for the visitors were chosen as rival moundsman for last night's all-important battle and after the dust had all settled, emerged from the fray with honors about equally divided. Jarrel was nicked for a total of nine safeties including a double by Spencer, while he whiffed two, walked one and hit one batter. Juby held the opposition to six hits and hung up an even dozen strikeouts, but rather mitigated his performance by issuing two bases on balls and hitting two batters, the last of which forced in the tying run of the game.

Both teams were guilty of several miscues which entered into the scoring with Shannonville being more guilty in this respect than Cannifton. The visitors presented the Cannifton lads with two runs in the first inning when a couple of errors, followed by a well placed hit by Bleekman gave the homesters a nice lead. Again in the second a base on balls followed by an error and a smashing double by Collins netted them a couple more. Shannonville's runs were more of the earned variety and up until the fifth when they scored three runs after two were gone, were forced to play for verything they got. In the fifth, however, Cook singled to start things off and Juby was safe as Gannon booted his roller at second. Everybody was safe again as Empson let Spencer's roller go through for an error filling the bases. Coutts then hit to Collins at third who forced Juby at the hot corner but Cook scored from third on the play, with two more runs coming in when Bleekman dropped Hill's lifter to centre.

Come From Behind

Cannifton came within one of tying the game in their half of the fifth when Collins started off with a double and E. Jarrell was safe on Spencer's error at the initial sack, with Collins scoring on the play. Empson then forced Jarrell at second and Bleekman was hit shoving Empson around to second, only to be cut down at third when Juby snared Smallborn's bounder. Curley singled filling the bases, but Juby bore down to fan pinch-hitter Loucks to end the inning. Again in the sixth Cannifton filled the bases and were only able to push across one run as L. Jarrell was safe on Reid's error to be followed by Collins' single. Empson then drew an intentional pass to fill the bases and Bleekman was hit forcing in Jarrell for the last run of the game.

Collins led the homesters on the offensive, accounting for exactly one-half of his team's runs, getting two doubles and a single in four tries at the plate. Curley also went well at the plate getting wo singles. Reid and Cook went well for the visitors getting a brace of singles apiece while Spencer hit a double but was out trying to stretch it as Farquharson fielded the ball from the road in a perfect play.

Lineups: Shannonville—Reid, 2b; Barberstock, rf; Cook, ss; Juby, p; Snider, cf; Spencer, 1b; Coutts c and lf; Hill, 3b; Barnhardt, lf; Houston, c. Cannifton—L. Jarrell, p; Collins, 3b; E. Jarrell, c; Empson ss; Bleekman, cf; Smallhorn, rf; Curley, 1b; Farquharson and Loucks, lf; Gannon, 2b.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.

Umpires—Jack Carson, plate, and "Lefty" Weeks, bases.

FRUIT TRUCKERS

Jack Maltun and Ben Fishman returned home from the Muskoka district last night in their fruit truck, surprised that their absence since last Tuesday should have created widespread alarm. They said they had been delayed, partly by the breakdown of their truck, during their selling trip to the summer-resort area.

Gershon Case

When Maltun and Fishman were reported missing yesterday, police recalled the case of Morris L. Gershon, Toronto poultry dealer, and his helper, Murray Baker, who left Toronto on a buying trip June 19 and have not been heard of since.

Gershon's empty truck was found several days later, the ignition key in the lock. Police said yesterday the continued absence of the poultry dealer and his assistant led to a belief they had been murdered.

Three weeks after the disappearance of Gershon and Baker, George Flude, 21-year-old milk-truck driver, disappeared on his rounds and his truck likewise was found abandoned with the key in the lock. His records and accountings were in order and police coulld find no reason why he might have disappeared voluntarily.

Yesterday, in the furore aroused by the absence of Maltun and Fishman, police were told that George Stovick, 27-year-old tailor, had been missing since last Tuesday morning when he was seen on the way to work. Known as a regular and reliable workman, Stovick presented just as mysterious a problem in his disappearance.

Delayed by Selling Fruit

Maltun was met by scores of joyous neighbors on his way along Dundas Street to his home last night. It was all slightly mystifying to him until his wife explained he had been regarded as lost.

"Next time I go away and try to make some honest money I'm going to stay at home," Maltun said.

He and Fishman left Toronto with a cargo of fruit and vegetables in an ancient truck. The idea was to sell the produce en route north and buy junk on the way home.

"I couldn't get rid of the fruit right away, so I had to stay a little longer," he said. 'Can't a man stay a little longer without getting his name in the papers."

Fishman said that the pair went fishing on Sunday, when they were unable to pick up the junk they were supposed to get. A "little engine trouble" held them up some more at Huntsville.

NOTED RUNNER UPSETS THEORIES

English Sprinter Has "Two-Gear" Heart, Science iscovers

London, Aug. 15—(CP)— Godfrey Brown, England's crack quarter-miler, has a "two-gear" heart.

He acted as "guinea pig" for Sir Adolphe Abrahams, Dean of Westminster Hospital Medical School, in experiments on finding an index for physical fitness.

Sir Adolphe, brother of H. M. Abrahams, famous Olympic runner, has evolved at theory that the rate of pulse deceleration might provide the index. His work has been described in "The Lancet."

As a rule, says Sir Adolphe, deceleration of the heart's beat begins within 10 to 15 seconds of the cessation of exercise and continues regularly, with a return to the resting rate within 45 seconds.

"But in a few outstanding examples the acceleration of heart action persists for approximately half a minute and suddenly yields to the resting rate.

"It seems as if the circulatory system works on two gears (as in the case of Brown) so to speak. There must be some 'clicking over' of a nervous regulatory mechanism, but I cannot find a satisfactory physiological explanation."

Here is a summary of Sir Adolphe's investigation:

1. Athletic efficiency is tested usually by the response of the circulation to effort or to other factors influencing cardiac acceleration or blood pressure.
2. Every test involving blood pressure is fallacious, because of the emotion factor.
3. The rate of cardiac deceleration after a short intense effort is a valuable index of athletic fitness.
4. For investigation of the effect of prolonged effort, the ordinary tests are impracticable. Running various distances is suggested as a more satisfactory method, and examples of its application are given.

SCOUT RESCUES CAT, THEN VILLAGERS RESCUE SCOUT AND CAT

Bishopstoke, England, Aug. 15—(AP)—Boy Scout John Williamson, 15, did his good turn by climbing an ivy-covered, 60-foot church tower after an imprisoned cat.

Parishoners did theirs by splicing ladders together and rescuing both Scout and cat.

WILL SHE BE QUEEN HELEN III

Among the experts ayes have it. They believe that 18-year-old Helen Bernhard, the Greenwich village girl that has burst like a meteor upon a startled tennis firmament, is slated by fate to wear the crown once worn by Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, and which now adorns the comely brow of Alice Marble. Young Miss Bernhard has won three U. S. national crowns, indoor and outdoors, and scored upset victories at Seabright and Longwood. She now is battling in the eastern grass courts championship at Rye, where she may cross racquets with Champion Marble. Here the magic eye camera gives you an all-embracing peek at Miss Bernhard in action as she plied her formidable forehand. Read the pictures from LEFT to RIGHT and you follow the action. One of Miss Bernhard's playing idiosyncrasies appears to be her habit of sticking out her tongue as she puts the "umph" on the ball.

Be-kilted and tie-less King George appears to be having the time of his royal life as he is pictured with his queen and his children during their visit to the camp he maintains for school boys. This year the camp is at Abergeldie, near the King's Scottish seat, Balmoral castle. At LEFT is Princess Elizabeth; beside her an aide de camp; King George is in CENTRE, then Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose.

MIMIC WAR EXPERIENCE

Peoples of Europe are getting an armed peacetime experience these days and nights of what war might mean, but how far from the actual horrors of war are these mimic events, these war games! It is to be hoped and prayed that the world situation will never go farther and that many who may have an urge for strife will repent before it is too late lest the world be largely ruined.

The war of 1914-1918 was thrust out of the blue on the hundreds of millions of inhabitants of Europe. Nations had in a sort of way military and naval manoeuvres, but the people as a mass did not know what the tocsin meant. Vast populations came to know from grim experience the stark realities of war, millions fled before the military weapons in scenes never before recorded in history.

But in 1939 whole populations get a little idea of what an air raid would be like. Thirty million English were called upon to play their part in a blackout a few nights ago. They saw just enough to make them visualize from what they know of the World War and from what they know of modern implements of destruction that things would be worse than ever before in history, that at the end there would be hatred and bitterness on an unprecedented scale, just as today, twenty one years after the close, we see the bitterness and even some of the anguish of that resort to arms.

IF THE MARTIANS HAD COME

The scientific fact with the imagination which stirred so many persons some months ago about an invasion from Mars provides a writer in the Christian Science Monitor with an opportunity for some gentle satire on earth's nations' armaments and the armament development of the Martians if there are Martians, as we call possible dwellers upon the red planet which recently approached earth.

First the Monitor says "sufficient time has now elapsed to justify the conclusion that no inhabitants of that planet took advantage of that occasion to descend upon any part of the earth." This could be the result of several motives or causes. As the paper says "Its rulers may, of course, have concluded that the present condition of the earth is not a promising one for Martian settlers, and that they would have to postpone the expedition till the refugee problem and other troublesome matters have been disposed of. Or, if bent on conquest, they might have decided that their armament program is not advanced enough to insure them of a victory. If they descended upon France might not Germany come to its aid? Or if they attacked Germany might not Germany be rescued by Russia or Britain? At any rate, we have the satisfaction of knowing that whatever their plans, they never got through to our vulnerable earth.

"But is this, after all, so great a cause for satisfaction? The appearance of an army of intelligent Martians equipped with superior weapons and bent upon the subjugation of the world would make the danger of Danzig seem comparatively slight. Would it not compel all the rulers of Europe to forget utterly their present differences, and at once confer together for pooling their military, economic, and natural scientific resources under the necessity of jointly resisting the common enemy? The dramatic threat of a major disaster inflicted by the Martians would surely produce an accord between the terrestrial Powers.

"Yet the disaster which would befall the nations through a world war would scarcely be less than that of a conflict with Martians. It would be a common catastrophe which none would quite escape. The mentality of human rulers appears to be such that they would forget their disagreements to repel monstrous and unfamiliar common danger, and yet are capable of actually preparing the equally monstrous danger of a general war.

"With a little more imagination, a little more commonsense — without a Martian invasion — rulers would see the necessity of exercising the demon of their own invention."

But Mar's orbit keeps it away from Earth, few if any persons believe Mars is inhabited and if it were it is certain Martians could never reach earth, so the nations of the globe will probably continue to act as they do.

SOME PEOPLE HAVE ALL THE LUCK—while folks were sizzling in the unprecedented heat wave in Ontario particularly newspapermen who follow the gleam on the belief that "The Show Must Go On," one Robinson MacLean, reporter, gets sent up to the Arctic regions by his paper, Toronto Telegram. Under date of August 3, Robbie writes from Kigduluait Bay, Northwest Territory, that it's two degrees above freezing there and the frost is not only on the punkin but only six inches below the moss. He also states that the sun only gets through the polar clouds for an hour or so a week. What a Godforsaken place! ..... which gets into the limelight now only because of the annual roundup of the great Canadian reindeer herd which trekked several years through the storm and blizzard and incredible hardships of every kind to get there in order to furnish a continuous supply of food and fur for the Eskimos of the Mackenzie river basin. A willow bush with a trunk as thick as your thumb, standing four feet high, is considered all the timber in this region, says Robinson MacLean, who evidently thinks the region could stand considerable improvement to be fit for human habitation. Sez he, even the Eskimos stopped living here before the reindeer came, it was so cold and windy. The trek of 3000 odd reindeer from Napaktoolik, Alaska, to the Mackenzie Delta began the end of December, 1929, and finished March 6, 1935. Nice assignment, Robbie, but what gives us old sourdough reporters a pain is the modern frills which cushion a reporter's lot these days. When one thinks back to the muskeg special on the old T. & O., the dogteams, canoes and shoepacks of Canadian transportation out on the fringe of Indian country, then see reporters dashing all over the bush countries high above the trees in modern planes, it just takes most of the rum out of rumance. This assignment for Robbie MacLean must remind him forcibly of the difference of a previous assignment . . .... when he was sent to Abyssinia ... . hotter than hades and forty times as dirty.

CAPE COD CHARACTERS ARE CERTAINLY INTRIGUING, especially as word-painted by Joseph C. Lincoln, in his thirty odd novels with Cape Cod as a background. At least once a year a Lincoln Cape Cod story appears, generally in time for Christmas giving. Of recent years Joe Lincoln has had a boy coming up and the kid seems to be following father's footsteps in a yen to write stories about Cape Cod folk. Now the Lincolns have done it again, Joseph and Freeman Lincoln, in ringing the curtain up on "The Ownly Inn," which brings Cape Cod history up to date with the story laid in the big hurricane which swept the New England coast last year. Novelist Joe Lincoln is a Cape Cod product, comes of a sea-faring family which accounts for the saltwater tang in his stories. "Cap'n. Eri," his first novel, was a best-seller in 1904 and he has been a best-seller ever since. He lives in Villanova, Pennsylvania but spends his summers on the Cape gathering material and atmosphere for his next novel, and as the summer population is large and diversified all the good characters are not confined to the natives. A new book by Joseph C. Lincoln is always welcomed by a large following.

"HOW TO WIN AND HOLD A HUSBAND", a new book by Dorothy Dix, whose famous advice to the Lovelorn has warmed many hearts should be a best-seller for Dorothy has had plenty of experience. Dorothy has been at it 42 years and has a fan mail of 500 letters a day. Her only rival is Beatrice Fairfax, of this Great Family Journal, and we think that Bee is several steps ahead of Dorothy, more up to date as it were. Bee is so darned interesting that some prominent Belleville businessmen are known to be regular readers of her column . . . and if that aint somepin, we don't know what is.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

August 15th., 1919.

Every Home Should Have a Baby

Every home should have a baby. Only by having a baby around can you maintain a proper balance of values. People without babies become materialists—owned by their possessions.

I remember very well the day that freedom came to me. I was the owner of a piano, given me by a generous and (at that time) affluent relative. I was also the father of a lusty small boy, who owned a tricycle, given him by the same affluent relative.

Most of my waking moments were devoted to worrying about a possible conjunction between tricycle and piano. Then, one day, it happened. The small boy, riding hell-bent on his tricycle, went head-on into the polished mahogany —and after that I worried no more.

In that collision I learned the great truth that things are things and babies are babies; that furniture is made to be chipped and scratched, that rugs and upholstery have no other purpose in the scheme of things than to acquire spots and tears.

There is now no item of our domestic equipment which does not bear the imprint of the children who have used it—yes, and the sundry dogs that have dwelt beneath our roof. Our furniture would fetch little at a forced sale, but there is hardly a square inch of it that lacks its treasured memorabilia. Frayed, torn and fingerprinted it all is, but in every mark is the biography of small people who now have small people of their own.

There comes a time in the life of every parent when he indulges himself in the illusion that tranquillity is at hand. Those destructive little creatures have become civilized and gone off to establish their own homes. The old house is silent, and gradually its furnishings are restored to something like their original state. Scratches are polished out; the broken crockery is discarded; the sofa springs, once used in the practice of acrobatics, are sewn back into place nail holes in the walls are puttied up; stained and spotted rugs are replaced or hidden —slowly the house ceases to resemble the middle ring of a circus.

Then the children, laden with books on how to bring up the young, return with their own progeny. And in no time at all we are back where we started.

Babies like bacon, only a small part of which is ingested. The rest is distributed throughout the establishment. It is perfectly amazing how much territory even a small infant can cover and how indefatigable it is in destruction. Only a few days have elapsed since the visit began, but already there is hardly a polished surface without its greasy fingerprints, hardly an implement that is not sticky.

In my youth I had a taste for etchings and first editions, and she whom I adore took pleasure in cut glass and china of extreme fragility. I smile now at those distant days. I have learned that riches cannot be measured by the thing which rusteth away or can be corrupted by the moth or for which thieves break in: riches are in the two-legged little dynamos, roaming around to see what they may destroy. Books are made to be torn and glassware is best sought in the dime store.

Walt Whitman says somewhere that we climb hills only to find new ones in the way. We bring up children, launch them in the world, and settle back for the enjoyment of a promised peace. But the interval of leisured irresponsibility is a brief one. Before we know it we are back at the old job. But there is this great difference: You have the silly notion that your children are yours, to mold as you will; but you suffer from no such delusion about your grandchildren.

This is a comfort. With the notion that you are destiny to your children goes an awesome responsibility. You worry a great deal, and struggle feverishly, for the most part to no purpose, but with grandchildren you are content to play the role of observer and friend—when needed and asked for.

As I looked back on it, I was so busy planning the future of my children that I never had time to notice the present. They say that opportunity never knocks twice, but this is not true, for I am now having a second chance. And if there is anything more interesting than the growth, perceptible almost hour by hour, of a young baby, I have not seen it.

I have heard foolish and inexperienced people say that babies have no personality. They would know better if they had ever taken the trouble to watch a baby. The face is that babies are born with personality. I have an idea that an enormous lot of trouble and sorrow would be avoided if we recognized this—if we took babies for what they are, and quit struggling to make them what we wanted them to be. —Howard Vincent O'Brien in Chicago Daily News.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Are the Symptoms Due to Appendicitis or ood Allergy?

When a hurried call is sent to a physician to attend a patient with vomiting and severe abdominal pains, his first thought is likely to be that the condition is appendicitis and, if life is to be saved, immediate operation is necessary. It is certainly a wiser choice to operate than to wait too long, allow appendix to burst, followed by peritonitis and, perhaps, death.

But vomiting spells and severe pains in the abdomen may be due to poisoning by a certain food to which the patient is allergic or sensitive. Instead of sneezing, large hives appearing on the skin, swollen face, thickened tongue and mucous membrane, the food may cause such severe abdominal pains that pus in the gall bladder or in the appendix may be suspected, which conditions require immediate operation.

The symptoms of food allergy may appear on the skin, stomach and intestines, nose and throat, bladder, nerves and elsewhere in the body.

In most cases the patient and family know that food allergy or sensitiveness exists because there have been previous attacks of head colds, migraine, or one-sided headache, abdominal upsets, hives and other symptoms which cleared up promptly with or without treatment by use of adrenalin—epinephrine— or other remedies.

I have spoken before of the work or food allergy reported by Drs. Walter lvarez and H. C. Hinshaw, Mayo Clinic, in the Journal of the American Medical Association. The foods that most commonly disagree with people are really among the most nourishing foods eaten. The list in the order in which they cause symptoms in any group are —(1) wheat, (2) chocolate, (3) eggs, (4) milk, (5) beans, (6) pease, (7) potatoes, (8) tomatoes, (9) corn, (10) beef (11) onion, (12) pork, (13) fish, (14) nuts.

Is there any simple way that one can find out which food is causing the symptoms that so much resemble appendicitis or serious abdominal trouble?

Dr. L. E. Prickman, Mayo Clinic, says, "To determnie whether a suspected food is actually responsible for a patient's symptoms, the patient should avoid the food for about ten days; if relieved of his symptoms he should then eat the food in sufficient quantities to again bring on the symptoms. This doing without a food and then eating it again to bring on the symptoms should be tried several times.

DEER LIKES BEAR

Jackie is a deer, female, now 18 months old, whose parents perished in the great Vancouver Island fire last year. She lives now with Percy Elsey, who is known as the Lord Mayor of Oyster River. At his tavern there beneath the maple trees you can see Jackie almost any day when she comes in from the woods, where she spends part of her time with other deer.

Her habit is to march into the beer parlor and beg for a drink. After a discreet cupful or so, she goes out and has a sleep, lying down with her friend Spud the dog and the cat, Tib.

The Lord Mayor of Oyster River proposes to tie a bell and a white ribbon on her in September, so please, don't shoot if you see white or hear a dingle.—Victoria Times.

VANCOUVER GAINS

The year 1939 promises to be a banner year for the port of Vancouver, in spite of wars in the Orient and rumors of war in other parts of the globe. The semi-annual report, just issued from the office of the National Harbors Board, shows exports double those of a year ago, imports larger and 20 per cent., more deepsea vessels.

Last year, of course, was not a good year. Wheat exports, particularly, were down. But the port is coming back with a rush, and if the second six months of 1939 matches the first in business, the showing for the year will be little short of marvellous. — Vancouver Province.

Other Days of Early Motoring

It doesn't seem so long ago that we began driving a car. You didn't need any license to drive in those days. Nobody had even thought of such a thing. Cars weren't numerous in those times. They belonged to "the best families in town", if you know what we mean. The total number in Fergus probably didn't exceed 25 or 30. When a person bought a car, it was news. You'd read in the paper the next week that "Bill Jones bought himself a new Chevrolet last week". If Bill lived in the country, it was news indeed, for cars on the farms were rare, and the local correspondent would probably add: "Some class to Bill, eh girls!" And there was some class to Bill, although nobody would want to be seen in Bill's car today, driving downtown on Saturday night, or Sunday morning.

That was no reason why there were no drivers' licenses. It was presumed that anybody who had made money enough to buy a car had sense enough to drive one. There was something to it, at that, for cars were dearer then than now, though you didn't get nearly so much for your money. The garage man would drive you home after you had completed the deal by tr ing in the horse and buggy and paying the rest in cash. He might call around a couple of times after that and give you "driving lessons". They were free with the car. If you had a good-looking daughter or sister who wanted to learn, he would probably call oftener.

As we say, the old-time drivers were mainly self-taught and some of them learned by experience that was apt to be costly. We recall many cases, apart from our own experience. There was the farmer who drove into his barn, slowed down and jumped out, yelling "Whoa" to his new machine, which didn't pay any attention but continued through the end of the barn and dropped, upside down, on the manure pile.

There was the town merchant who stored his car in the cellar, with a stone wall to stop its progress at last. The first time he drove in, the car didn't stop in time, but bumped into the wall, breaking the glass in the headlights. So he got a packing box, narrow enough to fit neatly between the headlights and set it against the end wall, figuring that if the car got away on him again, it would hit the box and not break the lights. He was right at that; it didn't break the headlight, but it did push the radiator back on top of the motor.

There was seldom a trip, even a dozen miles from town, that did not develop some kind of mechanical or tire trouble. In those times, a tire that went 5,000 miles was one of the wonders of the world—and cost about as much as the Hanging Gardens of Babylon. And there were no demountable rims, no extra wheels and no free air at the garages. One tugged off the tire with the help of an assortment of tools, applied a patch and put the tire back on. Then it was pumped up with a hand pump, a hundred strokes for each ten pounds of air, and the tires carried some 60 pounds' pressure. We remember the first time we ever saw "free air". The motorist in whose car we were riding had one brand-new tire. He filled it at a Guelph garage which happened to have about 120 pounds of air in the tank at the time. We never heard whether the tire company allowed him a rebate on that new tire or not.

The boys of a generation ago knew all about taking an automobile engine apart. There wasn't so much to them then, usually four cylinders, with no extra gadgets in the way of fancy carbureters, self-starters, generators, air-cleaners and the like. But every real motorist carried a few boxes of spare nuts, cotter-pins and the like. They were often life-savers.

Perhaps another reason why there were no drivers' permits was because the cars of those days weren't apt to do so much damage in competent hands. The speed limit was 20 or 25 miles an hour. Most cars could exceed it, but not by very much. And if a car turned over, there was no all-metal top— nor any other kind—to protect the driver. So he had to be careful.

But perhaps the real reason why there were no permits was because motorists were not numerous enough to be sources of revenue for the Ontario government of the time. A dollar apiece wouldn't have amounted to much anyway, and there were no paved roads to lay and keep up, no road signs, no traffic lights, few traffic officers and road maps cost 50 cents apiece. —Fergus News Record.

Feathered Friends of Farmer

A recent Commentator Magazine declares that insect pests in this country cause million of dollars in loss every year. The Mexican boll weevil, it says, cost cotton-growing sections from 100 million to 150 million dollars annually; the codling moth destroys over 12 million dollars' worth of fruit trees yearly; while the "aggregate loss from other insect pests to farm crops alone in the United States totals a sum greater than the entire cost of education".

This loss would be magnified many times if it were not for the birds. It may seem strange to the casual observer that the various kinds of birds have each their especial duties in keeping down these pests; and perhaps if farmers understood this better, they might not begrudge them their grubstake; for after all, "a laborer is worthy of his hire."

Discounting a little overlapping, we discover that swallows and whip-poorwills sweep the air of small, gauzy-winged pests such as mosquitoes, gnats and midges; while martins, phoebes, kingbirds and fly-catchers clear it of larger ones. The warblers, some of the sparrow family and the vireos clean the foliage at the ends of branches where plant lice, tree ants, cankerworms, leaf-hoppers, flies, etc., thrive. Thrushes, blue-birds, robins, the mockers, orioles, catbirds, tanagers and thrashers clear the foliage of trees and shrubbery. Fuzzy caterpillars, bagworms and gypsy moths fall to the lot of the cuckoos and orioles, who also devour click beetles, wire-worms, grasshoppers, locusts and spiders that live on the branches. The woodpecker family police the trunks with their bills, drills and barbs. Meadowlarks, bob-whites, bluebirds, robins, sparrows, brown thrashers, ground warblers, grouse— all of these and a few others—work on the ground floor clearing it of maggots, borers, chinch bugs, cut-worms and army worms; and sparrows and finches eat weed seeds.

So the farmer, instead of looking upon the bird family as inimical, with its large spring crop of babies to feed would do well to watch a few of them at work, and note the continual busy-ness of distracted parent birds as they fly from garden to nest with beaks dripping with worms, caterpillars and fuzzy wuzzies that would soon devour every green thing he might plant; or note the sparrows, as I have, trotting up and down pea vines eating plant lice by the thousand, and never molesting the vines themselves or their products.

So, from the topmost branch of the highest cornstalk or tree or bush, down to the very earth itself, there are crowds of well-regulated helpers, each with its prescribed line of duty; and even below the ground there are miners opening tunnels for air and moisture; devouring pests that germinate in the earth, or, like the blind worm with its innumerable shafts, fertilising the soil all summer long and injuring nothing. Toads and worms are of incalculable benefit to a farmer every season. Many of these creatures help in fertilization by carrying into their tunnels materials for winter nests and in reforestation through their supply of nuts, acorns, etc.

Bees, butterflies, moths and others assist in the pollenization of fruits, flowers and vegetables. Beetles prey on plant lice, decaying vegetable or animal matter, becoming public scavengers.—M. H. Morgan in Our Dumb Animals.

FIRST BLIND LANDING FOR WOMEN

Jacqueline Cochran, one of the outstanding women pilots of the United States, is pictured here with Lloyd Santmyer, after making what is believed to be the first blind, instrument landing by a woman. The landing was made at the Allegheny county airport, near Pittsburgh. Santmyer was the official witness in the test. Miss Cochran made the blind landing after only 5 1-2 hours instruction.

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres

"Dulcie is really the limit," she wrote. "She has been making inquiries about poor Mr. Hallard's will—did you ever hear such a thing. I believe she rang up his lawyers—but she wouldn't tell me much about it. Why on earth should the poor man leave her anything? I expect, if the truth's known, she had good picking out of him while he was alive—how can men be such utter fools? I told Dulcie she ought to be ashamed of herself, but all she said was that if you don't look after yourself nobody else will."

And almost by the next post came another letter.

"I don't know what you'll think of this—it's so amazing that I feel as if I'm making it all up, but Mr. Hallard's lawyer has been to this house. Dulcie and I were both in, but it was you he asked for, Jane, and he told us that Mr. Hallard had left five thousand pounds to you! I can't help thinking it must be a mistake—Dulcie says it is —she says that the lawyers must have mixed up the names, but how on earth can such a thing have happened? She's furious, of course and she says you must come home and explain to them that the money can't be meant for you. Can it, do you think? I thought you'd seen Mr. Hallard only once or twice. Do write by return mail and say something—I'm beginning to feel as if I'm in an eternal nightmare. . . ."

But Jane did not write; she felt that there was nothing to say. Josh Hallard had intended the money for her, she knew that, only she did not want it. Money had never brought her any luck, only misfortune; as far as she was concerned Dulcie was quite welcome to it.

And then one glorious afternoon at the end of the week a car drew up at the low front door of The Shell, and a moment later Dulcie's voice was asking for Jane.

Mrs. Barton obviously impressed by the girl's beauty, ushered her into the little front sitting-room where Jane and Miss Shaw were having tea, and for a moment there was an amazed silence before Jane rose to her feet.

"I thought the best thing to do was to come and see you myself, Dulcie said by way of greeting.

Jane glanced at Jessica. "This is my sister," she said. "Dulcie, this is Miss Shaw."

"You'll want to be alone," she said, and she took up her cup and saucer and departed into the kitchen.

"What a very pretty girl," Mrs. Barton said, but Jessica grunted. "Brainless and selfish," she said bluntly.

And in the sitting-room Dulcie had shut the door and was looking at Jane with the eyes of an enemy.

"What's this all about?" she demanded. "I know Pamela has written to tell you what has happened—about the stupid mistake Josh made in his will, and the lawyers say you must come back—that they want to see you. It's no use writing to you, and so I thought if I came to fetch you—"

"I'm not going back," Jane said. "And it's not a mistake. The money was intended for me—not that I want it—you're more than welcome to it, but Josh meant it for me all the same."

Dulcie flushed crimson. "Josh'" she said sharply and then with a sudden suspicion, "How well did you know him, Jane?"

"I didn't know him well at all. I met him three times at home, I think it was—when he came to see you—and once I met him in London and we lunched together."

"You—met him in London?"

"Yes, he asked me to or I should not have gone."

There was a complete silence before Dulcie said, and her voice trembled with anger, "you mean—you went behind my back—to meet him?"

"Yes," Jane admitted with a faint smile. "Just as you went behind my back to meet Gavin."

"Gavin!" Dulcie laughed scornfully. "As if he was ever anything to me? You were always so absurdly jealous. If you must know, Gavin and I had the most frightful scene the night before you sent him away." She sounded almost as if she was proud of the fact. "I met him—well, not by chance but because I rather wanted to meet him—he amuses me when there isn't any one else about, and—"

INSTALMENT 29.

Jane broke in quickly, "I don't want to hear—I don't want to hear anything about Gavin or about you."

"Then you're going to hear," Dulcie answered angrily. "And I hope it will make you realize what a fool you've been. Gavin never cared for me—it was always you, but I suppose he didn't realize it—any more than you did—men are such fools. He certainly kissed me once or twice, but——"

Jane took a quick step forward. "Will you please be quiet," she cried.

Dulcie shrugged her shoulders.

"Well, he has kissed me, whether you want to hear it or not—but there's nothing in that. Men will kiss any girl if she's attractive enough." She laughed self-consciously. "But he didn't kiss me on that particular occasion," she admitted. "In fact, he told me that he never wanted to see me again—that I'd come between him and you and that I was spoilt and selfish—and several other most uncomplimentary things! It's always the woman who gets the blame, you see —not that I care. As a matter of fact, I think it's very kind of me to be so honest with you," she added impudently.

Jane walked away to the window and stared with frozen eyes at the sea.

"You could have kept him if you'd known as much about men as I do," Dulcie said complacently after a moment. "But you were always blind to your own interests —except as far as Josh went apparently. And if it's true you met him and that you knew he meant to leave you his money—well, I think we're quits."

She waited a moment, but Jane neither moved nor answered, and she went on.

"You must accept men as they are, you know—it's no use expecting them to be saints—and anything I may have done to you is no worse than the fact that you went behind my back to meet Josh—not that I alogether believe what you say even now. Why don't you speak?" she demanded impatiently.

Jane turned around. "There's nothing to say," she said, and suddenly she knew that she could never speak of that strange lunch with Hallard—never to any one!

Dulcie laughed. "Oh! Well, can I have some tea, or is that too much to expect?"

Jane answered, still in the same quiet voice, "You can have some tea certainly and it's true that Mr. Hallard has left me this money, you may have that as well. I don't want it—I only want to be left alone," her voice broke then, and Dulcie frowned.

"You were always a fool, Jane," she said, half angrily, half as if ashamed. "And I always knew that you'd make a mess of your life." She took a half step toward her sister. "Look here," she said in a conciliating voice, "if you mean what you say about the money, I'll help you to get Gavin back—I understand men and—I will help you, really!"

Jane pushed past her and opened the door. "Will you please make my sister some fresh tea, Mrs. Barton?" she asked, and then, without waiting for a reply, she walked out of the cottage. She breathed more freely once she was away from it.

"No use getting upset," she told herself firmly. "Dulcie can't help being what she is any more than I can help being what I am. She can have the money—I don't want it. I only want to be left alone." And then suddenly, she realized that she was talking aloud.

She stood still, running a hand around the loose collar of her frock as if she were choking.

"No use getting upset," she told herself again, and she began to run down the winding path to the sands. She would stay out till Dulcie had gone.

A tiny wave splashed up over her shoes, but she hardly noticed it. She mustn't pay too much attention to what Dulcie said—she was never very truthful—and then suddenly she knew that she would go with Jessica Shaw—that it was indeed the only means of escape left to her; she would go with her, and surely—when the width of the world separated her from the past she would be able to forget.

Jessica was her friend—almost the only friend left to her.

"I knew you'd make a mess of your life." Dulcie had said that. Well, Jane supposed it was true.

She walked on close to the water's edge, the blinding glory of the sunset in her eyes.

"Gavin never cared for me—it was always you." That was not true of course—only just another way by which to hurt her—oh, why need people be so cruel to each other? Surely there was enough happiness in the world to go 'round?

She brushed her hair out of her eyes and looked towards the sea. The sun had almost disappeared below the horizon, but high overhead a pale, cold moon floated serenely in the fading glory of the sunset.

The moon! Jane stared at it with fascinated eyes, and to her overstrung imagination it seemed like an enemy exulting in her sorrow.

She quickened her steps as if to escape from its watchfulness. As she rounded the great pile of black rocks which rose majestically at the edge of the sea, she came face to face with a man—a tall man, walking slowly along with downbent head as if he were lost in thought—a tall man——"

He raised his head as Jane stood still, staring at him, and it was Gavin Montford

Jane had sometimes wondered what she would do if fate ever brought her face to face with Gavin Montford and she had imagined all sorts of possibilities—perhaps that she would pass him as if he were a stranger or that she would just acknowledge him as if he were an ordinary acquaintance. But now that the meeting had amazingly happened her brain felt numbed and quite incapable of decision; she just stood still in the rapidly fading sunset light and stared at him as if he were a ghost, and then, as he took a step towards her she turned like a frightened schoolgirl and began to run away from him and as if her life depended on escape.

And Gavin ran after her.

To the disinterested onlooker they could have appeared to be merely two young people racing along the wet sands for the fun of it, and yet there was something of intensity and tragedy in that breathless chase until at last Gavin overtook her and caught her around the waist, forcing her to stop. They were both breathing hard, and it was a moment before speech was possible, and it was Jane who first found sufficient voice to say childishly, "How dare you!"

And Gavin answered, "I have run for my life before, but never so desperately as now."

And then there was a deep silence which Jane broke to ask bluntly, "Why are you here?"

"Because I knew you were."

She did not believe that and, seeing the faintly contemptuous smile that curved her lips, he added, "Pamela told me."

"Pamela!" Somehow she could not believe that either.

"Yes," there was a sort of hard insistence in his voice. "I went back —I didn't mean to go back, but—well, it was you who made me."

The silence fell once more until she said, trying hard to be matter-of-fact, "Well, we may as well walk on; it's getting dark."

"You're going to hear what I have to say first," he answered determinedly. He glanced around. "We may as well sit down and talk like sane people. It's quite dry on the rocks.

They sat down side by side on the dry, warm shelf of the great rock, and there was the little moon, coldly watching them from the pearly sky.

And then Gavin said a surprising thing:

"I love you, Jane."

She looked at him steadily and away again, but she did not answer and he went on, "I'm not in love with you in the way some men might be—perhaps I'm not made that way, I don't know, but I love you all the same. Since—since you sent me away you've followed me all the time—perhaps that sounds stupid, but it's a fact. It's as if you've walked beside me, tugging at my coat sleeve—demanding to be recognized and, although I've done my best to shake you away—I couldn't, so I went back. Pamela refused to see me at first, and I refused to leave the house until she did."

INSTALMENT 30.

Gavin stopped and Jane said voicelessly, "Of course, you got your own way, as usual."

"Yes, Pamela was very kind; I think perhaps she understands a great deal more than either you or I imagine, and in the end she told me where you were."

Jane picked up a little fragment of wet seaweed and tore it to pieces with nervous fingers.

"I'm afraid you've wasted your time," she said coldly. "I'm sorry, but it's too late—I'm going abroad."

She laughed a little cruelly. "Perhaps you have heard that Mr. Hallard left me some money," she said, and then would have given her life to recall the words, but Gavin only answered quietly.

"Yes, I have heard that, but it makes no difference, I want you and I'm not letting you go—you said just now that I always get my own way in the end."

"It was the end—the last time we met," Jane said.

"I think it was the beginning," he answered. "The beginning of—a real understanding between us."

"I am giving the money Mr. Hallard left me to Dulcie," Jane said harshly. "I hate money—it's no use to me."

"Thank God," Gavin answered, and for the first time he laughed. "She may have that three thousand which was to buy my partnership, too, for all I care—we're going to start clean, Jane, and on what I can make. Listen, my dear, and believe that I am speaking from the bottom of my heart and that every word I say is the simple truth—at last. I love you and I can't face my life without you."

She had to bite her lip hard to stop its trembling before she could force herself to say, "Isn't it to—Dulcie—you ought to be saying all this?"

"I deserve that," he said quietly. "But—I suppose I can't hope to make you understand; you're so different from other girls."

"I'm honest, at least," she broke in bitterly.

"Yes, that's why you can't understand that it's possible for a man to——" He made a hopeless gesture. "I admitted to you before that she attracted me just at first, but that sort of attraction can't hold a man —you see, it means nothing. If you and I had never met, Jane, I should never have wished to—marry—Dulcie."

"I don't want to hear anything about it—it's no use. I just don't understand, and that's all, I'm not blaming you because—you found it —impossible to—to care for me—"

"I do care for you, Jane, more than I can ever care for another girl. A man doesn't feel—twice in his life what I feel for you——" He stopped, to continue presently, "If I were like other fellows—Hallard or—other fellows—perhaps it would be easier for me to convince you."

Jane said very quietly, "Mr. Hallard loved me—you may not believe me, but that day I met him in London he told me he loved me and asked me to marry him!" She laughed mirthlessly. "You can't believe that, can you, Gavin? Sometimes I hardly believe it myself, but it's the truth. That's why he left me some money—I suppose, because he really did care for me, and—and wanted me."

Gavin sat motionless for a moment, then he asked gravely, "And what did you say, Jane?"

"Just that I didn't care for him," her voice broke a little. "I wish I had loved him," she said passionately. "It would have been wonderful to love a man who really loved me."

"You don't know how well I can love you," Gavin said hoarsely.

She turned her face away and there was a long silence before she said, "It's no use. I can't go through it again—I'm sorry, but it's no use. You hurt me too badly—you——"

"I hurt myself more," he answered, and the silence fell again until Jane said heavily, "I must go back; it's no use sitting here any longer, it's getting dark, and——"

And then the sea, as if impatient at the unhappiness in two young faces, obligingly took a hand; a hurrying wave larger than the rest raced up the smooth sands and swirled over their feet. Gavin sprang up, dragging Jane with him to a higher ledge of the great rock, and then for a long moment they looked at each other silently till Gavin said once again:

"I love you, Jane—better than my life—I love you."

And then somehow she was in his arms, and there seemed nothing more to say.

A kind little cloud scudded up and for a moment hid the cold face of the moon as if in protest against an onlooker, while Jane, with a little sobbing laugh, hid her face against Gavin's shoulder.

"You always get your own way," she whispered.

"Am I forgiven?" he asked humbly, and Jane, who could never quite help believing herself to be in the wrong, answered, "Am I?"

And then they kissed and both said in the same breath, "I love you."

Gavin held her gently from him.

"Do you love me, Jane?"

She nodded, not looking at him.

"I always did—even when I tried so hard to be just a good comrade, Gavin," and then her tears came. "I was so terrified you would find out."

"And if we hadn't met today?" he asked.

She tried to brush her tears away. "I meant to go away—abroad—anywhere where I shouldn't always be afraid of meeting you."

"I meant to—at first," he answered. "But I soon discovered that it wouldn't be any use—that wherever I went you'd be there with me."

But there was still a troubled look in his eyes and presently he said, "There is so much I want to say to you, so much I want to try to explain and to ask your forgiveness."

She touched his face with her hand.

"Please don't Gavin, if we—if we really love each other there can't be anything to explain—they must all be gone—the things that hurt. I will never think of them again."

"Oh, my dear," and for a moment his head went down against her shoulder and his arms tightened their hold of her slim body. "You make me so ashamed," he said.

"You make me so happy," she answered.

It was a long time afterwards that she said ruefully, "My feet are wet through—do you want us both to die of cold?"

Gavin laughed and kissed her again, and then he gave an abrupt exclamation. "Jove! We must wade for it."

Jane turned her head quickly to find that the sea had crept all round the great rock and was now stretching beween them and the mainland.

For a moment she felt a little apprehensive and then she laughed. "I don't mind, come along."

"There no danger," Gavin said reassuringly, and with his arm still round her they scrambled down the rock and into the water. It was not very deep, but they were wet to the waist before they reached dry sand.

"What an adventure," Jane said gaily. She pushed the hair from her eyes before she added with shy sweetness. "Perhaps it has washed away everything which belonged to the past—do you think so, Gavin?"

"Not everything," he answered gravely. "Only just the things which should never have been and which were of my making. And now we must run. I—can't have you catching cold." But she still hesitated, her eyes averted from him.

"Dulcie is up at the cottage," she said.

"Is she?" He laid his hands on her shoulders, turning her to him. "Does it matter?" he asked.

They looked into each other's eyes for a long moment and then Jane answered, "No, nothing matters."

"We'll go back to Canada," Gavin said presently.

"I always wanted to," she answered. He stooped and tried to wring the water from her skirts.

"It won't be a luxurious life, my dear," he warned her.

"I've never been used to a luxurious life," she smiled. "But it will all be—fun—with you."

"It will all be happiness—with you," he answered.

And hand in hand they began to climb the steep, little path to The Shell.

"I wonder what Jessica will say?" Jane said suddenly.

"Jessica?"

Jane explained. "I was to have gone abroad with her."

"She'll go alone now," he answered firmly.

"Poor Jessica! She's always alone," Jane said a little sadly, and then her fingers tightened their hold on his. "But I shan't have to be after all, shall I?"

"Nor I," he said, and then, "Jane, it's wonderful to really have you with me—instead of just a little ghost, tugging at my coat sleeve." He raised her hand to his lips as they reached the summit of the cliff.

"We're at the top of the hill," Jane said softly and she turned to look back at the sea and then up at the crescent moon. "I shall never be afraid of the moon again," she said.

THE END.

MILKING CONTEST

Ted Warren, A. J. C. Club Pacific Coast fieldman, sends us the following set of rules prepared for a recent milking contest at Caldwell, Idaho. They were prepared by B. E. Kuhns, county agent:

"(1) All contestants must submit to search and examination of their clothing before the contest. (2) Concealed receptacles, which might contain liquid milk, such as hot water bottles or nursing bottles, found on the person of a contestant shall bar such contestant from entry in the contest, (3) Fingernails of contestants must be clean and show evidence of having been trimmed during the past two months; bright nail polish is banned. (4) Cows facing north must be approached and milked from the east side. (5) It shall be considered unfair for any contestant to strike, swear at, or in any manner tantalize his opponent's cow to such an extent that such opponent's cow is inclined not to 'let down' her milk.—Jersey Bulletin.

THE SOLAR HEATER

Old Man Sol is being put to work to supply hot water for residents of low-rent housing projects, built with U.S. Housing Authority loans.

The money-saving experiment is to be tried out first at Edison Courts, in Miami, Fla., where "solar heaters" are being installed on the roof of each dwelling.

The heaters are shallow, glass-covered boxes, through which run a series of copper pipes. Water therein will be heated to a temperature of 180 degrees Fahrenheit within a few hours. The hot water will be drawn off and stored in an insulated tank on the roof.

Although the initial cost of the solar heaters is somewhat greater than the cost of conventional types, maintenance expenses are practically nil. The expected life of each heater is about 30 years.

Use of the solar heaters is also proposed for projects in Sarasota, Fla., Hawaii and other projects in Miami.—Christian Science Monitor.

LIABILITY UNLIMITED

Although you might not think so, the working of the "damages racket" is by no means peculiar to the civilized world. Some of the tribes of northern South America, for instance, have reduced it to a very fine art indeed, and their unwritten law of compensation is a very formidable thing. Like all laws, this one is made to be broken, but the trouble is that it is probably the easiest in the world to break. Here are some examples:

A wound inflicted in self-defence renders the striker liable if the attacker has not drawn blood first.

A man who has cut his finger with a knife borrowed from another is held to have a legitimate claim against the lender.

A man who is scaling your wall with burglarious intent and hurts himself in so doing has a perfect case for compensation against you because your property was responsible (a) for his presence there, and (b) for his wounds.

If you give a man a drink and that man falls or otherwise hurts himself as a result of drunkenness, you are responsible for that damage.

And if you should find a sick or wounded man and render first aid, you are held responsible if he dies—because you interfered with Nature!

Liability, in fact, is unlimited.—Latin-American World.

WHAT WOMEN WEAR

How naked is nude? That is the question that arises as Mayor George Bown issues his edict that women in bathing costumes must not appear on Fort Erie streets.

Frankly, we have seen some shorts worn by women that are far more revealing than bathing suits. Then, too, we have seen some men on the streets, shirt hanger-outers we believe they are called, who cannot be said to be any more suitably dressed than a lady in a bathing suit.

Of course, there are some people who object to anything that shows more than a woman's ankles. But in this era of suntan some leeway should be given to those sprightly maids who are a picture in bathing suits.

On the other hand, if you grant special privileges to the few who are shapely, those who think they are shapely, but who are not, will expect to appear in just the same costumes, and that would be hard on those who profess to be judges of what is beautiful in the female form.—Fort Erie Times Review.

Marjorie Moyse, Recently Wounded, Is Improved Today

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 15—(CP) — Marjorie Moyse, 23 year old girl critically wounded in a shooting affray at her farm home near Grafton two weeks ago, took a "noticeable change for the better" overnight and regained consciousness, physicians reported today. Authorities held little hope yesterday for her recovery but said chances appeared a little brighter now.

Her step-father, Thomas Prestridge, died of a bullet wound the same day Miss Moyse was injured, and Mrs. Prestridge, her mother, was also found dead on the farm. Efforts still are being made to determine cause of Mrs. Prestridge's death.

CONSTIPATION MAKES PEOPLE HATE YOU

● Nobody loves a grouch. But if your bowels aren't "regular" you're bound to feel mean. Common constipation is often caused by a diet that lacks "bulk". Many common foods don't leave enough residue for the bowels to keep them working rhythmically. Crisp, crunchy Kellogg's ALL-BRAN helps to form a soft bulky mass that encourages bowel movements. And ALL-BRAN is a rich source of Nature's intestinal tonic, Vitamin B₁. Adopt this sensible routine: Eat ALL-BRAN every day; drink plenty of water. With "regular" habits you'll be a new person.

Don't Worry About That Bald Spot

By HELEN FOLLETT

MORE THAN ONE woman has awakened some dismal morning to find herself cursed with a bald spot. It may be the size of a dime or a dollar, even larger. This trouble is known as alopecia areata. It is more common in youth than in middle age.

In nearly all cases the spots are filled again with a new growth. There's no need to be scared half to death or to visualize yourself as dragging through a life of wigginess.

Within six weeks time, usually, a soft, downy growth appears. Sometimes it is snow white. Eventually that falls and the normal shafts appear, growing rapidly. One's troubles are ended. It is necessary from that time on to give the scalp hygienic attention. There should be a light, brisk scalp massage for five minutes every night, a thorough shampoo with a bland soap every fortnight.

Sun baths are helpful, though they must not be continued for too long a period, because tresses change in color.

It has not been definitely determined whether alopecia areata is caused by some parasitic force or through a deficiency in the physical system. It ih just one of those old meanie things that happen apparently for no reason at all.

The ash blonde is one of the world's best beauty complainers. There's no reason why she should be. She wants to be golden-haired; that's what's the matter with her. Well, there are rinses to be had at the beauty shops. Better to get them there than to try to wrestle with them at home. They shouldn't be had too often, particularly if they are peroxide rinses.

By wearing the right colors in clothes the ash blonde can become pictorial in a rather vivid way. Reseda is a good color for her. Jade and all the rust shades are flattering, if not too light. Peach and coral are not favorable. Black is her very best bet if her complexion is fresh and clear.

MILADY'S HAIR

By HELEN FOLLETT

SAYS A MAN: "I look first at a woman's hair. If it is scrambled and untidy I consider her second rate. Beautiful hair, charmingly arranged, makes a strong appeal to a man. Next to sparkling, dewy eyes, it is her most compelling beauty charm." Think on that, Genevieve!

We often wonder why girls with long, thin, pale faces wear long, lanky side locks which make them look like wraiths from another world. Let them sport a soft, fluffy bank over the forehead, tresses fairly bouffant at the sides, and their appearance will be improved. Long bobs are sweet and youthful, but they add to the length of the face.

For the Rotund Face

The middle parting is flattering to the girl whose countenance is rotund, as is also the swept-back effect with rolls in front lifted fairly high.

Women who are no longer young look older when they assume a juvenilian hairdress. You see them often. Rolls and ringlets in disarray. When hair has whitened the coiffure should be smooth and dignified, with no rag tags or bobtails. As soon as an elderly woman tries to make herself look girlish she not only appears silly, but she looks ten years older.

Girls with small, delicate features will find the new short cut adorable. Soft ringlets all over the head, cherub-like. Suitable for any kind of a hat, whether it be a little pancake of flowers or a picture lid with sweeping streamers.

Callouses on the Soles

Calloused spots on the soles of the feet show that the shoe is not properly fitted; the weight of the body is causing pressure on one particular spot.

A chiropodist or foot specialist will know at once what is wrong with the shoe. If the same shoes are worn, removal of the thickened flesh will avail nothing it will form again.

Normal feet should be a woman's first thought. If they protest with twinges and blistered skin surfaces she will feel sick all over; and, though her disposition be of the sweetest, it will curdle in time. No need of bearing with foot ills. They can be overcome by treatment.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A VERY LIVELY day in both business and private life is read from the lunar transits. Particular activity may be expected in all enterprises of a literary, artistic, or cultural nature, with ambitions of a high order under promise of attainment. Finances as well as position and dignities should be forthcoming, although finesse and stratagem may be the most successful tactics. Repress impetuosity or legal entanglements.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of fulfilled ambitions, especially educational, literary, artistic or cultural. Financial prospects are good in these lines, but use diplomacy and tact rather than force, waywardness and impulse. Avoid openings for litigation.

A child born on this day will have much adaptability, especially where a high order of intellectual or artistic ability is concerned. It may enjoy position and financial success in a professional career.

SAVE HEALTH AND MONEY

By McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

It pays best to patronize a medical doctor before you are forced to call upon him for service.

Owners of any kind of machinery know that it pays to check constantly on the condition of their machines. There may be no outward evidence that a part is wearing down to a point of danger, yet you consult a mechanician from time to time, and he checks for wear and other defects, thereby saving your machine and a greater outlay of money later on.

Perhaps at times readers of these health talks may feel that the repeated admonitions to check with a physician, even though you consider yourself well, are overdone — but are they?

It sounds like sweet music to hear the doctor say, "you're in good shape." It sounds like something else when he says, "you'll have to remain in bed for three months."

When medicine is needed get it where you are assured of accurate compounding by a competent pharmacist.

AT THE BELLE

"Daughters Courageous"

This year's successor to last year's memorable "Four Daughters," is another Warner Bros. picture of the joys and sorrows of an amazing and lovable family, entitled "Daughters Courageous," scheduled to open next at the Belle Theatre.

While it is in no sense, a sequel to "Four Daughters," since it concerns another family played by the same stars, but in a different setting, the new picture has many facets of resemblance.

The most striking, and what will probably be the most satisfying, is the fact that every member of the cast of "Four Daughters" has a part equal importance and of a similar significance in the new production. To assure recapture of the charm which so distinguished last year's picture, the studio assigned the same director, Michael Curtiz, to "Daughters Courageous" and even had the screen play written by a team of scenarists of which one member was also a co-author of last year's "Four Daughters."

Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane and Gale Page are again a quartette of lively and affectionate sisters in the new film, and they again have Claude Rains as their father. They also have the same suitors, John Garfield and Jeffrey Lynn vying for the hand of Priscilla, McHugh courting Lola, and Dick Foran—this is a slight difference—trying to divide his affections between Rosemary and Gale.

Even lovable May Robson is again in the cast, though she is not a member of the family this time, being an old servant who has been with them for many years, so many, in fact, that she feels she has the right to loud voice in the family's affair.

And then there are two newcomers to the cast, for this time the girls have a mother, who is Fay Bainter, and mother has a suitor, a well-to-do, eminently respectable citizen, played by Donald Crisp.

There is nothing untoward in the girls' mother having a suitor because she has been divorced from their father for good and sufficient cause.

It is the sudden and unexpected return of the girls' father on the eve of their mother's marriage to her safe and sane suitor that is the explosion which sets in motion an alternately amusing, exciting, tender, moving and noble tale. For the errant father is penitent and tired of travelling, and he wants nothing so much as to win the affection of the daughters he scarcely knows.

With everything against him but the fact that he still possesses the disarming charm which first attracted the girls' mother to him, the father succeeds nevertheless in winning the affection of the children he deserted and he soon has an important place in the household.

In fact it is evident to the girl's mother that her former husband's presence threatens not only the happiness of her coming marriage but also the safe and secure future that has been planned for each girl. His worst sin in her eyes is his encouragement of the infatuation of the youngest girl, Priscilla, for the young scapegrace portrayed by Garfield, a youth she sees as very much like the man she first married. Priscilla has fallen head over heels in love with the selfish, vital and charming youngster, the son of a Monterey fisherman, and is ready to give up her home and family to elope with him.

"Daughter Courageous" is the kind of family story that really goes deeply into the type of problems that are of considerable interest to modern families. The question, for instance, of whether the girls' father has the right to come back and claim his place in their home after his earlier desertion. Or whether, the mother who believes in allowing her daughters to lead their own lives, has the right to change her tactics and interfere when she sees her youngest child falling in love with the wrong kind of boy.

Jack Benny and "Rochester"

Jack Benny and his gravel-throated radio butler "Rochester", head a cast of funmakers in the laugh-hit "Man About Town" now playing at the Belle Theatre. An interesting Crime-does-not-pay story, the popular Belle newsreel and a funny popeye cartoon, complete a varied and entertaining program of screen entertainment.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Prison Without Bars"

Alexander Korda's new and greatest screen achievement, "Prison Without Bars" starring the greatest star find in ten years, lovely blonde and French, Corinne Luchaire, supported by Edna Best, Barry Barnes and the 'Dead End' girls, in the principal roles, is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. 'Prison Without Bars' is on of the most vibrant productions to come to the screen in years, a fast-paced drama of life itself, which will grip you and thrill you, like Korda's last great hit "Drums". Do not miss this outstanding four star hit, you will tell us later that it is one of the best films you have ever seen. In addition to "Prison Without Bars" the big little star Jane Withers in "Always in Trouble" in all ways her funniest feature-comedy is presented.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

What Kind of Guest Were You?

Haven't you often wondered, after you have said good-bye to your hostess and her family, just how you have measured up to your ideal of being a good guest? It's an acid test of what kind of people we really are, what kind of personalities we have. Without being egotistical about ourselves, we may well feel a justifiable pride that we have done all those things we should have done, and left undone those things we should not have done.

If you have been an ideal guest, you won't need to read farther. But if your conscience pricks you perhaps we might analyze together some of the more usual temptations to which guests thoughtlessly yield, thereby leaving an unpleasant memory behind them. This kind of analysis can be helpful to us, contributing to making us a more thoughtful guest next time we go a-visiting.

Tops in the list of regrets is usually something we've said. We have not guarded carefully enough that "unruly member"—the tongue. We may be the kind of people who are always trying to remake other people nearer to our heart's desire. We may even be that mean kind of person who criticizes hostess or host to the other guests. (Or criticizes hostess, host and other guests, after our visit!) Or we may have made thoughtless or deliberately unkind remarks about our hostess' friends. We may even have given our opinions in family matters, or taken part in family discussions.

All wise adults avoid, as they would the plague, making comparisons between the children in the home in which they are visiting and the children of any other friends. Enjoy and admire your hostess' children as much as you like . . . or can . . . but wisely forebear to make any comparisons. The mother will like you better, and the children certainly will.

These are days when you'd better not get into any political or religious arguments, especially with other guests. What you say may leave a very dark taste in the memory not only of your hostess and host, but of people who should pass pleasantly through your life.

You may be sorry for things that you did not say those warm-heartedly appreciative things about attractive features of the house, generous little plans your hostess made for your comfort and delight, generous big plans for your entertainment.

If the household were a servantless one, perhaps you didn't even offer to assist with the work. You should have, and even if the hostess demurs, there are many things you can do unobstrusively . . . keep your bedroom and bathroom in order and, with a casual and pleasant cooperation, do many other things without seeming to regard them as duties.

Perhaps you sat like a bump on a log, expecting to be entertained every minute or expecting your hostess to spend every hour with you, making no effort to be entertaining and bright, making no effort to be pleasant to other guests or to the children of the house.

Perhaps you accepted invitations from friends in town without consulting your hostess. From all points of view, this is an unworthy thing to do, make all entertainment plans difficult.

Perhaps you made your hostess uncomfortable by dwelling on some discomfort . . . "I didn't sleep a wink all night. I never can sleep in a strange bed", or "I just dropped off to sleep last night when I heard Tommy drive in. I couldn't get to sleep after that". Be a nice little philosopher. . . let those unpleasantnesses go unsaid.

Did you make some generous bows to the hostess and the household? Take a little gift to the hostess when you went, or send one after you returned home? Take the children books or toys or games? Tip the servant or servants when you left?

And how about your bread-and-butter letter? Was it a sentence or two of generalities dashed off hastily or tardily? Or did you write it promptly and enthusiastically, making your hostess feel that you had the glorious gift of appreciation, appreciation not only for the Big Things but for the Little Big Things that she had so lovingly planned for your comfort and happiness?

Long, long thoughts—tonic for all of us!

Courtesy Tip

You will always be correct if you say "How do you do", when you acknowledge an introduction. You won't be correct if you say "Pleased to meet you".

Advice to the Lovelorn

Turned Down Because He Wasn't Goodlooking

Dear Miss Fairfax

When I was 20 years old I thought I was in love with a girl, when all of a sudden something came between us and I was nearly heartbroken. At last I learned it was because I wasn't goodlooking.

Now, I've met a very sensible girl and really know what love is, after going out with her several times. But she is beginning to change, and I don't know why. I can't ask her, because it's so personal. I tried to write her a letter, and after several attempts gave it up. Then finally I did wrote a note, but she doesn't even answer it. She told me herself that she likes me, but if something doesn't happen soon, I'll go crazy.

Do you think if I take out another girl, and let this one see us together that she will wake up? Please tell me how to gain her confidence. I can't give her up. I'm 22 years old now.

David

I wish there were space in this column so that I could give the names of scores of homely men, about whom women have been "crazy", men who have had world-wide reputations as charmers. So, my dear young friend, it can't be your appearance. Perhaps you court these girls too humbly. No woman can forgive excessive humility on the part of a suitor.

Things have a way of seeming final at your age, but it's only youth and a lack of knowledge about how to play this game of living. Suppose you let her severely alone for a while. Girls have a way of never realizing they care for a boy until he stops being attentive, but the old comic opera way of trying to make one person jealous by flaunting another is a little outmoded. My advice is to be more assertive with girls in general.

He Spends, But not on the Girl Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax

I've been going out with a young man of 20 for nearly a year now. He comes over about three times a week, but never takes me out. We usually go for a walk in the park, or sit on our front porch. I know he's not working, but always brags that he has money and that he goes to shows and treats all his boy friends. He always has cigarette money too. I am not a gold-digger, but I do believe that he should take me some place at least once a week.

We like each other very much, and if I go out with anybody else, he's extremely jealous. My parents don't like the idea of my going out with other boys if I see so much of my boy friend.

Reader

Well, my dear, I think your boy friend is badly in need of a little missionary work. Without hurting his feelings, let him know that it is bad taste for a young man to brag he has money, goes to shows and then never takes out the girl he goes to see three times a week. Some mn and boys imagine that if economizing is in order, it should begin with wives and sweethearts. It's up to such ladies to protest, delicately or forcefully, according to the type of selfishness with which they are dealing.

Here's luck to you, and to all the girls dealing with such spoiled young men, the gentlemen who wear out the parlor sofa visiting, and never dream of taking a girl out. I'd like to hear more from girls about these boys.

Wants to Win Him Back

Dear Miss Fairfax

When I was 17 I fell in love with a boy, but had an old-fashioned notion that I mustn't let him know it. I overdid it, and he thought I didn't care at all for him, and later on he went to another city, and I did not hear at all from him. That was over a year ago. And now he has returned and I believe I care just as much as I ever did.

Recently at a dance, I happened to see him, but pretended not to see him, although I know it's the girl's place to speak first. He did say "hello" to me just once, but that was all. I don't know why I acted this way, but I'm so anxious to win him back again. Can you help me, please.

Hopeful

Why will girls persist in doing such thing as you write me? You care so much for this man and then forget your manners and are absolutely rude to him. Write him a nice note and invite him over to Sunday night supper, and drop all your "coy, uncertain, hard-to-please methods".

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Intelligent Parent Cooperation Aids Doctor in Treatment of Nephritis

Yesterday I advised a diet of milk in the treatment of nephritis. In most acute cases the patient is best started off on a quart of milk a day, and no other food. A specimen of urine should be examined daily, and as the kidneys show improvement, the diet can be increased.

I find it better to leave specific instructions as to how much milk to give because it is easier to get instructions followed that way. Most mothers can be depended on to do everything for their sick child, but sometimes you have to go a little further. For instance when I was first practising and left things more to people's judgment than I do now, I had a little girl who developed pneumonia and then nephritis. I asked the mother to give her daughter as much milk as she would drink and as often as she asked for it.

I visited her every day and was told each time I inquired that she was taking her milk. However the child seemed to get weaker and weaker, and finally I asked the mother pointedly how much milk she gave at a time and exactly when she gave it. Her reply was "Oh, she had half a glass the day before yesterday". When I protested, the mother argued that I had told her to give the child as much milk as she wanted when she wanted it. So since the child hadn't expressed any desire for milk, the mother just hadn't given any. When I put the child on a stipulated quart a day, there was an immediate improvement.

Milk alone is given for varying lengths of time. Each day a specimen of the urine is taken and when it becomes normal again, the food can be increased. Even then the additions to the diet must be carefully chosen. I usually counsel that the first addition be a pudding rich in carbohydrates. When this is added, the result should be carefully rechecked to see if there is any reaction. If the kidneys handle this successfully, or if they are only upset for a day or so, then other things may be added to the diet.

Parents do well to remember, though, that even if the child appears to have recovered, they should strictly follow the doctor's advice in the matter of diet. He will place article after article on it. A mother often thinks that if she could give her child some meat it would give him strength quicker than anything else. The doctor has a good reason for leaving meats off the diet until the very last because meats have some very complex proteins in their structure, and the kidneys must be completely well before they are called on to handle them.

The usual return of the urine to normal requires about a month. During this time the child must be kept in bed. About the time the urine is completely clear and the diet is complete again, we make an attempt to get rid of the centre of infection which caused the trouble in the first place. Usually the removal of tonsils, or washing out a sinus, is what is needed. After this operation, there will be a temporary return of the original evidence of nephritis and then a return to normal.

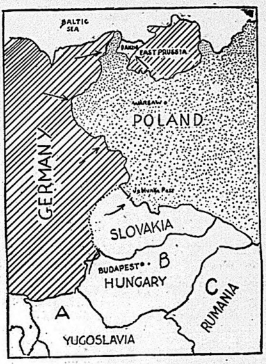
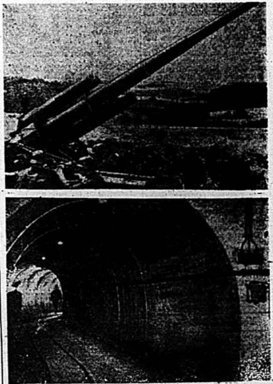
ENCIRCLEMENT — NAZI STYLE



Answering Poland's threat of war over Danzig, Germany is rushing preparations for invasion, as shown by map, should the crisis come to a head. Jablunka Pass, Slovakia's main highway to Poland, has been closed to all but German military traffic. With Nazi might lined up in northeast Germany and East Prussia, ready to cut off Poland's corridor to the sea, Germany now is actively seeking support of Yugoslavia (A) and Hungary (B), which would give the Nazi a clear road into Poland from west and south (see arrows). Reports indicate Hitler even may seize Hungary, only state in the area not guaranteed by Britain and France, thus opening a path into Rumania (C), as well as diminishing British prestige in the Balkans.

SIEGFRIED LINE GLORIFIED IN NAZI MOVIE



Designed to reassure the populace against threat of invasion from the direction of France, the film "Der Westwall" was flashed on movie screens throughout Germany recently. The film, two frames from which are shown ABOVE, takes the viewer on a tour of the Siegfried line of fortifications that faces France's maginot line across the border. It will be shown in foreign countries. At TOP here is one of the big anti-aircraft guns that are strung along the line. BELOW, a section of the steel and concrete tunnel that connects the chain of fortifications. This week a French report said that parts of the line had been flooded by abnormally high tides of the river Rhine.

RIGGS A HERO

A Pinch Single in 9th Gives Reds 9-8 Victory Over Pirates

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

If Cincinnati Reds have the "jitters" as their critics would have you believe, then there are some 15 other clubs that could stand—and profit by—a similar attack.

Last night's thrilling 9-8 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates is a pretty fair sample you can't count the Reds out just because they haven't been quite as hot as the weather lately.

All they did was spot the Pirates a seven-run lead and then, with a grand display of courage and a four-run rally in the ninth, pull themselves uphill and squeeze out a victory.

Big Man Today

Little Lew Riggs is the biggest man in Cincinnati today. It was Lew's pinch single in the ninth with two out and the bases loaded that climaxed the game that was a pitcher's battle for two innings, a runaway for the Pirates the next two and a long tough haul for the Reds the rest of the way.

The win coupled with St. Louis' loss by 4-0, to Chicago stretched the league leaders' margin to 7 1-2 games.

Those were the only games played in the National League but they took precedence over a three game American League program marked by first night tussle in Chicago's history.

Sox in Third

The White Sox moved back into third place as 30,000 fans saw the lights turned on and watched Johnny Rigney pitch a three-hit game to mow the Browns under by a 5-2 score. Johnny didn't give up a hit until the sixth and fanned 10, while his mates were whacking 13 hits off three Brownie pitchers.

Cleveland Indians, earlier in the day skidded into fourth place when they split a double bill with Detroit Tigers.

Schoolboy Rowe saved the day for the Tigers when he won the nightcap, 10-3, with a nine hit bit of elbowing. The loss of the first game, by an 8-4 score, stretched Detroit's streak of defeats to three, but the Schoolboy, in winning his sixth against nine setbacks, ended the slide.

Rowe pitched seven straight scoreless innings, issued only one walk, and got some neat help from the madcap Macs—Barney McCosky and Benny McCoy.

Al Milnar, relieving Johnny Allen in the eighth, saved the first game for the Indians.

CEMENTMEN WIN OVER CORBYS A. C. BY 6 TO 5 SCORE

Pt. Anne Now Meets Shell in City Softball Finals

DESERVE WIN

"Ski" Brant Hurls Six-Hit Ball to Eliminate Corbys

A new threat loomed on the Belleville City Softball final horizon when the Point Anne "Cementmen" rubbed out the Corbys A.C. in successive games, as the Ox Point nine eliminated Corbys by virtue of a well-earned 6 to 5 win at the Flats last evening. The "Cementmen" now meet the Shell-Aajmma in the City Softball finals for the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy.

When the Point Anne squad took alvantage of the Corby errors in the final semi-final game of the series, little was thought of the Cementmen's victory at the time, but last evening they clearly proved their earlier victory was no fly-by-night win. With "Ski" Brant pitching six hit ball, the Cementmen played sensational defensive softball in the clutches and came from behind to win. Corbys garnered four runs in the initial frame but only pushed one more counter across the plate in the subsequent eighth inning, as the visitors played sterling ball in victory.

Open Scoring

Point Anne opened with three runs in the first, but Corbys got four in the bottom half of the inning. Loft's single and Bennett's triple knotted the score in the third and Corbys again took the lead in the sixth as the result of an error, fielder's choice and Simpson's single. "Ski" Brant virtually won his own game as he hit for the circuit to open the seventh to tie the score with Whitehead romping home with what proved the winning run after a timely double. There was no more scoring in evidence, although the Barnett-led Corbys left the tying run stranded in the last two times at bat as the winners played fine ball behind Brant's six-hit pitching. The Cementmen should prove worthy opponents to the Shell "Oilers" in the city finals judging from their play in the semi-finals.

Brant Helps Cause

Brant with a home run and single, Whitehead with a double and single and Bennett with a triple and single and Green with two one base blows led the winners at bat. Alex Simpson with a double and single was the only Corby batter to count more than one hit off Brant. The fielding sensations were supplied by Genereaux Whalen and Barriage all three making outstanding defensive plays.

A benefit all-star game will be played between the Shell "Oilers" and a team picked from the remainder of the league on Friday night, the benefits to go to Umpire Josh Maracle who recently sustained injuries while officiating at a league game.

A PERFECT RECORD?

(By The Canadian Press)

It could be taken almost as fact today that Amsterdam Rugmakers are the 1939 pennant-winners of the Canadian - American Baseball League, thus conceding the New York Yankees' farm club a perfect record for its two years of operations in the class "C" circuit.

With three weeks of the season left, Rugmakers hold a lead of six and a half games over Oswego Netherlands and the Nets have failed to bite into that margin for more than a month now. Last season Amsterdam took the pennant by six games over second-place Cornwall Bisons.

Montreal, Aug. 15 (CP)—Arthur C. Donner of Montreal has set a new Canadian amateur long run skeet record by breaking a string of 219 consecutive regulation clay-pigeon skeet targets, it was announced today from headquarters of the Dominion marksmen organization here.

Donner shattered the former Dominion record of 117 set in 1937 by Robert E. Branch of the St. Catharines Trap and Gun Club of Ontario. Donner posted the mark on the layout of the Montreal Skeet Club.

$10,772.40 on Daily Double Is Largest in U. S. Racing History

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP)— The Washington Park Jockey Club paid $10,882.40 on a daily double ticket yesterday—largest in the history of United States racing—to Claude E. Elkins, who spurns the expert in favor of his own handicapping.

Elkins, a 40-year-old bowling alley and billiard parlor operator at Little Ana, Ill., wired in his selections from his home town, but it wasn't a shot in the dark.

He said he had his own good reasons for naming Joy Bet and Merry Caroline as winners of the first and second races at Washington. He was the only bettor having the winning daily double ticket.

Joy Bet, owned by Mrs. Milton Rieser of Louisville, Ky., and trained by her husband, paid $131.40 to win, 244.00 to place and $31.80 to show. Merry Caroline, running for Paul Kelley, paid $20.00, $9.00 and $5.00. Both races were six furlongs, Joy Bet running the distance in 1.14 and Merry Caroline 1.15.

Elkins' winning choice was wired in by H. E. Davis of Aana, and said several of his friends sent their selections to the track in a single wire to save telegraph tolls.

"Although I signed the wire, Elkins' bet was his own alone and no one else's", Davis said. "I understand the cheque from the track will come in my name. If it does, I'll sign it right over to Elkins."

Joe Gagnon Beats Lad Who Gained Previous Decision

Montreal, Aug. 15 (CP)—Joey Gagnon and the elephant have one thing in common—they never forget. And that might be a good thing for prospective foes of the little battler to remember.

Though he looks as passive as a choir boy, Joey loves to fight and pound for pound they don't come much better. Canadian amateur bantamweight champion, he was beginning to run out of opponents until Johnny Greco, an unheralded Montreal youngster, beat him on a decision a couple of months ago.

That hurt Joey's pride and he has been clamoring ever since for a return bout. He got his wish last night and today is riding high again, for he evened the score.

He and Johnny put on a great five-round scrap for the benefit of 3,000 spectators and to the credit of the 16-year-old Italian boy Gagnon won only on a split decision. His faculty for remembering his opponent's weaknesses and his greater experience were too much for Grecco.

There'll be a rubber bout between the two before long and the odds are Gagnon will win that one too although Greco has been improving rapidly. For Joey is a scientific fighter and once he knows his opponent's style of fighting seldom loses to him.

BASEBALL RECORDS BROKEN AT WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Aug. 15 (CP)—Winnipeg Maroons were believed to have created records for organized baseball last night when they defeated Wausau Lumberjacks 23-4 in the Northern League, scoring 16 runs in the first inning.

Record books showed the Major League record for runs scored in one inning is 14, made by Chicago Cubs against the Phillies in 1922 and by New York Yankees against Washington in 1920. Waco of the Texas League however, made 18 runs against Beaumont in the eighth inning Aug. 7, 1930.

Maroons made 14 hits in the first inning when 21 men faced three Wausau pitchers. Major League records are 12 hits and 19 men at bat. Bill Barmacle, Maroons centre fielder, made three hits in the one inning, beating the listed world's record of two hits in one inning held by several players.

LITTLE GIANTS WIN

Salvatore Maglie rookie Buffalo hurler, probably has a pretty vivid picture of how the mighty Casey felt when he struck out.

Sal was the centre of attraction last night in the Buffalo-Jersey City game as 2,000 howling townspeople from Niagara Falls came to town to pay him tribute. But Jersey Giants failed to get into the spirit of things, and they pounded him from the box in the fifth.

The Jersey victory, by a 7-3 score, protected the Giants' grip on first place as they pounded Maglie and his successor, Clay Smith for 15 blows.

Jim Walkup pitched five-hit shutout ball to register his first victory in a Toronto uniform, a 5-0 decision over Baltimore. All the Oriole hits were singles, three of them by Art Graham.

Rochester Redwings defeated Syracuse Chiefs, 9-2 to crawl within half a game of the second-place tribesmen. Homers by Harry Davis, Floyd Beal and Jim Asbell aided the Wings cause tremendously, and were the most important of 14 blows they got off Jake Mooty.

And Newark's Bears are now within a game and a half of a playoff spot, following their twin killing of Montreal, 10-2 and 2-1.

George Washburn won a pitcher's battle from Kemp Wicker in the afterpiece to share the hero's role with Mickey Witek, who got three of his team's blows in the first game to give Joe Beggs his ninth triumph of the year.

Billy Conn Knocks on Heavyweight Door With T. K. O. Over Dorazio

(By Ted Meier Associated Press Sports Writer).

Philadelphia, Aug. 15 (AP)—Billy Conn's first rap at the door of heavyweight fame got him into the hallway today with an eight round technical knockout of Gus Dorazio notched on his belt.

It's still a long way to the throne room, but the 21-year-old Irish scrapper from Pittsburgh has at least a reason to believe he'll meet Joe Louis there a couple of years hence.

Dorazio didn't think so, though, after "Billy the Kid" pounded him into submission before 12,000 fans at flood-lit Shibe Park last night.

"Didn't Hurt Me"

"He didn't hurt me," said the bleeding loser in his dressing room. "Give me a return match and I'll beat him."

That was just luxurious optimism, however. Conn hung up the light heavyweight crown he won just a month ago, barged into the heavyweight division with a 13-pound weight disadvantage and laced Dorazio good and proper.

Referee Leo Houck stopped the scheduled 10-rounder after 1:52 of the eighth round with blood streaming from a cut over Dorazio's left eye. One of Conn's lightning-like jabs had started the crimson spurting in the sixth.

Blood covered Dorazio's face at the end of the seventh and Dr. W. B. Gerry, of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, warned that unless the bleeding was halted he would stop the fight. Dorazio's seconds managed to stem the flow, but after Conn started the blood flowing again, referee Houck took matters into his own hands.

Providing arrangements are completed in the near future, a challenge dinghy sailing race may be held off Victoria Park on Labor Day under the sponsorship of the Belleville Yacht Club. It seems Max Porritt, of this city, has a new International dinghy sailing craft, while over in Picton a similar boat is under construction and nearly completed. The Picton boat is expected to be ready for the water this week. The Belleville Yacht Club has a fine silver trophy which was donated some years ago by the Kingston Yacht Club and presented to the local yachtmen for annual competition in the dinghy class. The local sailors are offering this cup, as well as an additional trophy by lawyer Jake Goodman, for a matched race between Porritt's new craft and the Picton dinghy on Labor Day. Incidentally the Yacht Club will hold punt races on Wednesday afternoon in conjunction with the annual Wharf Street Debating Club picnic which is being held on Victoria Park. Races for the kiddies and aquatic sports will be featured by the Debaters, whose annual picnic and summer frolic has become renowned in Belleville.

Sport fans began to talk baseball over their breakfast toast this morning, realizing in fact there is still hope of Belleville getting some place in the Quinte loop. Pacing the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" by one full game, the local "Orfuns" can practically cinch a league playoff berth by taking the measure of the Foster-led 'flying-men' at the Fair Grounds in a twilight fixture this evening. Incidentally tonight's game is the final home stand for the "Orfuns," for those fans who haven't seen a ball game this season, (and there's plenty in that category in Belleville). The pitching assignment for Belleville doubtlessly lies between Sammy Ellis and Chuck Barriage, the latter standing up splendidly before the Flyers last week. Either "Spider" Webb or "Dolly" Dole will chuck 'em over for the Flyers, who today are heralded as the most improved team in the Quinte loop. Incidentally the Flyers have only lost one game in their last five starts, which makes them real contenders this evening.

There were a lot of surprised people at Coleman Flats last evening when the Point Anne "Cementmen" made it two straight over Corbys A.C., winning 6-5 last evening and thereby rubbing Chuck Barnett's nine out of softball's picture for the season of 1939. Looking over the "Cementmen" and their record for the season, however, it did not surprise us to learn that it was Bud Gaulin's Ox Point nine that broke the Shell "Oilers" lengthy string of victories earlier in the season and nothing would please the Point Anne fans more than to take the measure of Frank Sedore and his "Oilers" in the City softball finals for the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy. "Ski" Brant pitched six-hit ball last night and was given some phenomenal support, Genereaux's one-handed catch of Jim Barriage's hard fly and Whalen's second basing were only a few of the fine efforts of the Cementmen. Judging from last night's play the Point Anne nine should prove worthy opponents for the Shell boys.

There will be no more softball in Belleville this week until Friday, although the Cementmen meet Deseronto in the O.A.S.A. playdowns at Point Anne tomorrow evening. On Friday night at the Flats, however, the much-talked of game between the Shell "Oilers" and an all-star team selected from the remaining clubs in the Belleville loop will be staged. As the fans already know the receipts will be given to Umpire Josh Maracle, who sustained a fractured leg recently. Aside from the worthy cause, those selecting the All-Star team are high in hopes of beating the chesty "Oilers" and the fans can rest assured of the season's tit-bit of softball in Belleville. Tickets are being sold and those in possession of same will be given preferred seats for this feature game.

Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Tigers of the American League and also of Briggs' Stadium in the Motor City publicly announced last week he had signed Del Baker to manage the Tigers another year. Baker took over when Mickey (Black Mike) Cochrane was forced to retire. In making the announcement Briggs said, "I am glad to announce that Del Baker in whose managerial ability we have the utmost confidence, will again lead the Tigers in 1940. I think he has done as well as could be expected during the present year. He will have the same free hand in directing the club. His only instructions are to spare no effort that will give this great baseball town a team of championship calibre."

This time yesterday the Cannifton "Sluggers" were somewhat favourites to win the South Hastings League for the first time, as they had the advantage of a fifth and final game on the home lot, but the Shannonville "Hawks" now enjoy that edge, if there is such a thing between these two teams. Last night the Hawks stepped into Cannifton and played the homesters to a six-all tie, forcing a sixth game, which will see the scene change to along the shores of the Salmon River in Shannonville Wednesday. Each team had won two games prior to last night's draw. The result of the S.H.L. finals this year has attracted large and far-reaching attention of the baseball fans of the district.

Billie Conn, who has been tagged as "the next heavyweight champion of the world" charged up into the heavy ranks with an eight round K.O. over Gus Dorazio in the latter's native Philadelphia last night. The fight was held in Shibe Park before 12,000 fans, who saw Conn hit Dorazio with precision punches to win. Billie weighed only 176 1-2, slightly over his light heavyweight championship maximum weight, while Dorazio tipped the beam at 186 1-2. While on the subject we hear Bob Pastor will go into serious training at Brighton, Mich., on the 21st of the month. Pastor meets champion Joe Louis in Detroit next month. It is expected that Pastor will weigh 200 even and Louis 202 the night of the scrap.

Sport Scramblings — Pictures of the Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio, arrived today and will be displayed in a downtown store window, we hear....The Cubs humbled the Cards to stop their onrush in the National League yesterday and the loss proved costly to Ray Blades' "gashouse gang" simply because the Reds humbled the Pirates 9-8 in a nocturnal game, so don't count those Redlegs out yet....They gained a full game yesterday....The first night game ever played in Chicago saw the White Sox thrill 30-000 fans by beating the Browns 5-2; this baseball by nght is definitely here to stay.

LAST LAUGH IS USUALLY BEST

Guldhal Chuckles Over 6-Foot Putt That Nets Him $1,000

Pittsburgh, Aug. 15 (AP)—He who laughs last laughs best, and maybe cool-headed golfer Ralph Guldahl is still chuckling over a missed six-foot putt that helped him pocket $1,000 he never dreamed of getting.

More welcome, of course, was the $2,500 first money the 210-pound Texan collected in the three-way 18-hole playoff of the $10,000 Dapper Dam golf tournament yesterday. Denny Shute of Huntington, W. Va., took $1,250 second prize, and old timer Gene Sarazen of East Brookfield, Conn., came in third for $1,000. The final tally was par 70 for Guldahl, 74 for Shute and 75 for Sarazen.

Guldahl had the first prize in the palm of his hand Sunday — but that missed putt on the 18th green caused the three-way tie of 287 for the schedule 72 holes of the tournament.

Sending the event into an extra day, the putt brought Guldahl and the other two finalists an additional $1,000 apiece. The other half of the day's receipts went into the coffers of the Dapper Dan Club for distribution among its charities.

STEER WINS PRIZE, PINES FOR HIS RAISER, AND IS PURCHASED BACK

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 15 (AP)—Homesickness nearly took the heft out of Fritzie, a prize steer. After winning the Grand Championship of a baby beef show, Fritzie was sould and "farmed out" to fatten him fo rthe International Livestock Exposition in Chicago next December. But he pined for his raiser, six-year-old Fred Frey Jr., and hardly touched his food. So his purchaser brought him back to his first home. Fritzie promptly pepped up and is eating normally again.

COMPENSATION

MAURICE GLEYRE

Twenty thousand dollars' compensation for slipping on the ice in front of his own grocery store!

Mr. Pagnetta dropped his bold black eyes to veil their exultant gleam.

"My client," Attorney Rubinsky stated, "only desires compensation for the wrong that was done to him."

Mr. Pagnetta darted a sly look at the defendant and took pleasure in Mr. Schwabacher's increasing discomfiture.

Mr. Pagnetta's resentment had been accumulating ever since Mr. Schwabacher had opened a delicatessen next to his grocery store, with a window display of canned goods. When day after day he saw one or the other of his erstwhile customers come out of the store next door with an armful of bundles and a smile that reflected Mr. Schwabacher's expansive good humor, he could no longer be civil.

"There's no room for two grocers on this block," he told his competitor one morning when he saw him on the sidewalk awkwardly wielding a broom.

"Mine is delicatessen," Mr. Schwabacher corrected with friendly smile.

"You're stealing my canned goods trade. There oughta be a law—"

"Togedder we bring more trade into the block," the other interrupted placidly. "We both benefit."

One winter morning he stepped out to survey his icy sidewalk, and found Mr. Schwabacher from the vantage of his own already ash-strewn premises doing the same thing.

"You better the ashes lay before the customers commence," Mr. Schwabacher advised after a hearty "good day."

"And you better mind your own business," reported Mr. Pagnetta.

"The ice is everybody's business," Mr. Schwabacher contended good-humoredly.

Mr. Pagnetta turned about with a violence that sent his feet from under him. The result was a broken leg.

During subsequent days in the hospital his chief diversion was planning how to get the better of his rival.

"Can I collect damages," he asked the lawyer Rubinsky, "for my hospital and doctor bills, and the loss of time from business?"

Rubinsky shrugged his thin shoulders up to his large ears. "You can sue, and maybe you collect. How did it happen?"

Mr. Pagnetta described how his competitor, Mr. Schwabacher had come out of his store, picked a quarrel and finally struck him, knocking him down and breaking his leg.

"Have you witnesses?" Rubinsky wanted to know.

"Yes. "Several heard him call me a lousy wop and other names."

"Witness to the blow?"

"Well—" Mr. Pagnetta thought of Bagnoni who would witness anything for a consideration, and of Pappas who would welcome the chance to cancel a long-standing debt. "Yes, I know of two"....

Mr. O'Ryan, counsel for the defense, now wanted to know just how the blow had been delivered, exactly where it had landed.

"Just indicate it", he suggested. "How? With his right hand—"

"Right fist!" Mr. Pagnetta corrected emphatically.

"With his right fist he delivered a blow on your left jaw behind the ear. You are sure it was his right fist?"

When the plaintiff's testimony had been fully corroborated by his two witnesses, Mr. O'Ryan faced the jurors. "Gentlemen of the jury" he said, "you have seen the blow which could have been delivered only by a good right from the shoulder—the blow for which the plaintiff asks twenty thousand dollars' compensation."

At the mention of compensation Mr. Pagnetta moistened his lips while his thoughts strayed into green pastures of anticipation. But when Mr. Schwabacher, red faced and visibly nervous, took the stand he was all attention again.

"Gentlemen," Mr. O'Ryan addressed the jury in hushed voice, "I want to call attention to the fact that the defendant is one of our war heroes." He reached over and touched a little cross pinned on the lapel of Mr. Schwabacher's coat. "And I am going to prove that this war hero not only would not, but could not strike a blow with his right fist. Mr. Schwabacher will you kindly remove your coat and roll up your shirt sleeve?"

While Mr. Schwabacher struggled out of his coat, Mr. Pagnetta sat forward uneasily.

"This cross—" Mr. O'Ryan held his client's coat up and turned slowly so that all could see the small medal—"was given in compensation for a wound in combat." Flinging out his free hand he pointed dramatically to the arm which Mr. Schwabacher had just exposed to view.

Mr. Pagnetta in company with everyone in the room, looked—and his gaze remained transfixed. In his mind's eye he was seeing again those awkward movements of Mr. Schwabacher as he swept his sidewalk, while the voice of the counsel for the defense beat into his ears.

"Mr. Schwabacher suffered a serious wound in his upper right arm. So serious that the bone between the elbow and shoulder had to be removed. As you can see, the arm is practically useless......your honor, I demand the arrest of the plaintiff and his witnesses on charges of perjury."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was sewing on her electric sewing machine and I was watching her, saying, Hay ma, If you find a dime is it legal to keep it?

Well that depends, I mean I suppose so, if it's impossible to discover the real owner, ma said, and I said, Well G. ma, this dime was all covered with dust, so holey smokes ma, the real owner must of lost it so long ago he proberly wouldn't deckonize it if he saw it or even remember it if he heard about it.

Well in that case no doubt you're justified, where did you find it? ma said, and I said, Do you mean exactly where or about where?

I mean where did you find it with no evasive bush beating, ma said, and I said, Down in the front room in that green thing with the artificial flowers in it.

The last of my breakable wedding presents you know you're not suppose to touch that ma said, and I bouncing my ball and the ball asid, I didn't touch it, ma, I was touched it just hard enough to knock it off the table.

O my lands, my good green vase, ma said and I said, But it didn't break, ma because I caught it just in time to save its life.

Well why didn't you say so? ma said, and I said, I did, ma, I am, only it kind of wriggled out of my hand while I was putting it back, and it fell on the carpit and even then it didn't break so it must be pretty good carpit, ma, and it wouldn't of broke at all if it hadn't of rolled against that big chair, and that's how I found the dime, among the pieces while I was picking them up careful.

The result being ma made me give her the dime so I wouldn't feel as if I was getting rewarded for bouncing my ball in the good front room, and she was still mad even after I reminded her she had a dime she wouldn't of had if nothing hadn't happened to the green thing.

SATIN NOT VELVET

Sir—Captain Knapp writes that Mrs. Manning was hanged in a black velvet dress. This was not so so; she was hanged in a black satin dress; and so black satin was banned by ladies for many years.

She and her husband murdered a man called O'Connor and buried him under the fireplace. Her callous confession is almost a classic: "We never liked the man, so we put him under the hearth!"

MOTORCAR CRASH NEAR NAPANEE PROVES FATAL

Fred Davis, Selby, is Killed and Relative is Badly Injured

When the automobile in which they were returning home turned over twice on Highway No. 41, between Napanee and Selby, 42-year-old Fred Davis, of Selby, was instantly killed and a relative, Vernon Davis, 22, also of Selby, sustained a fractured arm, internal injuries and shock and was rushed to the Kingston General Hospital last night.

Only meagre details were available, investigating police stated, as the car in which the Davis men were travelling was found overturned in the ditch by a passing motorist, who reported the accident. An inquest will be held as soon as the younger Davis can give a coherent report of the entire accident.

The motor car in which the two Davis men were travelling was a rather old model of the lighter type. It turned over into the ditch, as the vehicle failed to negotiate a curve, Motorcycle Patrolmen Henry Jillings, Napanee, and Sam Ervine, Belleville, reported after viewing the crash. The car was completely wrecked.

Butter and Egg Prices Unchanged

Toronto, Aug. 15.—Price changes were few on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Butter and eggs held quietly steady, while cheese eased slightly, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and quiet trading prevailed in all lines.

The butter market was stagnant, with buyers refusing to bid on offerings. Receipts were light. The market developed an easier undertone, due to the lack of trading, and prices quoted were only nominal. First-grade creamery solids were offered at 21 3-4c lb. Holders of Western butter asked 22c to 22 1-4c, but no sales were reported.

Egg receipts were easily ample for the demand, which was chiefly for top-grades. Trading was light, and the market maintained a steady tone. Prices were generally unchanged.

Quebec Butter Weakens

Montreal, Aug. 15.—Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter and Ontario white and colored cheese was a fraction easier in quiet trading on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Quebec white and colored cheese held unchanged while potatoes dipped about 5 cents. Egg trading continued to improve with prices steady and receipts fair.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2c-22 3-4c a pound and solids for 22c-22 1-4c. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter in wholesale jobbing lots made 21 1-2c. Receipts: Nil.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11 1-8c. Quebec white and colored were both quoted at 10 1-2c. Receipts: 1,439 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27c a dozen for A-large, 25c for A-medium, 20-20 1-2c for A-pullets, 19c-20c for B-large, 14 1-2c-15c for C. Receipts: 227 cases.

$70,000 HAUL MADE BY ROBBERS

Bank Messenger Robbed by 5 Men Who Escape in Hail of Gunfire

—Five men, one of them armed with a machine-gun, today robbed a bank messenger of approximately $70,000 on the main street of this summer resort town and apparently made a clean get-away.

The robbery precipitated a spectacular search by land, sea and air. Directed by wireless, police squad cars, Nassau County harbor patrol boats coast guard vessels, and a police pine swept over the Long Island mainland and ocean fronts.

Land police blocked off the three bridges connecting with the Long Island mainland, but expressed fear they were too late.

Edward Podsen, a messenger employed by the National City Bank of Long Beach, told police he and his escort, patrolman James Logouri, were accosted across the street from the bank as they were about to enter the postoffice to dispatch the money to the Federal Reserve Bank.

Covered With Revolvers

Three men stepped from the 1938 sedan—whose licence plates indicated it had been stolen in New York city—covered them with revolvers disarmed Logouri and snatched the money. Waiting in the car were the driver and a man in the rear seat. The latter cradled a machine-gun in his arms.

A few feet from the scene of the holdup a large truck, loaded with steel girders stood parked at right angles to the curb, its rear tires punctured by large spikes. Police said the truck, nearly blocking southbound traffic on the street, afforded a screen for the robbers to elude immediate chase. The drive rof the truck was detained by Long Beach police.

JAPAN AWAITS

Germany was said to believe the Japanese automatically would enter any Russian-German conflict. On the other hand, Japan is not prepared to extend operations to Europe.

U. S. Woman Slapped

Tientsin, Aug. 15—(AP)—A 60-year-old United States woman who operates a small canning business in the blockaded British concession was reported today to have been detained and slapped by Japanese guards when she attempted to bring in "prohibited" vegetables and fruit.

One report was that a Japanese sentry held the woman, Mrs. F. M. Richard while a Japanese officer slapped her face.

The British concession has been under restrictive guard by the Japanese since June 14, and the military spokesman here has said the restrictions will be continued until Britain alters her policy in China to complete agreement with the Japanese.

Military authorities have insisted there were no restrictions of foodstuffs entering the concession, but the halting and searching of persons entering and leaving has at times created such fear among Chinese carriers the supply has been almost cut off.

Visit of Their Majesties Factor Toward World Peace

Colorful Description of Baptist World Congress Given Rotarians by Rev. Claude Olmstead

MIGHTY GATHERING

Lola, Rosemary and Priscilla Lane, and Gale Page, who play the title roles in "Daughters Courageous," next at the Belle.

One of the greatest thrills of the 6th Congress, of the Baptists World's Alliance held at Atlanta, Georgia, this year, came when a foreigner stood on the platform and told forty-thousand representatives of sixty nations of the world that the greatest contributing factor toward world peace was the visit to Canada and the United States of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain, the Rev. Claude Olmstead, minister of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church told the Rotary Club yesterday.

" 'The visit of England's King and Queen," the foreigner said, "meant more for world peace than anything under heaven, bar nothing'. "

Mr. Olmstead told a vivid story of his impressions of the World Alliance and of the color and feeling that predominated in the southern city He drew comparisons with the southland and of its people, adding "that they have not got a thing that we haven't got here". He urged the clubmen to take pride in their city, and appreciate the fine things that are embodied in it "I am a citizen of no mean city", he quoted from the Bible, adding in conclusion that "I like Belleville".

Tongues of Nations

Perhaps never before has international amity been exemplified as it was during the congress, the speaker said, "I found myself next to a Canadian lady. On the other side sat a classmate from Copenhagen. Nearby a Japanese youth sat with his arms about a Chinese. The principal speaker was a native Hindu. It was heart-stirring to hear the roll-call of the nations answered by their representatives in their own tongues".

Forty-two thousand people rose and sang the opening hymn, Mr. Olmstead declared. "It was familiar "All Hail the Power" and in Mrs. Olmstead's immediate vicinity the familiar words were sung in five different languages.

The names of Hitler and Mussolini were not mentioned in the roll call, Mr. Olmstead told the clubmen. "I asked a young German why this was, and he flared up a little and stated 'There is nothing wrong with Hitler'."

Speaking with Dr. Siehmann, German representative from Berlin, the speaker was told that 'anyone can live in Germany and get along providing he minds his own business'. Mr. Olmstead stated that he did not hear a single word against the European dictators during the entire congress.

Racial Problem

The racial problem is a serious one in the south the speaker declared quoting incidents where a young colored Boy Scout on duty was roughly jerked from a street-car by a brawny white men; and of the ruffled dignity of a Southern gentleman when the speaker rose in a street-car and offered his seat to a colored woman. 'You sit down', the southerner ordered. "She'll sit down," Mr. Olmstead replied and "she did".

One of the speakers most vivid impressions, he said, was the bigness of the congress. Fifty-eight thousand people viewed the mammoth pageant that depicted the trials, persecutions and tribuations of the pioneers from the earliest day to the present. The hospitality was wonderful, he said as was the bigness of heart of the host people. Publicity was tremendous. It was stated that all countries of the world publicized the event to such extent that papers carrying publicity would cover the world.

The general impression, however, felt by all who attended, was to go out into the world, into its far-flung corners, assured of the fact that their job is a mighty one, to create, make and influence a good influence.

Summing up, Mr. Olmstead declared that we have here in Belleville as many possibilities and things beautiful as any city he had visited. "We have not got the cotton, or peanuts that the Southland has, he said, but we have the hospitality, the weather, the racial problem to a mild degree, and Christianity. "We must appreciate the things we have, and learn to serve to make the place we live in a better one. He profits most who serves, serves his Church, his God, his country and community. I am proud to live in Belleville."

Appreciation Voiced

The speaker was introduced by the Rev. Dr. James Semple while Rotarian appreciation was voiced by Rotarian Charles McGuire. Guests who received a warm welcome at the luncheon included Messrs. G. W. Davies, Peoria, Ill.; Don Baillie, Toronto; Jack Haig, Belleville; Bud Hill, San Juan, Porto Rico; Felix Garffer of the same place and the Rev. H. Godfrey of Brantford.

Prior to the address General Chairman McLean Haig of the Regatta Committee expressed his appreciation of the splendid work done by the chairmen and members of the various committees. He recommended that changes be made in various departments that the club may derive a greater revenue next year from the venture.

Mention was made of the fine gesture of Commodore R. G. E. Graham and his generous hospitality in entertaining the visiting skippers at the Bay of Quinte Country Club last Sunday. "This fine gesture did a lot to cement friendship between members of the local club and the visitors", Chairman Haig stated.

President Howard Clark was in the chair.

MANION ATTACKS

Dr. Manion today issued the following statement:

"Mr. Mackenzie King's statement in reply to my comment on Governor General's warrants was extraordinary in more ways than one.

"First, referring to his uncalled-for suggestion that I was promoting dissension, it ill becomes Mr. King to speak of promotion of dissension, for no man has contributed so much to the disruption of Canadian harmony as he. Canada has been reaping such a crop of dissension since Mr. King came to power that no one could possibly sow any more.

Anniversary Banquet

"He cannot get along with even his own party, for it is a well-known fact that his much-boomed love feast in Toronto recently was not attended by any member of the Ontario Liberal government, some of whom publicly ridiculed it afterward. And Le Devoir is my authority for the statement that quite a few of the Quebec federal members are so disgusted with the King administration that they also refused to attend.

"A man who has been so unsuccessful at promoting Canadian understanding as Mr. King should be the last to accuse anyone else of stirring up dissension.

"Second, he is still so sound asleep that he points out absentmindedly to me that, while it is quite justifiable to use Governor General's warrants for 'unexpected calamities which cannot be foreseen," it would be the "grossest disregard of the expressed will of parliament" to issue them for unemployment.

Issues of Warrants

"But my statement which he is discussing showed that between January 1938 and January 1939 he issued over $27,000,000 worth of Governor General's warrants, none of them for "unexpected calamities" but for such purposes as unemployment and relief in Saskatchewan; relief in Alberta; animal tuberculosis; Spanish refugees; C. N. Railways deficit; and unemployment in Ontario—the latter item alone for $1,000,000.

"While I admit all of these are quite deserving, yet none of them can be described as an "unexpected calamity". Indeed, it was for unemployment relief—two of the causes mentioned above—that Quebec was asking aid from Ottawa;

'Five Cent Piece'

"Surely Mr. King, in his ill-temper, spoke without thought. Or, perhaps it was with full thought and remembrance of that occasion in the House of Commons when, amidst cries of 'shame', Mr. King said he would not give a five cent piece to any Province of Canada controlled by a government opposed to his. That was probably the most shamefully partisan statement ever falling from the lips of a Canadian statesman.

"Is he merely carrying out that threat in regard to Quebec Province which so recently cast out in disgrace the completely discredited provinial government which had so long played machine politics of the most blatant kind to keep both itself and the King government in power? Is Quebec suffering from Mr. King's desire for revenge against that province's declaration of freedom from Liberal mis-government?

"Mr. King ought to cease voicing his old, worn-out political humbug about "the supremacy of parliament." Parliament is, and always has been, supreme, as he well knows. At any time the majority in parliament can turn out a government—though his 180 members are so well controlled by their whips, and so fearful of the result of an election, that they are unlikely to turn him out, as they should.

'Supremacy of Parliament'

"To show how little such words as 'supremacy of parliament' really mean to Mr. King, a Governor General's warrant for the C. N. Railways for $13,000,000 was issued on January 11th last—the very day before the meeting of that parliament to which he pays such lip service.

"Canada's only hope is that he may screw up sufficient courage to face the electorate this year, and give them a chance to pass upon his hopeless and helpless leadership—to wake him from his four years of sleep at Kingsmere—to show its opinion of that address of one hour and five minutes at Toronto, full of reminiscent platitudes and memories of the past, but empty of any recognition of the present or the future—an address which showed how completely he has failed to realize any of Canada's urgent and frightening problems of today.

"That speech, voicing as it did no word of hope for our youth or our unemployed, and indeed no constructive word of any kind, was the climax of Mr. King's four years of complete and dismal failure to measure up as a leader of initiative, vision and courage. As a result of that failure, Canada is today suffering not only from discontent and hopelessness but from more than its share of that dissension and sectionalism promoted by Mr. King and some of his followers for the purpose of attaining and staying in power, which promotion of dissension Mr. King now brazenly and ujustifiably tries to attribute to me."

Canadian "Soap Box" Champ, Ernie Young, Tells of Thrills

(By Special Correspondent)

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 14 (Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)—Ernie Young, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Young, 4 Pine Street, placed third in the International Soap Box Derby Championship race held at Derby Downs in Akron, Ohio, Sunday. Racing before an estimated crowd of 50,000 persons Ernie driving his Bluebird II down the outside lane of the racing course was outdistanced in the world's championship event by smiling Cliff Hardesty of White Plains, N.Y., and Harvey Wright of Panama City, way down in the Canal Zone.

Superb driving in the Canadian championship final brought the youthful Belleville representative of The Ontario Intelligencer, the Dominion of Canada championship. Ernie crossed the finish line in this event ahead of Donald Van Winckle representing The Toronto Evening Telegram. Young Van Winckle, winner of the derby sponsored by the Danforth Business Men's Association and The Evening Telegram was no match for the speeding and tactful driver from the Bay of Quinte town.

117 Contestants

One hundred and seventeen youths under the age of fifteen years, thrilled the large crowd. Racing their miniature juggernauts down the lanes at Derby Downs, and representing the Dominion of Canada and every state in the United States of America, the youthful driver gave their best in the attempt to capture honors for their efforts. The National and International championships were both won by Clifford Hardesty, White Planes, N.Y., entrant. The beaming smile and personality of the winner brought the huge crowd to their feet in heart-rending applause for this marvellous youngster.

In the world's championship event, young Hardesty crossed the finish line in the van with Wright of Panama City and Young, of Belleville, a few scant feet behind. It was the best International final ever witnessed since the All-American Soap Box Derby was started six years ago under the sponsorship of Chevrolet Division of General Motors.

Record Established

Acclaimed by the large crowd of racing enthusiasts, the Canadian racers and the United States entrants drove their speeding cars down the course in record time. The winners this year cut nearly one-second from the fastest time of other years. With the event now for the past six years the record time this year was under the 28 second mark for the 1173 foot course.

The general public does not realize the task these youths have in hand manning the speeding buggies down an inclined course at this speed. Nerve and foresight are needed by the young drivers in keeping their cars from swerving. The accurateness of driving is a big factor in their championship driving. Seconds are saved on the ability of the driver to maintain a straight course as be drives his speeding juggernaut of the racing lanes down the inclined course.

Following the finish of the International final, the writer was talking to Ernie Young. With his beaming smile and charming personality this young Bellevillian speaking in racing language, explained "we all can't win." Not dismayed by his losing the world's championship, Ernie congratulated Clifford Hardesty for his splendid driving in the major event of the "greatest amateur racing event in the world."

Congratulates Winner

"I have had a splendid time and met many of the young drivers from the different states," said the Belleville youth. Ernie Young in charming manner congratulated the White Plains, N.Y., and Panama City boys who nosed him out in the International final.

Ernie told the writer the Belleville boys in future years must plan their cars early. He pointed out designing for wind resistance and total suspension plays a major part in speed.

Smiling happily despite his loss, Ernie related the experience gained from racing in the derby brought a worldly experience to all entrants. "You know," he said, "just talking about the construction of the cars with the various entrants shows one new point to be considered in future building of soap box derby buggies."

"I trust the Canadian champion will have better luck next year," he said. "I tried hard and drove with my best skill but the other drivers were just a few feet better," he added.

The Canadian contingent in Akron to witness the event included besides the Belleville driver and his father and mother, Ald. Jack Allan, Cleo B. Colling, John Bean, William Ashline, W. Bernard Lovis and Bill Gilbert. From the General Motors in Oshawa four of that company's executive officers attended the races. They were: Claude D. Watt, advertising manager; Tracy Shaw, advertising department; Doug. Crekes, sales promotion manager, and Tom Elliott, McLaren's Advertising Agency. J. E. Johnson, director of sales was expected from Winnipeg, Can., but owing to poor plane connections could not reach Akron in time for the races.

Bernard Lovis acted as pit man for the Canadian entries, Young and Van Winckle. His work in the pits deserved great credit and brought forth remarks from the technical department on his ability with wheels.

The Canadians attended the champions' banquet held in the Armouries following the races at Derby Downs when the winners received their trophies for the winning efforts in the numerous competitions. At the banquet, Ernie Young speaking over the "mike" received the applauded cheers of the crowd when he said "the best man won."

City Council is Commended On River-Bank Operations

Alderman Jenning's Committee and City Works Dept. Lauded—Diversion from Walker Raceway to Main Pipe — Riverbank Roadway Constructed

Transformation of that part of the Moira River in and about the old Walker Foundry raceway, from its former dilapidated self to a clean attractive appearance through the medium of removal of sewage disposal, and the filling-in of the raceway with river-bottom deposits, has drawn the commendatory remarks of residents living in that vicinity.

Workmen of the City Works Department, through the medium of the city Regional Planning Committee under the chairmanship of Alderman Burton Jennings, have diverted the former disposal of sewage into the raceway to a main pipe with the installation of sewage laterals in residences situated near the river-bank at this point.

Adding to the general attractiveness of the "clean-up" campaign, is the construction of a road-way that runs along the river bank to the rear of the Smith Hardware Company's property, thus facilitating entrance to the city parking lots in this particular vicinity.

Residents of the district already have visions of a riverside driveway, that it is to be hoped will take the place of the present unsightly condition of the river bank at these points.

Polish Soldier Shot and Killed by Danzig Guards

Danzig Communique Says Pole Appeared on Danzig Soil Close to Frontier Barrier and Pointed Rifle

MILITARY SCENES

Polish Version is That Polish Soldier Had Lost His Way in Darkness and Was Only 16 Yards from Border

Danzig, Aug. 16 — (AP)—A Polish soldier was shot and killed today by Danzig frontier guards, an official communique announced.

The communique said the Polish soldier answered a call to halt by pointing his rifle at the Danzig guards.

The communique said:

"A Polish soldier appeared this morning on Danzig soil close to the frontier barrier at the border crossing of Kohling.

"When the Danzig frontier guards called out, the Polish soldier pointed his rifle at the Danzig officials.

"The Danzig officials thereupon made use of their weapons, whereby the Polish soldier was mortally wounded."

Protective Police

Practically no efforts were being made to conceal the military nature of the "protective police force" believed by many observers to number 12,000 men for this city of 400,000.

Black-uniformed Schutzstaffel men, carrying rifles and field packs, can be seen nightly, riding out of the city in army trucks. A squad of young "policemen" in green uniforms marched through the middle of Danzig yesterday, pulling three mounted machine-guns.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Atlantic storms! It is generally stated that our storms are rotating ones and move progressively from west to east. From this it must not be inferred that all storms (that is, cyclones) leaving our shore reach Europe. They do not stop, but they disintegrate, some to form again. It has been estimated that 10 per cent of the storms leaving America reach Europe. Of those that reach the eastern shore of Europe 32 per cent were formed over the ocean. Because of the long route that any airplane must take in crossing the Atlantic, the pilot can not hope to evade all bad weather, such as fog or cloud, even if he misses the cyclones.

Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP)—A father charged his son, Charles Baltes, with automobile theft here today after the son had taken the family automobile several times without permission. THREE CHILDREN MISSING

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16 — (AP)—Three children who failed to return from an errand to a grocery store were hunted today by some 200 volunteers, firemen and Sheriff's Deputies in a swamp district in the area of Spring Park, 20 miles west of her. The children were Buddy Forde, four, his sister, Mae, six, and Bobby Fable, 11.

THE SHARP TONGUE

Ebensburg, Pa., Aug. 16 (AP)—Sometimes both husband and wife are to blame, and sometimes just the man is at fault, opined President Judge John McCann, listening to a number of divorce cases. But sleepy courtroom loungers perked up their ears when, exasperated, he added: "However, in other cases, the State ought to pay some men for living with some women. A sharp tongue gets sharper by constant use and men who have to listen to it certainly have a burden."

A SUPER GENTLEMAN OF LEISURE

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (AP)—David L. Rosston, wealthy New York insurance broker, was described as a super gentleman of leisure by his wife, Evelyn, when she obtained a divorce. "My husband would remain late in bed," she testified yesterday. "He would insist I put tooth paste on his brush, draw his bath water, lay out his clothes and put the collar buttons and studs in his shirt before he would arise."

ROBBED OF PANTS SLEEPING IN CEMETERY

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 16 (AP)—Carl Huffman drove up in front of police headquarters and beckoned to a policeman. He would have come in, he told the officer, but he didn't have any pants. He said they were stolen, along with his money, after he parked his car in a cemetery to take a nap.

70 MILE STRIP SILESIAN BORDER IS CLOSED TODAY

Warsaw Interprets Action as Step to Camouflage German Fortification Building and Troop Movements

NAZIS BLAME POLAND

Paris Hears Stories of Secret Mobilization of German Reservists

Warsaw, Aug. 16—(AP)— The closing of a section of the Silesian frontier between Germany and Poland was attributed officially to Germany today and interpreted by the Polish press as a step to camouflage German fortification building and troop movements.

A strip along the frontier estimated at 70 miles was involved.

(In Berlin, Nazi newspapers accused Polish Police of taking the initiative in the closing.)

A Polish political source said: "Without regard to whether Hitler actually intends to wage war, it is obvious that Germany must continue beating the war drums in the war of nerves and the closing of the frontier is only a step."

Germany has given permission for entrants in the Gordon Bennett balloon races Sept. 3 to drift over German soil from Poland.

Secret Mobilization

Paris, Aug. 16—(CP-Havas)—Information obtained by sources close to the French government that secret mobilization of reservists had raised Germany's army above the 2,000,000 mark in the past 10 days increased pessimism in authoritative sources today over the Danzig crisis.

France was in consultation with Great Britain on the confidential report made to London by Dr. Carl Burckhardt, League of Nations High Commissioner to Danzig, regarding his part in the conversations at Berchtesgaden last weekend.

The Fuehrer's declarations to Burckhardt, it was reliably understood, reaffirmed Berlin's announced determination to bring Danzig back into the Reich and offered no suggestion as to how this would be accomplished.

SCALDED IN PAIL OF WATER

Sydney Mines, N.S., ug. 16 — (CP)—Henry McMullin, two-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil John McMullin, died today from scalds suffered when he upset a pail of boiling water. The accident occurred while the child was at nearby Mill Creek.

Would Reform Capitalism and Develop 'Interior Domain'

Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP)—Investigation of large corporations and development of Canada's "interior domain" were urged as remedies for some of the country's troubles by Armand Viau, general secretary of the Quebec Department of Mines, before the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics last night.

In the discussion period that followed his address to the institute on government problems in democratic countries, Mr. Viau saw two remedies in line with his suggestion for "reform of capitalism."

Large corporations should be investigated particularly with regard to their capitalization, he said, and business capital that was increased during pre-depression years by stock dividends and split-ups should be liquidated to give the stockholders a greater return.

For unemployment he believed there was one solution—encouragement to many who had been unwisely attracted to urban areas to open up Canada's "interior domain." Country life should be made more attractive, he asserted, and settlers given financial aid.

In his address, Mr. Viau saw the democracies headed for a "more or less violent social upheaval" unless there were a return to order and common sense and a re-stabilization of economic organization.

"Man's inventive genius has created many marvellous things since the beginning of the 20th century," he said. "However, his same genius has not been able to find logical and rational methods for their distribution."

A "lack of assimilation" has been responsible for a crisis in production and consumption and an instability in the law of supply and demand, declared Mr. Viau. Citing "discontent" as another sign of the times, he said low working-wage scales were set by employers who have to obey the dictates of competition.

"Family life, the principal element in the existence of democratic society," has suffered, he maintained, urging a "system of family allocations or allowances."

Mme. Pierre Casgrain, wife of the Speaker of the House of Commons and an outstanding feminist, declared in an address that French-Canadian opinion is and will be "overwhelmingly democratic."

"Any apparent deviation from democratic action is probably due to misguided attempts to make our democracy ever more real and progressive," she said.

Mme. Casgrain said there was no basis for a charge that French-Canada is Fascist.

"When I hear French-Canada referred to as Fascist Quebec, it seems just as ridiculous to me as it would to you if you read an article on 'Communist Ontario,'" she said.

No Likelihood of War Nor Major Crisis Seen In Month of September Indicated by Il Duce

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, Aug. 16—(AP)—Premier Mussolini's preparation to give General Franco a grandiose reception here in the latter half of September indicated today Il Duce is expecting neither a major crisis, nor the likelihood of war next month.

It was learned Mussolini is planning to welcome the Spanish General on an elaborate scale approaching that of the reception given Chancellor Hitler in May, 1938.

This coincided with reports here on what really happened at the weekend Salzburg meeting of the German Foreign Minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, and the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

These reports, coming from a most reliable source, were to the effect that Von Ribbentrop gave Ciano full assurances Germany is not going to let a war start over Danzig, but will try to achieve annexation of the Free City "by compromise."

Unlike the Hitler greeting, the magnitude of which was advertised weeks in advance, the Franco reception is planned as a "surprise."

This correspondent learned, however, the government, Fascist party, army, navy and police are devoting most intense efforts to its preparation.

The exact date for Franco's arrival has not been set. It probably will be about Sept. 20.

Franco will come on a Spanish warship. At Naples, or possibly Genoa, he will receive a preliminary welcome of cannon shot and fireworks, then proceed to Rome.

Franco will be received at Rome by King Victor Emmanuel.

WOULD EXTEND CONSCRIPTION IN GREAT BRITAIN

Lord Lloyd Would Have Foreign Exporters Use British Ships

FILL GAPS IN DEFENCE

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—Extension of conscription to cover "every possible gap in Great Britain's defences, together with strengthening of the merchant marine by insistence that foreign exporters to this country must use British ships to carry their goods, was urged last night by Baron Lloyd, President of the Navy League and the British Council for Foreign Relations.

In a press interview Lord Lloyd said the combined naval power of Great Britain and France far exceeds that of the axis powers in the Mediterranean, but warned against the danger for Britain in Europe of excessive involvement in the far east.

The democracies' naval supremacy, he said, should be "discouraging to the axis powers if we were to suppose they contemplate an European war. The recent review by the King of Great Britain's reserve fleet must have carried its own lesson.

Calm Confidence

"A naval power which can collect such a fleet from a state of suspended animation, call up reservists and make the fleet ready for the sea within 10 days, surely does not need to explain away the spineless degeneracy with which the might of Britain's arms has been charged.

Famous Physicist to Study Mystery of Cosmic Ray

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 16—(AP)—Dr. Robert Millikan, noted physicist, sails today on a six months search for a key to the mystery of the cosmic ray.

Two aides, Dr. Victor Neher and Dr. William Pickering, will follow next week with more than 50 types of apparatus for detecting and measuring the frequency and intensity of the rays.

The hunt will extend through Australia, Tasmania and India.

Cosmic rays constantly bombard the earth, passing through the human body. Only lead will stop them.

"But the origin of the cosmic ray is still pretty much a mystery," said Dr. Neher. "I made observations three years ago in India, but only at one latitude. This time we will try several latitudes."

New ray counters which Dr. Millikan is taking will be carried up 90,000 to 100,000 feet by sounding alloons. On the way up they will broadcast the count back to earth to be recorded automatically on tape.

Hitler Joined Army 25 Years Ago Today

Berchtesgaden, Aug. 16—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler celebrated today the 25th anniversary of his entry into the German army as a Great War volunteer. Hitler joined the Sixth Bavarian Reserve Infantry Regiment in Munich Aug. 16, 1914.

PRIME MINISTER REPLIES ON USE OF WARRANTS

Mr. King Says Such Used Only in Unexpected Situations

RELIEF DIFFERENT

Ottawa, Aug. 16—(CP)—While a federal election this fall is still only a possibility, the controversy between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Conservative leader Manion over using the authority of Governor General's warrants for unforeseen expenditures, and the circumstances prompting it, may be an issue if the electors are called to the polls as urged by Dr. Manion yesterday.

The Prime Minister and Conservative leader yesterday handed to the press the third and fourth in a series of statements which began last Thursday when Mr. King told Premier Duplessis and a Quebec relief delegation that he would not use Governor General's warrants to authorize expenditures on public works in that province.

Dr. Manion yesterday criticised the Prime Minister as one who had promoted dissension in Canada and urged that there should be an election this year to let the people say whether the present government was satisfactory. In reply, Mr. King issued a statement clarifying his attitude toward the use of warrants but had "nothing to say" on the "personal and abusive side" of Dr. Manion's statement.

Canada Puts Bacon To Test in Britain Against Foreign Bacon

Liverpool, Aug. 16—(CP Cable)—The appetizing smell of frying bacon from 1,500 northern England households next Thursday will mark a novel campaign by the Canadian government to increase the sale of this popular breakfast menu item in Great Britain.

Canada has sent free packages of Canadian and foreign bacon to householders and asked the recipients to say which they like best and why.

Dr. Carl Winkler of the Canadian National Research Laboratory, Ottawa, is here awaiting replies.

"It's a serious scientific test," he said. "The results will tell us what kind of bacon to send to Britain."

Experts claim that 24,000,000 slices of bacon are consumed daily at British breakfast tables.

Miss M. Moyse's Condition Unchanged

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP) — Physicians reported today no change in condition of Miss Marjorie Moyse, 23-year-old girl critically injured in a shooting affray at her farm home near Grafton more than two weeks ago. Her step-father, Thomas Prestridge, was fatally wounded and her mother, Mrs. Prestridge, died of undetermined causes.

Miss Moyse has been in critical condition with a bullet in her brain. Yesterday authorities said she took a "noticeable turn for the better" and regained consciousness.

BRITAIN PLANS NATIONAL CENSUS IN EVENT OF WAR

Machinery Which Will be Organized to Compile Such Register is Described

65,000 ENUMERATORS

In Event of War Register of Man Power Will be Launched at Once

London, Aug. 16—(CP)— Great Britain, already busy sharpening her land, sea and sky defences against the possibility of an autumn European crisis, today disclosed new steps to expediate a national register or census of her manpower in the event of war.

The progress made in organizing the machinery to compile such a census was described to newsmen by Sir Sylvanus Vivian, the Register General, who is operating under a broad plan of preparedness outlined last Dec. 1 by Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal.

Sir Sylvanus said nearly 65,000 enumerators had been listed to undertake the national register in as many individual districts into which the country has been divided. Should war come the register will be undertaken immediately. If no emergency arises the tabulating machinery will be used for the regular 1941 census.

All schedules, forms, books and instructions which would be used to determine how the 50,000,000 people of the United Kingdom might be used most effectively in wartime have now been printed and stored or distributed to enumerators.

Unity in Canada By Cooperation, Says Premier Duplessis

Quebec, Aug. 16—(CP)—Unity in Canada can be achieved by cooperation and collaboration but never by assimilation, Premier Maurice Duplessis said today at the opening of the 24th annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association.

Joining with Hon. E. L. Patenaude, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province and Mayor Lucien Borne of Quebec in welcoming the assembly of lawyers and judges from all parts of Canada, the Premier commented briefly on criticism sometimes directed to certain Quebec legislation, presumably the Padlock Act.

6 in Bull Gang Punished With Strap for Attempted Break

Toronto, Aug. 16—(CP)—Six prisoners who made a break for freedom at Guelph Reformatory yesterday are being punished with the strap, Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, said today.

The six men, working in the "bull gang" when they attempted their escape, were recaptured by guards within the reformatory grounds.

"The strap is being administered on the place provided by nature for that purpose," Mr. Nixon said, "we find that a much better deterrent than parading them in court where they might have an opportunity of making heroes of themselves."

It was the policy of the department, Mr. Nixon said that whenever escaped prisoners were recaptured by the prison officers and unless they committed some other offense during their freedom, the punishment is meted out at the institution.

'Something in Air' Feeling in London; Italy Has Plan

Paris Reports Say Hitler's Plan is Still Annexation of Danzig Free City

BACKGROUND OF RUMORS

London View is That Poland Must Not be Left Out of Any Plan Nor Must Progress in Russian Negotiations be Ignored

London, Aug. 16—(CP)—A feeling there is "something in the air" foreshadowing quick developments in the European stalemate grew today in international circles against a background of peace plan rumors.

Official silence on the intense diplomatic activity that followed Chancellor Hitler's conference with Dr. Carl Burckhardt, League of Nations High Commissioner for Danzig, strengthened the belief moves to break the stalemate over Danzig are impending.

Burckhardt's report on the meeting was studied closely by Great Britain, France and Sweden, the League committee of three on Danzig, and by Poland, a principal in the dispute.

It was understood Poland's Ambassador to London, Count Edward Raczynski, had arranged to discuss the report today with the British Foreign Minister, Viscount Halifax.

Despite the many peace plan rumors circulated since Hitler met his Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy the day after the Burckhardt interview, officials insisted Britain had received no proposals on the German-Polish Danzig dispute.

Poland Must be Considered

It was reiterated in government circles no "plan" is likely to bear good fruit, if it proposes to leave Poland out of the negotiations, or "ignores progress" in the negotiations of Britain and France to bring Russia into their front.

Nazi Attitude Stiffens

Berlin, Aug. 16—(AP)—A stiffening Nazi attitude toward Poland and other signs of tension heightened the conviction among observers here today events were shaping for a turn soon on the crucial issue of the Danzig Free City.

Germans in all walks of life carefully weighed the possibility of another of Chancellor Hitler's famous "weekend surprises" to settle the long-drawn dispute over whether Danzig should be handed back to Germany. Germany demands full sovereignty over the Baltic port city which since the Great War has been a Polish customs unit under supervision of a League of Nations committee.

Officials insist a Danzig solution will be a bloodless one, and there is some chance the present feeling of tenseness may subside.

Reminiscent of the role of the German press during the days immediately preceding the annexation of Austria, the Sudetenland and Memel, and the establishment of a protectorate over Bohemia and Moravia, Nazi newspapers are hurling broadsides at Poland.

Headlines attacked "Polish terror rampaging against national minorities."

Italy Has Plan

Rome, Aug. 16—Direct negotiations between Germany and Poland for the German acquisition of Danzig emerged today as the apparent Italian plan for settlement of that problem.

Stamping or Scraping of Feet Not Nazi Way, Says Magazine

Berlin, Aug. 16—(AP)—The National Socialist magazine "The Movement" declared today that there is a Nazi way of applauding at a public function and a Nazi way for a crowd to indicate its collective opinion that "the show is rotten."

The discussion of crowd etiquette arose because some Nazi leaders concluded that German students were applauding in a non-Nazi manner.

German students since time immemorial have indicated approval at public meetings by stamping their feet to achieve a thunderous roll of sound.

They indicated displeasure by scraping their shoes across the floor, making a swishing sound like a thousand hisses rolled into one.

But this manner of indicating approval or displeasure is "anonymous" the magazine complained.

The magazine pointed out that feet move under the chairs where no one can see them so the person making the noise escapes personal responsibility for it.

"How different in a theatre, where the sign for pleasure is handclapping and the indications of disapproval is lusty shouting of 'phui'" the magazine said.

"That is honest, a public declaration of one's opinion. One must ask whether anonymity in this matter is worthy of students.

"If we want to be political soldiers, if we want to be honorable National Socialists we must tear away the veil on anonymity. We want to assume responsibility for our opinions in a manner that all may see."

'NOT ANOTHER MUNICH'

"Britain is now on a war basis. There will not be another Munich." declared Lord Riverdale, leading British Industrialist, as he left Montreal for Quebec to sail for England. Lord Riverdale spent only three days in Canada to visit his Canadian agents.

WILLIAM DUNLOP FINED AT PICTON

Was Arrested One Week Ago on Cliff at Lake-on-the-Mountain

Picton, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP)—William Dunlop, 48, Picton's mountain climber who gave a crowd the jitters by sleeping on a small ledge above a 75-foot cliff and then scrambling up an almost perpendicular wall of rock, today was fined $10 and costs on a charge of being drunk in a public place.

Dunlop was arrested a week ago after exciting a group of spectators as he crawled through a narrow, 30-foot tunnel leading to a cliff at Lake-on-the-Mountain. He was spotted sleeping peacefully on his precarious perch.

Police and the fire department were called, but would-be rescuers were afraid to rouse him for fear he might fall. Finally he awakened and crawled along a narrow ledge to safety. Spectators feared a misstep would have plunged him to rocks below.

Search Goes On for Train Saboteur

Reno, Nev., Aug. 16—(AP)—Search for the saboteur who wrecked the streamline flier "City of San Francisco" intensified today as the Southern Pacific Railroad posted a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the accident which killed 23 people and injured 109.

Numerous persons have been picked up in railway yards and hobo jungles on both sides of the remote canyon 200 miles east of here where railroad officials said a sprung rail rocketed the speeding luxury train off the track Saturday night, but officers, including federal bureau of investigation operatives, disclosed no clues.

Robert La Duceur of Lewiston, Mont., who had been questioned for two days, was cleared of any implication last night by federal and railroad agents, but Police Chief Andy Welliver said he planned to hold him for further investigation.

BELIEVES CRIME INCREASING

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 16—(CP) — Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell declared in court today he believed crime was rapidly becoming more prevalent throughout the country.

"There is a feeling of deviltry and rascality present," he said "and here are more young chaps on the highways who are committing crime than I have ever seen before."

City and District News

TOMATO CANNING TO START SOON

With indications pointing to a much lighter crop than was harvested a year ago, canning factory officials of the district announced today that preserving operations will start in various places this week.

The vegetable is said to be ripening rapidly in favored spots of the district, and with the ground reported to be damp in other sections, growers are anxious to harvest the crop before rot sets in.

CONDITIONS GOOD FOR FALL PLOUGHING

First fall plowing is now being carried on in the district under ideal conditions of cooler weather and sufficient moisture in the ground to make the work easy, it was reported in local agricultural offices this morning.

Rain during the week-end penetrated the ground to a depth of from eight to ten inches and perfect growing conditions have followed the break in the extended dryness and rainfall received. "You can almost see the pasture growing up in a new green crop and stock are again enjoying excellent pasturage. Milk production is fast returning to normal volume," it was reported by the office.

GOOD HEALTH RECORD BEING MAINTAINED

Belleville maintains its excellent record of health and freedom from disease. At the present time no single case of contagious disease is listed by the local Board of Health, and no cases are under observation of the Medical Officer of Health, it was reported today.

The present year has been singularly free from contagion of any sort, and the few cases registered of other sickness have been seasonal ones and of the mild type, it was stated.

TOURIST BUYING IS REPORTED MODERATE

A canvass of Front Street stores reveals that tourist buying is being experienced to some degree this summer, but not in as heavy volume as in previous years, according to the proprietors of two of the city's leading gift establishments.

Department stores have been enjoying fair trade in woollens and other articles not commonly found in stores south of the border, and restaurants, the majority, have been enjoying peak business during the past few weeks.

Blind Mare Killed in Fall Over Cliff

'Bonnie,' a 1600 pound black mare, totally blind, which made newspaper headlines last year when she stumbled over a thirty-five foot cliff in her Point Traverse pasture, and emerged unhurt, tried the same performance the other day.

But it will be "Bonnie's final attempt for publicity. Her second performance cost her her life. She had to be destroyed.

A parcel containing 300 living parasites from the Dominion Laboratories at Belleville, was shipped last night on its way to Haifa, Palestine.

The parasites will be used for breeding purposes in the Holy Land and susequently for the purpose of combating the mealy bug, that is causing much damage to the citrus plants in that country. Mr. G. Wishart, of the local ranch of the Dominion Entomological Bureau, stated today that these parasites had originally been imported from South America, where they had proven valuable in the combat against insects that damage citrus plants, as was the case in California also.

Sergeant Harry Thompson, O.P.P., who took Foster into custody after he was arrested in Peterborugh, yesterday, stated today that the charge is that Foster had collected certain taxes for the Village of Frankford prior to his apprehension in 1936 and allegedly conversed the money to his own use.

Crown is Granted Enlargement in Russell Wilson Case

Trenton, Aug. 16.—(Special) — Russell Wilson, United States-born transient, who has been held in custody since July 27th last on a charge of wounding Clarence Gosleigh, Trenton, found himself facing a further remand when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., here yesterday.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., requested the enlargement inasmuch as the prosecution desired more time in which to prepare its case against Wilson, Mr. Donnan, explained.

The charge arose out of an alleged affray near a cabin along the Bay shore here on July 27th last, during which Clarence Gosleigh, is alleged to have been attacked by Wilson, who is said by Trenton police to have been wielding a knife at the time. Gosleigh's neck was badly lacerated at the time, but he was more recently discharged from the Belleville Hospital, it was learned today. A week's enlargement was granted.

ANNUAL AIR FORCE FIELD DAY AND SHOW ON FRIDAY

Day's Program to Include Showing of Aeronautics and Display

Trenton, Aug. 16 (Special)—All set for their big day of the year, the fifth annual R.C.A.F. Sports Day at the Airport on Friday of this week, airmen are sitting back and congratulating themselves on a good job well prepared for in every sense of the word. With all of Monday afternoon devoted to trials and eliminations and the entire personnel of the station on hand to cheer favorites, officers and airmen really turned on the heat to set some rather astonishing records in the early trials.

Conceded by the experts to have the best chance of annexing the group aggregate points and the coveted honors that go to the highest contender, Pilot Officer Joe Stephenson had to set a new record for himself to win the hundred yard dash when he was literally pushed to the tape by Cooper of the Wireless School. Others in the same dash were within inches of the leaders and there is every indication that the competition in this and other events is going to be of the toughest.

In the high jump six reached the mark required for qualification and will turn on the heat on Friday. There is a large entry for the three-mile run, and sprinters and other athletes are on the grounds each afternoon and evening getting in fighting trim for the big day.

Preparations Complete

And it will be a big day. There is little doubt about that. Officials and all concerned with the preparations for this event have spared n oeffort to make the fifth annual sports day at the R.C.A.F. station an event to be remembered by those who attend. For the first time since the inception of these events a whole day has been devoted to the running off of the various events; and indeed this this has been made necessary by the huge field and the number of entries. A splendid programme has been prepared, and prizes as usual will be very excellent. During the afternoon events and flying exhibitions will be put on with individual stunting and group flying included. Should the weather be suitable Sgt. Jock Cameron will hop from the door of a Fairchild to thrill the hundreds of spectators with a parachute jump.

Flying demonstration and parachute jumping: Event A—Flight Formation: Oxford Air-Speed Bombers piloted by Squadron Leader W. I. Riddell, Flight Lieutenant D. M. Edwards, Flight Lieutenant D. M. Smith, and Flight Lieutenant D. S. Blaine. Event B—Army Cooperation Demonstration with Atlas Planes—Pilots Squadron Leader W. D. Van Vliet, Flying Officer R. M. McKay, and Flying Officer R. F. Douglas; Individual Flying (and this is real stunting that will open the eyes of all who see it, showing off the new Harvard trainer to advantage)—Pilot, Flight Lieutenant D. M. Edwards. Parachute Demonstration—Sgt. J. Cameron to jump from a Fairchild cabin plane piloted by Sgt. G. Godson.

SKATING RINK IS TURNED INTO GROCERY STORE

Loblaw Groceteria in Temporary Quarters in Hume Arena While New Store is Under Construction

Belleville business front is rapidly taking on new form a sthe spirit of progress seems to have taken firm hold on this city and inspired the business men to expand, enlarge and modernize their establishments in keeping with this progressive spirit which counts not the costs if the results are achieved, that of keeping Belleville in the front rank of business enterprise. The latest Belleville business enterprise to obey the urge is the Loblaw Groceteria, which is doubling its business area and for that purpose has taken over the two stores adjoining, Thompson Furniture and Edwards, Optician.

Tuesday, August 15, 1939, 6 p.m. was zero hour for the Belleville Loblaw staff, for this marked the beginning of mobilization for the new and temporary front, the Hume Arena, which will house this business enterprise for the next two months while the new store is being fashioned into one of the most modern and beautiful stores in Canada.

Promptly at six o'clock Tuesday evening Manager George Fordyce, marshalled his staff and assisted by a fleet of trucks the hegira began, to finish four hours later with everything out of the old store and placed in the temporary store.

All day Wednesday the Loblaw staff worked hard and assembled the stock for the opening Thursday, and they certainly have worked wonders in creating a modern groceteria in the midst of a skating rink. This location will be occupied while the new and larger store is being created from the original store and the two stores additional taken over.

MODERN PUMPER PURCHASE BY CITY IS RECOMMENDED

Equipment Would Replace 18 Year Old Hose Truck and 14 Year Old Hook and Ladder Truck

A special meeting of the city council called last evening resolved into a regular committee meeting at which a recommendation was passed for vote on Monday evening next that a modern pumper for the city fire department of the "Quad" type be purchased.

It was estimated that the purchase of the new pumper which would be complete with newest type ladders and latest aids toward modern fire fighting would entail an expenditure ranging between $5,000 and $6,000.

Recommendation for the purchase of the pumper to replace the existing eighteen-year-old Reo hose truck and fourteen-year-old hook and ladder, made obsolete by the changing height of the city's buildings had previously been advanced by the chairman of the Fire Committee, Alderman Laurie Lewis.

The recommendation was the subject of discussion among members which lasted from shortly before eight o'clock in the evening until well past eleven. In the meantime salesmen of various fire equipment and truck companies awaited at the city hall for the decision of council.

It had been expected that a vote on the purchase would be taken last evening but due to the lateness of the hour, the vote was postponed until a second special meeting on Monday evening next.

During the course of the discussion of the bumper, a discussion whose hum was audible throughout the halls of the building so vigorously was the subject debated, Fire Chief Lynch was called twice within the committee room to explain in full detail the need for the pumper and new type ladders of longer reach and easier handling.

It has been claimed by the Chief and Alderman Lewis of the department that existing ladders were not long enough to reach to the top of higher buildings along Front Street, nor care for any demands which might be made at the hospital.

"Our present hose truck is over eighteen years old, and we are unable to even get tires for it any more without canvassing the country and buying up tires from other discarded machines of the same type. Our ladders are so heavy it takes about six men to handle one of them, and then the longest one is not long enough to reach to the roof of a certain Front Street block". Chief Lynch reportedly told members of the council.

Full agreement that such purchase of new pumper and modern, lightweight ladders was needed was given by Mayor Bone though opposition to the expenditure at this time was voiced by some of the members of the council.

The purchase will, however, be subject to open vote of council at next Monday evening's meeting.

Must Dim Lights on Meeting Cars

Drivers of motor vehicles in the Province of Ontario must dim their lights when meeting oncoming vehicular traffic according to the latest orders received from the Department of Highways, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine revealed today.

"There is no excuse in the future and the new law is to be rigidly enforced, we have been instructed", added H.T.O. Ervine as he outlined the new amendment to the Highway Act.

"In paragraph "B" of the section regulating motor vehicle lighting, it regulates that all lower or passing beam lights must show a beam 42 inches wide at 75 feet and this law applies to all times and all types of motor vehicles.

"Section 3, however, says—that when meeting an oncoming motor vehicle, at a distance of not less than 500 feet, all drivers 'MUST DIM' or use lower or passing beam lights".

SWIM ACROSS 150 FT. CHANNEL PROVES FATAL

George Loadsman, 52, Collapses As He Reaches Shallow Water

HEART FAILURE CAUSE

Stricken while swimming across a 150 foot channel at the foot of George Street late yesterday afternoon, George Loadsman, 52, Herchimer Avenue, succumbed to a heart attack and died as he sat in the shallow water near the opposite bank. Death was caused from heart failure, due to over-exertion, Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson stated. There will be no inquest, he added.

Loadsman had been assisting Maurice Callaghan in pulling boats from the water near this point, and had offered to make a joking wager with one, Captain J. Smith, regarding their swimming prowess. Callaghan warned both men against the procedure, but although Smith headed the warning, Loadsman pressed some money into the hand of Callaghan, who warned him that the wager was off and Loadsman plunged into the water.

Stops in Shallow Water

The deceased man reached a point near the opposite bank and was seen to waver. His head was visible above the surface when he stopped in shallow water and sat down to rest. Smith's and Callaghan's yells elicited no response. Callaghan ordered a bystander to take his punt and go to Loadsman's assistance. When they reached the stricken man he was resting on the bottom of the channel and the men immediately brought him to shore.

"I tried artificial respiration for some time," Callaghan stated this morning, "but could get no water from his lungs or stomach. I yelled for someone to get a doctor, even as I was sure Loadsman was dead".

Dr. R. A. Flynn, pronounced Loadsman dead from heart-failure while Coroner Robertson who visited the scene of the tragedy decided there would be no inquest, following his official investigation.

George Edward Loadsman was born in England, his parents, being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Loadsman. For the past twenty six years he had lived in Belleville and vicinity for some time he had resided in Herchimer Avenue.

The employment of the deceased was that of a fireman with the Canadian National Railways and early yesterday morning he came in off a run. By the local officials in his department and by his fellow employees he was well esteemed. To many friends and acquaintances his passing has brought feelings of regret and much sympathy is entertained for the family in their bereavement. In religion Mr. Loadsman was a member of the Church of England and associated with St. Thomas' Parish. During the Great War he served in France.

Surviving to mourn his loss are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Betsy Ann Wilcox; one daughter, Mrs. Harry Semark, Belleville; four sisters, Mrs. Emily Preston, Winnipeg, Man.; Mrs. George Wilkinson, Belleville; Mrs. Fred Cook, Belleville, and Mrs. Sidney Davenport, Toronto.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

52-Year-Old Nut Retains Flavor

Its meat said to taste as fresh as that of a newly harvested product, a hickory nut, claimed to have been sealed within a putty container with numerous other articles, over fifty years ago, was brought to light the other day by two Wellington youths.

It appears that a Mrs. Harry Pettingill of that village enclosed the articles including the nut within a potted plant pot. It was given by her daughter to Mrs. Rowena MacDonald whose son Bruce, and a friend Keith Teskey investigated the strange container and discovered the articles.

Opening the nut they discovered the meat similar in taste to that of more recent nuts, although when left for a few days, it turned brown and rancid.

Letter Addressed "Ghost Town" Arrives in Picton

The value of newspaper publicity has again been evidenced. With practically the entire eastern part of Ontario agog over the reported "ghost" of Picton, and newspapers carrying more or less colorful accounts of the spooky visitor who causes strange noises and other ghostly phenomena, the Prince Edward town has more or less been placed on the "map."

For instance, yesterday a letter addressed to Wilfred Scott, "Ghost Town," Ontario, was delivered to his home in Picton.

Campers Join in Union Service.

When rainy weather interfered with the open air devotional service planned by the executive of the Oak Lake Leadership Camp, the entire membership journeyed to Stirling where they joined in worship with the congregations of St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at their union service held in the former church. Rev. W. J. Scott, minister, was assisted in the service by Mr. J. Donald Baxter of Bloomfield, Conference president of the United Church Y.P.U.'s, and leader at the camp. Mr. Baxter spoke briefly bearing the greetings of the camp to both churches and read the Scripture lesson upon which Rev. Scott based his inspiring address. Mr. G. L. Clute presided at the organ and William Reynolds offered an excellent baritone solo, "An Evening Prayer."

Couple Honored By Friends.

Returning from a brief wedding trip on Tuesday of last week Mr. and Mrs. Volney Richardson of Rawdon Township were surprised by about 75 friends and neighbors on Thursday evening who gathered to offer them congratulations and to take part in a fine social evening which included the presentation of two handsome occasional chairs on behalf of the community to the honored couple. A carefully arranged program of musical numbers, readings and short speeches preceded by presentation.

Acting as master of ceremonies for the evening Arthur Duncan briefly outlined the purpose of the gathering and also opened the program with community singing assisted at the piano by Mrs. Nathaniel Heath. Numbers contributed to the entertainment of the evening included songs and stories by Art Duncan, readings by Mrs. J. McInroy and Mrs. L. Rodgers, brief speeches by Alex McCurdy, John Bateman, Carman Pitchett and Mrs. L. Rodgers.

Midway through the interesting program the chairman of the evening conducted the guests of honor to a prominent position in the living room and introduced Philip Carr who read the following address, followed by the presentation of a pair of handsome occasional chairs by Carman Pitchett. Both Mr. and Mrs. Richardson expressed their sincere gratitude for the kindly gesture as all joined in singing "They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

You've launched your craft of life upon the matrimonial sea
And may you both, while sailing o'er, staunch craftsmen prove to be;
Should clouds arise we grant that they with silver may be lined
But quickly vanish, even these, to leave no trace behind.

And happy may your voyage be with sunshine all the way,
To brighten both your paths and make your lives one grand song,
Now with yourselves your joys will rest we hope they'll not be few
When many years have rolled around what pleasures you'll review.

The marriage vows, those sacred ties, your hearts with joy doth bind,
And as each anniversary comes, your lives be more entwined.
To you how bright the future looks, what prospects are in view,
And may they all be realized is our best wish for you.

Your home will ever be to you the dearest spot on earth,
May cares pass lightly o'er and leave a cheerful fireside hearth.
We wish you every happiness in this your wedded life,
And may your days be full of bliss as husband and as wife.

So Volney and Lottie, we ask you to accept these gifts as a token of our love and good wishes, trusting that these few hours spent here in your home might leave this thought with you: "That in all the great and momentous experiences that go to make up the whole of life that we your friends and neighbors are (always) with you."

Signed on behalf of the community—P. Carr, P. McGee, J. Mitts, C. Pitchett.

The long, faithful services of Mrs. Richardson as school teacher at the Ridge Road school is visibly recognized by the parents of the pupils with whom she has enjoyed sincere popularity during her term there. Her work has been of such quality that the Board of Trustees have voiced their regret at losing her. Mr. Richardson is a widely known native of the Stirling district with an enviable disposition that gains him popularity wherever he goes.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Richardson: It is with a great deal of pleasure that we, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here this evening to avail ourselves this opportunity of extending to you our heartiest congratulations on your marriage and our deepest wish for a long and happy wedded life.

While we regret very much losing you, Mrs. Richardson, from our school where you have so ably instructed for some time past, fitting the youth of our community for the great task of life, yet it affords us great pleasure that you are to remain a part of our community life so that your great store of wisdom and knowledge and your lofty ideals may still be a profit and inspiration to us all. We feel that you have exercised that splendid judgment in the selection of a husband who is popular with all the surrounding community.

Spends Six Years In Governor-General's Service in Bermuda

Stirling, Aug. 16 (Special) — Six years ago a kindly Canadian lady residing in New York City was appointed through the efforts of the British Consul to a position in the service of Sir Reginald Hilliard, Governor General of Bermuda. During her stay in Bermuda she lived in the historic Government House adjacent to the city of Hamilton in the Parish of Pembroke. Returning home recently to Toronto via New York, she visited the World's Fair and expresses the belief that it will be some time before she accustoms herself to the noise of motor traffic, screeching brakes, etc., after living where no such noises are heard. Her stay in New York was most interesting but the nights were almost sleepless, she declared. The historic Government House on an island of bicycles is situated on a hill and the only night noises that reach the ears of the occupants is the native singing of villagers returning home. Voices carry long distances due to the atmospheric condition, but the natives' talking is musical and often they sing quietly as they wend their way along the gravel and coral stone roadways.

The quietness and peace that abides on this tiny isle of the sea with a population of 60,000 is only disturbed by such things as war threats in other lands that will involve their military power. Anxiety was caused during the last European crisis when naval and military authorities ordered the swelling of reserve ranks to full peace-time quota.

Natives of this tiny speck in a vast oceanic expanse are happy and contented. Many of them are born and live a long and happy life without leaving the island.

Sir Reginald Hillier in whose service Mrs. Shubrook has worked completed his term as Governor General of Bermuda and Chief Military Authority on the Island and returned to his native England. Military activities are always apparent there since the establishment of two training stations for British Imperial service men, and it is also the main base of the British West Indies fleet.

Mrs. Shubrook is at present visiting friends and relatives in various parts of Ontario and will later return to New York to live. "Six years in the peaceful quietness of Bermuda has created within me a restlessness that causes me to wonder if I shall ever be completely happy in any other land."

Social and Chicken Dinner.

Over three hundred people from all parts of the district attended the annual social and chicken dinner under the auspices of St. James' Church. The event this year took place in the Agricultural Hall at the Stirling Fair Grounds. The ladies of St. James' Church have acquired an enviable reputation in the preparation of menus for suppers and dinners and this year excelled themselves. A bright and courteous staff of waiters and waitresses attended the needs of the three hundred guests in a most efficient manner and the quantity and quality of the attractive food served brought many worthy comments from the very satisfied diners. The gaily decorated tables were enhanced in their appearance by the presence of several large bouquets of cut flowers.

Following the excellent dinner the guests were permitted to patronize several games directed by industrious committee workers, with bingo being amongst the most popular. Later in the evening a portion of the building was given over to the dance committee through whose efforts an excellent orchestra provided good music for both round and old fashioned square dancing until a late hour, dance lovers enjoyed a pleasant time.

All the committee workers, including the ladies who assisted the preparation of the excellent meal are to be congratulated for the success of the annual event that is looked forward to yearly by the citizens of the entire community.

PRIME MINISTER

Governor General's warrants were issued by the present government only when unexpected and unforeseen relief costs exhausted the amounts granted by parliament for that purpose, the Prime Minister said.

At present the amounts voted for relief purposes were not exhausted, and what the Prime Minister took exception to was the suggestion that warrants be used to effect financial arrangements different to those applying to all provinces.

Premier's Statement

Mr. Mackenzie King's statement follows:

"With regard to the personal and abusive side of Mr. Manion's reply to my explanatory statement on the use of Governor General's warrants, I have nothing to say. I feel, however, that the public are entitled to the facts regarding the use of Governor-General's warrants last year.

"It is true that warrants were issued to provide relief in the drought areas of Saskatchewan and Alberta, when the drought assumed proportions far greater than might reasonably have been anticipated when the session ended on July 1, 19v8. A warrant was also issued in December, 1938 to provide for special works in Northern Ontario when a severe and unexpected increase in unemployment, for which parliament had not provided, was experienced in that area. The deficit of the Canadian National Railways proved to be greater last year than there was reason to believe it would be, and it was necessary to issue a warrant to make provision for the unexpected additional deficit. In all of these cases the use of warrants was resorted to only after the appropriation made by parliament had been exhausted, and only because an unexpected and urgent situation had arisen.,

'Entirely Different'

"The present situation in regard to unemployment is entirely different. Parliament has already made an appropriation to assist in relieving unemployment and up to the present, the greater part of the appropriation has not been used. The suggestion regarding Governor General's warrants to which I have taken exception was that the appropriation already made by parliament for unemployment, which is on the same basis for all the provinces, should be set aside in the case of one province, and Governor General's warrants used to effect different financial arrangements. In the opinion of the government it would be improper to disregard, in this manner, the expressed will of parliament."

A PRECIOUS DOCUMENT

There came to the possession of the British Museum yesterday Earl Haig's "Back to the Wall" order of April 11, 1918. This order was issued after the Germans hurled 106 divisions against the Allies on a fifty-mile front in an effort to separate the British and French, take the channel ports and annihilate Britain's forces. In the order appear these words—

"Every position must be held to the last man. There must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall, and believing in the justice of our cause, each one of us must fight to the end. The safety of our homes and the freedom of mankind depend alike upon the conduct of each of us at this critical moment."

This order was obtained at the close of the Great War by Sir Philip Sasson, Haig's secretary during part of the war. He died on June third and the Museum under the will becomes the possessor of the order.

This order expressing the British spirit is a precious document for future ages to look upon with the knowledge that Britons and their Allies in those days stood by their cause and saved homes and freedom.

SABOTAGE SUSPECTED

Man has a natural fear of a wrecker, such as is blamed for the loss of 24 lives in the de luxe train which was wrecked in the Nevada canyon a few days ago to add another to the toll of great tragedies at which man shudders. Sabotage is suspected as the explanation of the disaster which otherwise, it is said, could not have taken place. Spikes had been removed, clearest evidence of a fiendish attempt to destroy.

The word "sabotage" comes from the French word for wooden shoe, "sabot," which until the industrial era had not given rise to this derivative word "sabotage", which originally meant the damaging of machines by workers through the placing of a wooden shoe in the mechanism.

Man does not so much mind an open foe or opponent but he does not like an enemy, one with inside knowledge or guarded by trust imposed in him who moves in the darkness or silently and alone to perform an act which will make many suffer.

The detectives will find their task a difficult one, for where there is sabotage the traces of the doer are not very often revealed.

TREES IN A SIDEWALK

Those who have plenty of land as in smaller cities and in the country can hardly appreciate what the sight of a tree means to a New Yorker.

Fifth Avenue, New York, appreciates elms to the tune of one million dollars or so—at least they are called the million dollar elms of Fifth Avenue. They are the eight trees inserted into the cement walk before Radio City so that New Yorkers could see what an elm is like.

These trees this year are taking it easy. They are getting their nourishment by sending out roots far and wide and so have suspended development above ground, being as a writer says "as bare as a roast turkey." These trees have grown six or eight inches in the walks since they were put in. They are about thirtyfive feet high. The other day they were given their first food, liquid cow manure, through a tube.

Those who see the stately elms on private property, on waste areas, on commons or in fields can appreciate the New Yorker's yearning to see these lordly trees as they exist in nature.

FOUNTAIN OF HEALTH

The Fountain of Perpetual Youth has been the quesa of mankind throughout the ages. Ponce de Leon thought he had found it in Florida and left his mark on that southern part of the United States. But no one has found it. Probably it will never be found.

Yet Dr. Leonard Hussey ,a noted medical explorer, said yesterday in Ottawa that a fountain of continual health, which may be different from one of eternal youth, might well be at the South Pole. He is a veteran of scientific expeditions to the Pole and the Sudan. It was he who buried the great English explorer, Sir Eernest Shackleton, under the ice of South Georgia Island east of Cape Horn.

No germ can live at or near the pole, Dr. Hussey states.

The four medical men who were with the Shackleton expeditions of 1914-1916 and 1921-22 discussed the idea more than once and all were agreed the location would be ideal.

People of the North have such confirmed views of the North Pole and people of the South of the South Pole that no one hears of settlements for these frigid areas.

BIRCHES

Birches white and birches gray
Leap into the light of day,
Where the flaming maple flashes
Round each trunk its scarlet sashes,
Birches gray and birches white,
Growing in a glamorous light;
Wraith-like, wistful, slim and slender,
In the midst of Autumn's splendor.

Science, with its latest lore,
Tells us trees have hearts and more!
Souls have they—'tis pretty certain—
Science lifts the age-long curtain.
Pale, patrician, soars the birch,
Satin-smooth and free from smirch,
With its charms it does not reckon—
Let the scarlet maple beckon!

Birches seem content to be
From rich color mostly free,
'Tis enough that Autumn grasses
Heap their marigoldean masses
All around their feet, while red
Burn the maple leaves o'erhead.
Wraith-like, wistful, slim and slender—
Birches pale in midst of splendor.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS have been enjoying their annual get-together talkfest and holiday outing. Hence the editorial columns of our weekly exchanges have been conspicuous for the absence of live editorial matter, if any. Our weekly brethern gathered in the coolness of Niagara Falls and listened to a few good speeches, permitted themselves to be entertained at sight-seeing, golf, etc., and wound up with a trip to the New York World's Fair where they were guests of Grover Whelan, creater of the miracle fairyland which rose out of the swamp on Flushing Meadows within sight of the Empire State Building and Al. Smith's Brown Derby. The weekly newspaper publishers certainly do themselves proud when they go a visiting ,having visited England and the Continent upon editorial convention tours, and there are few places of interest between the Atlantic and the Pacific that the weekly publishers have not pitched their tents to talk about the necessity of more national advertising as a tonic for sluggish local advertisers, or who has the neatest Front Page, standard charges for auction bills, etc.

THAT HOOTER, TOOTER, MAN who likes to hear the sound of his own motor horn and sounds it at every opportunity, is in danger, if the editor of the Peterborough Examiner keeps his mad up. Sez he: "We have always had a homicidal impulse in regard to the individual who comes along in his car and finding himself confronted by a long line of motionless automobiles proceeds to send out long and blatant blasts on his auto horn. He is probably half a block away from the head of the line and hasn't the slightest idea what is causing the holdup, but that does not prevent him from insultingly tooting away on his horn until everybody in the neighborhood is longing for his blood. Hence the homicidal impulse which fires the editor may spread to everybody in the neighborhood and that horn tooter may be nearer extinction than he has any idea of.

50 YEARS AGO

August 16th., 1889

The oldest inhabitant will tell you that when he or she was a boy or girl, the question of the building of a canal at the western extremity of the Bay of Quinte to connect with Lake Ontario was talked about, but until yesterday no boat ever passed between the two bodies of water. The present government in the year 1882 granted a sum of money towards the construction of the canal and on the 31st day of August in that year the first sod was cut and the contract let to Messrs. Silcox & Mowry; the former later retired from the firm and the completion of the work left in the hands of the latter. The canal proper is 5 1-4 miles in length, 50 feet wide and 13 1-2 feet in depth. The canal is spanned by four fine iron bridges, the foundation for three of which was supplied from the Ox Point quarries and the iron bridges from the works of the Weddell Bridge Company, of Trenton. Through the courtesy of Mr. H. Corby, M.P., many citizens, including Mayor W. Jeffers Diamond and the members of the city council, Mr. Thomas Ritchie, President of the Board of Trade, Col. Strong, American Consul here, and many other prominent citizens, joined a number of the prominent citizens of Trenton yesterday in formally opening the Murray Canal. Arriving at the canal three boats loaded with people; (with the Trenton Band playing on one of the boats) steamed through the canal as far as Brighton Wharf where a stop was made and where lay at the wharf the yacht Surprise, Commodore Forbes in command, which was the first boat to pass through the canal. Later the excursionists proceeded to Presqu'Ile, which in the near future will become famous as a summer resort. At present there are many campers there. It was with regret that the party sailed for home. We noticed the following prominent persons present from a distance and from Trenton: Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, Minister of Customs; Mr. Cochrane, M.P.; Mr. H. Corby, M.P.; Mr. G. W. Ostrom, M.P.P.; Mr. D. Gilmour and Mayor Morrison of Trenton. Although there were four members of Parliament present in the party, no speeches were made.

Facts or Parents About Infantile Paralysis

The fact that the early symptoms of infantile paralysis are exactly like any other infection of nose and throat should keep mothers watchful but not alarmed. By putting the youngster to bed and keeping him quiet, the most important part of the treatment is being accomplished, whether the trouble is infantile paralysis or some less serious condition.

From 85 to 90 per cent of cases occur in children under 6 years of age. Most children over 10 escape it, but it does occur in older children and adults. It usually occurs in late summer and autumn.

One particular point should be noted by parents and that is the suddenness with which the symptoms usually appear. The child is apparently well, or, at least, not complaining in any way, when suddenly he is attacked by headache and perhaps pain in the back of neck and in back and limbs. He is "feverish", throat sore, nose may be running, may be nausea and vomiting, and a general tired feeling.

It can thus be seen that the symptoms are quite similar to what is found in the common ailments of children.

Besides putting the youngster to bed, he should be kept from contact with other children and household animals. The mattress should be firm, pillow low, room darkened and he should be given a light diet and plenty of water and other fluids.

The family physician should be called without delay as early treatment may lessen the severity of the attack and prevent or lessen paralysis. All cases do not have paralysis. The physician by removing some fluid from the spine is able to tell whether or not it is infantile paralysis.

It may be well at this time to restate the suggestions for prevention of infantile paralysis given a year ago. "Keep your child in your own yard. In crowded stores, street cars, motion picture theatres, where there is a large number of people, chances of possible infection are greatly increased."

Quadruplets Born, Three Surviving

Kankakee, Ill., Aug. 16—(AP) — Quadruplets, two boys and two girls, were born last night to a 23-year old Kankakee, Ill., mother.

One, a boy and the last of the babies born at approximately seven minute intervals, died two hours later, but Dr. J. R. Wilkinson said the three others and the mother, Mrs. Myrna Deschand, were doing nicely. Virgil, the father, is 25.

The babies were born prematurely in the seventh month. They each weighed between three and four pounds.

Wrapped in blankets as protection against the chill winds of early dawn, these women survivors sit disconsolately along the right-of-way after the crash of the City of San Francisco near Carlin, Nev. More than a score were killed and 100 injured as the streamliner, speeding west from Chicago, was derailed. A coroner's jury gave sabotage as the cause.

Wandering Minstrel Delights Crowds On Marmora Streets

Marmora, Aug. 16.—An hour's program by "Little Jimmy" the wandering minstrel on Forsythe street on Monday was heard by a large and appreciative audience. The young singer who plays his own guitar accompaniment, sings from a list of fifty cowboy songs and is talented to the extent that he can produce forty different yodels. At the age of eighteen he has been on the road for four years with his elder brother, Roy, who acts as the master of ceremonies. The boys are of Irish-Spanish descent possessing the surname Heeney and set out on their wanderings from Victoria, B.C. Their parents have been dead for a number of years.

Their father, a native of Ireland, met their mother on a tour of Spain where later they were married. Mrs. Heeney was a singer and guitar player. Though Jimmy was only six years of age when she died, he was able to sing several songs which she taught him and in the past four years he has appeared on the streets of many towns between the Atlantic and the Pacific, besides being heard over some of the smaller radio stations. With the Heeney brothers is Everett Macdonald, violin, piano and accordion player who has been their companion for the past two years. Roy Heeney said that the present itinerary of the two is being carried out in the hope of raising sufficient money to purchase a car to provide transportation for a proposed road show of which the two will be the nucleus. Sleep for Beauty!

PATRICIA ELLIS. . . . .whose bright eyes prove she knows the value of healthful sleep

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS SPEND time, money and toil in their quest for good looks. It is a worthy cause and we're for it. They overlook the greatest factor of all, which is restful sleep and plenty of it. Dragging yourself to bed is something you do when you can't go places. Late hours are responsible for dull eyes, lagging foot steps, jumpy nervous systems and pale complexions.

Fatigue Lessens Charm

One's elements of charm are weakened when one is fatigued. Fatigue produces toxins that are picked up by the blood stream and do damage to health and appearance. All right when you can have sufficient rest to make up for wear and tear.

Young women who run along in high nerve gear are particularly in need of long hours of slumber. Youth fancies it is made of wire and fiddle strings; that's a joke. Break the laws of health and something snaps some place. And the evidence shows on the countenance.

Have a comfortable bed with level mattress and small pillow. See that there is a current of air in the room. Covering should be sufficient for comfort. Get to bed before you are completely tuckered out. It is delightful to let one's mind go blank; fall into a dreamy state that comes between wakefulness and sleep.

When one is thoroughly rested, cheeks will be flushed in the morning, eyes bright the new day looks interesting.

Skin Blemishes

If a blemish appears upon your skin in the form of a tiny blister or a red blotch that is not familiar to you, don't meddle with it. It may be the beginning of a boil or carbuncle or some skin infection. The rule in such cases is "Keep your fingers away."

Applying some home remedy may make matters worse. Keep the skin clean with pure soap and water; do nothing else. Cold sores or fever blisters often swell to large proportions when touched with the fingers.

Boils come to a head more quickly if they are covered with gauze that has been dipped in hot water. To lance them before they are ready to break is a mistake; they fill again later and there is the same trial to be borne again.

Cupid, Marksman

JANNIS PARKER

Linda was in the tub thinking of Jerry when the phone rang. She'd been thinking of him ever since they'd met a week before at the last club dance of the season. And a bang-up dance it had been. The orchestra imported from Harlem had out-cavorted the dancers, their instruments taking a terrible beating. During what was supposed to have been intermissions an Italian with a piano-accordion that prohibited conversation, and a voice that dimmed the piano-accordion, had sauntered from table to table singing old love songs of Italy and new ones from Broadway.

Steve, good old Steve with the indelible frown, the rhythmic feet and the fog-horn voice, had asked Linda to the dance. He had also presented Jerry.

"Want to meet the nicest little job the stork ever turned out?" he'd boomed.

Jerry had. And Steve hadn't exaggerated. In short Linda was O.K., ace-high, top-notch, first-rate. And certainly men like Jerry would always have a market. He had everything the advertisements promised. Easily Jerry and Linda had been the best looking couple on the floor and he had stuck to her all during the evening like ink to a blotter.

Linda, however, whose existence enabled the telephone company to pay steady dividends, had not heard from him since that night. She found this disconcerting not because Jerry was her answer to prayer but because he'd started her praying.

Now, alone in the apartment she had to leave the suds hurriedly, swathe herself in a towel and make wet tracks for the shrill phone.

A man's voice boomed hoarsely over the wires and Linda's high hopes fell to the ground. For seven days she'd snatched up the phone—it might be the call she'd prayed for. It never had been.

"Linda?" he was repeating.

"You sound like King Kong" Linda replied doing her best to sound light-hearted and carefree. Why, oh why, couldn't this have been Jerry?

"Just a slight cold" he explained. "I'll soon be back to the silvery cadences. I'd have called you sooner but until today I couldn't speak at all. 'Feed a cold', however, you know. So how about having dinner with me?"

"That would be awfully nice." Try as she would Linda couldn't sound enthusiastic.

"Any chance for tonight?"

"Tomorrow night", she said.

"Would it be too much to ask you to meet me in town?" his voice rasped.

BABY FRETFUL?

FRETFULNESS is not natural. It is a sign of trouble. A warning alarm to which you must quickly respond.

Read how Mrs. George Mitchell responds: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets so helpful when my baby gets irritable and upset. I give him one or two tablets and in a short time he is relieved and sleeps so soundly."

And Mrs. Stewart McEachern says, "When my baby shows signs of fever or fretfulness I give her Baby's Own Tablets which change her to a good baby."

Baby's Own Tablets also bring quick relief from diarrhoea, colic, upset stomach, simple croup, colds, constipation, teething troubles, summer complaint and simple fever.

Quick, sure and safe in their action. Free from opiates and stupefying drugs. An analysts' certificate in every box. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

Linda lived tucked off in the suburbs far from jay-walkers and taxi races.

"Where and when?" she asked.

"Martini's. At seven. O.K.?"

"O.K."

Linda's mother came in as she hung up the phone.

"For me?" she asked.

"No. For me. Steve. I'm having dinner with him in town tomorrow night."

Linda's mother repeated what she'd been saying for some time. "You could do worse."

"Much worse," Linda admitted. "I could have two meals with him every day and three on Sunday. No thank you. Steve's a lamb, but."

"You don't appreciate him" he mother broke in. "He's a splendid young man."

"For somebody else."

The next evening Linda dressed lackadaisically. She didn't wear the new outfit. She was saving it just in case the Jerry man had a sudden fit of memory.

The train ride into the city was a monotonous trip that was only taking her to a monotonous evening. The cross-town cab was an unrestful auto that was taking her to a restless evening. Linda bleakly visualized the past seven days. Each day had grown drearier, heavier. Each day had taken her that much farther from Jerry. The possibility of more such days was ghastly—days when the sound of the phone buoyed her up only to cast her down.

"For two cents I'd scream" she mused. "I'd do it even cheaper."

At Martini's she paid off the taxi driver and walked in under the long striped awning. The sort of awning used at weddings, she reflected morosely. Why had she accepted this dinner invitation of Sheve's? Why had she forgone the comforts of home where she could cry into a pillow in peace instead of having to swallow hard lest tears splash into the hors d'oeuvres? She was berating herself when she walked right into his arms.

She blinked rapidly, shook her head to clear it but the apparition was not an apparation. There he was all six feet three of him. There flashed the smile that made her smile back. There stood the man she'd never really left since the moment she'd met him.

Radiant at seeing her again he spoke still hoarsely.

"How you recognized this battered voice over the phone is more than I'll ever know," grinned "Television would be wasted on you, Linda."

He indicated a charmingly, secluded little table marked, "Reserved."

"What do you say?" he asked.

Linda spoke cautiously, as though holding her breath. Her hand fluttered trembling at her throat.

"I'm like you were before you phoned me—speechless."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

She Was Told He Was Married

Dear Miss Fairfax

I've been going with a young man for the past three months, and had begun to think he was pretty nice until a few days ago when one of my friends told me he was married. I couldn't believe it, and when I asked him about it he confessed he was, but that it happened a long time ago.

Do you think I should stop going with him, because of this, or should I try to forget it? Since I found out about it, somehow or other I don't feel the same towards him, although I still like him.

Helena

The length of time a young man has been married doesn't make him eligible as a suitor. He may have been married years, and he would be just as much married as if the ceremony had just taken place, if he has not been divorced or made a widower in the meantime.

His lack of frankness in this matter doesn't put him in a very favorable light, and you are justified in asking him what his legal status is. If he's still another woman's husband—don't waste any more time on him.

Not Much Encouragement For Him

Dear Miss Fairfax

Family affairs and business have kept me from getting serious over any girl, but about a year ago I met a girl and fell in love with her. She was going with someone else, but broke up, and now she tells me she has no intention of marrying for a couple of years. I'm 32 and think it's time I married. I've told her of my love, but she doesn't pay much attention to it.

Her parents are very strict, and the only chance I have of seeing her is when she comes home from work. She is willing to have me walk home with her, but I believe she has someone else on her mind, but when I accuse her of this she always says "no".

Does it pay for me to keep on seeing her this way? She's 23 years old.

J.

Frankly, I don't think the young lady has given you very much hope. You write as if family and financial barriers to marriage have been removed. Why not look around you; find a girl who seems a little more encouraging. The world is full of nice girls who would like to marry and have homes. My best wishes are with you.

Seems to be Wasting Her Time

Daer Miss Fairfax

I've been going with a certain young man for nigh unto four years. He takes me driving in his car, and to shows, symphony concerts, and to dance at night clubs. But he has never said a word about Marriage.

When he first came to see me, I used to go out with other young men, but one by one they have fallen off, and this friend is now my only one. Therefore, the impression is that we are engaged—but alas, we're not.

I am 26 but look younger. My father and mother are up in arms because I keep on going with him alone, and my aunt out West wants me to come there for a long visit. Between them all I'm nearly crazy, because they think I should speak to my boy friend and find out his intentions. What do you advise?

Emmy Lou

I'm not surprised you feel upset. And I'm glad you have such a nice chance to visit out West, where you can forget about this man who has wasted four years of your precious youth. I wouldn't ask him his intentions either. If he knows you're going away and doesn't say anything—it's obvious he hasn't any intentions. In that case, I hope you will meet a lot of nice young men out West and eventually fall in love and marry one of them.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

To Dress Or No

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—When a young girl is invited to go dancing somewhere (not a special dance) how does she know if she should wear an evening dress?

2—If she does wear an evening dress, must she wear a hat and gloves?

3—What does she do if she doesn't drink?

T.

1—It's the proper thing, and now always taken for granted, for us to inquire about what type of dress we are expected to wear when we go to any kind of party. Don't have any hesitation about asking "What shall we wear?" If he says, "Let's dress. I'll wear my white dinner jacket", you'll know that you are expected to wear a summery dance dress and no hat. But if he says, "Let's not dress. I'll wear a business suit", you'll appropriately wear a street-length afternoon dress and hat.

2—If you wear an evening dress (probably an informal one during these warm months), you wouldn't wear a hat or gloves.

3—If you don't drink, don't drink. But don't let your refusal make you self-conscious, either about your own preference or other people's preferences. Take it as a matter of course. Don't be smug about it. No one need drink who doesn't want to, and people these days are thoroughly understanding about one's preferences. The people who are pretty much of a bore are the ones who say, with a self-consciously superior air, "I never drink", or "Thank you, I never use alcohol". This kind of answer isn't at all necessary. All your hostess wants to know is what you wish to have to drink . . . not what you don't want.

If you ask, the ice-box of practically any home will yield at least one favorite non-alcoholic drink . . . and there you are. You've been gracious, you've been direct, and you've been able to put everyone at ease, including yourself.

Broken Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

We were engaged to be married but we broke our engagement two weeks before we were to be married and a friend had given us a shower and we received quite a number of nice gifts.

Should I return the gifts, or should I keep them?

Will you please let me know how to go about returning them—if it is the correct thing to do?

Reader

I am sure, my dear girl, that you will feel relieved if you decide to follow the usual custom of returning all gifts that will remind you of this unhappy circumstance. Things that have unfortunate memories attached to them will only clutter up your spirit, and it's wise to get them right out of your consciousness. Your friends will understand, and will admire you for your sensible point of view and for your forthrightness.

I am sure that it will make it easier for you, and for your friends, if you do not return these gifts in person. Instead I suggest that you send them, with a little note of explanation.

You might like to write something like this:

Dear Betty,

I am sure that you will understand my returning your engagement gift to you, since the reason for your sweet and generous gift no longer exists. But please do know how appreciative I was of your goodness to me, how deeply I thank you for your kindness and friendliness.

Dearest love to you, Betty, and I hope we can see each other very soon.

Affectionately,

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Hernias Not Uncommon in Infants

Quite often babies are born into this world with a hernia—or rupture, to give it the more familiar name. Quite often, too, children develop hernias after they are born, due to weak muscles or unusual strain.

Being born with a hernia, or developing one, is a rather bad thing for baby, but for most part it isn't a thing to get terribly alarmed at. Only very rarely do children develop so serious a hernia that immediate operation is necessary.

When a child is ruptured, it merely means that there is a break in the abdominal wall through which the bowel has pushed itself. Now, this bowel must be replaced at once—that is, it must be pushed back through the aperture in the abdominal wall. Rarely all efforts to get it back fail. When this happens, an immediate operation is the only thing that will save the child's life. Sometimes these children recover when operated on, but even though the operation is hard on small babies, it is their only hope, for if the rupture is bad enough, without operation they would die.

As I said, though, this is a pretty unusual condition. In all my experience—and I've brought a good many babies into the world—I can only recall one or perhaps two infants who were ruptured so badly as to need immediate operation.

Ruptures around the umbilicus—or navel—are seldom serious. They are pouchings of the skin in these regions caused by the failure of the umbilicus to heal as it should. This pouching varies in size from that of a marble to an occasional one as big as a golf ball, rarely larger. In fact, it isn't often we see a rupture around the umbilicus that is larger than a marble.

A doctor can treat these cases by strapping. In fact, I have found very few babies that needed an operation as I said. I have succeeded pretty well with strapping. This is done by adhesive tape. A strip of tape, twelve inches long and two inches wide is attached to one end to the baby's back at the level of the umbilicus and just above the midline of the back. The adhesive is then swept around the side of the abdomen, over the front, extending around until it almost meets the other end at the back.

Before the adhesive is attached to the front of the abdomen, the protruding bump is pushed in with the forefinger and the skin on either side is pulled toward the centre. The adhesive holds the abdomen in this position, and keeps the rupture back in its place. The strapping shouldn't be left on longer than two weeks. It should be removed very carefully; soak it with ether to make it come off easily. If the bulge is still there, put on a fresh piece of adhesive. Often it is a good idea to change the adhesive every week until the bulge disappears.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE BELLE

"Daughters Courageous"

"Daughters Courageous" the Warner Bros. comedy of domestic life which is now playing at the Belle Theatre, could be termed a first cousin to the same studio's highly successful "Four Daughters" but it is not a sequel to that picture.

The similarity starts with the cast, for every important player in the former picture is also in the new one; then it had the same director and besides it was written by a writing team one of whose members was also co-author of the screen play which was last year's hit.

While the lot concerns different people than those in "Four Daughters" there is a basic similarity in that the new picture is also about the joys, the sorrows, the laughs, the tears in the lives of the genuinely "folksy" family.

There are the same four daughters in this family and again they are played by Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane and Gale Page. Their father again is Claude Rains and their suitors again are John Garfield, Jeffery Lynn, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran. May Robson again is a member of the household, this time, however, a faithful—and outspoken—old servant who has been with them for years.

And this time the girls have a mother, in the person of Fay Bainter—the mother in "Yes, My Darling Daughter"—a newcomer to the cast, and her suitor Donald Crisp.

The girls' errant father returns on the eve of the wedding and he soon has it within his power to upset the nice future which loomed for his little family until he suddenly appeared on the scene. The working out of this situation makes a sentimentally amusing tale with a moving denouement.

Clyde McCoy and his famed orchestra in a delightful musical revue will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Good Girls Go To Paris"

Next at the McCarthy Theatre comes the picture that is a World's Fair of fun, "Good Girls Go To Paris" starring Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell and with Walter Connolly, Joan Perry and a score of the top comedy favorites in Hollywood, "Good Girls Go To Paris" is a real swell show to follow the two smash hits now playing entitled "Prison Without Bars" which stars the lovely French eighteen-year-old Corinne Luchaire, a newcomer who is considered the greatest star find in ten years, supported by Barry Barnes, Edna Best and the screen's new "Dead End" girls, a four star Alexander Korda production which is one of the finest the screen has ever presented. Jane Withers in a comedy-riot entitled "Always In Trouble" is presented in addition to "Prison Without Bars" and if it were now possible to hold this two feature show over at the McCarthy it would be done, but as the next attraction "Good Girls Go To Paris" cannot be set back and "Captain Fury" starring Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen and June Lang is scheduled to open next week at the McCarthy Theatre, we can only urge you to see "Prison Without Bars" and Jane Withers in "Always In Trouble" at one of the performances now.

SUES MDIVANI

Mae Murray, above, former film star and dancer, has filed suit in Los Angeles, Cal., against her former husband, the polo-playing Prince David Mdivani, inset, for $12,000 a year for support of their 12-year-old son, Koran David Mdivani.

WOULD EXTEND

"By our command of naval bases and strategic points, and by the power which we have developed already for defence, and if necessary for offense, there is every justification for/the calm confidence with which we face any menace."

As for the far east Lord Lloyd cautioned that "we cannot regain our position and rebuild our prestige without weakening dangerously our power in Europe. We have still to wait for that perhaps two or three years and we have to put forth much greater national efforts before that position is retrieved."

Asked about the future of the voluntary principle in national service, Lord Lloyd pointed out that "they would not be content with that sort of thing in Germany."

Fill Up Defence Gaps

"We have accepted the principle of conscription," he pointed out, "and have made a still modest beginning in applying the principle to certain classes of young men. The logical conclusion is to extend the principle until it covers every possible gap in defence."

Turning to the merchant marine problem, Lord Lloyd said:

"Subsidies are expensive palliatives and they are not curatives. The only remedy is to recover our trade for our shipping. For instance, we buy from Russia a large proportion of our timber requirements. All that timber is shipping in Russian bottoms. We would say to the Russian government: 'If you want us to buy timber you must ship in British ships.'

"The German and other governments put a clause in their trade agreements to cover such points. This is the essence of Navy League's plan to restore merchant shipping."

SIDNEY LIBERALS ENJOY OUTING AT OAK LAKE

Event is Sponsored by Sidney Women Liberals—Chas. A. Cameron Describes Banquet Given to Premier King—Speeches Are Delivered and Race Program is Held

Stirling, Aug. 16.—Sponsored by the ladies of Sidney Township Women's Liberal Association headed by its president, Mrs. F. Denyes and executive committee, Mrs. G. Clapp, Mrs. C. Stickle, Mrs. T. A. Tucker, Mrs. M. Sine and Mrs. C. Ketcheson, the organization picnic held at Crescent Beach Park, Oak Lake, was a most enjoyable event for those able to attend.

Following a sumptuous meal served at the picnic tables, Mr. Morley Sine acting as chairman, introduced several prominent speakers including Chas. A. Cameron, Member of Parliament for the Constituency of South Hastings, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, B. O. Lott, Deuty Reeve Samuel Nicholson of Sidney and Councillor Ben Bleecker.

Chas. A. Cameron

At the outset of his address, Mr. Chas. Cameron introduced two veterans of Liberalism in this district in the persons of Rankin and Byron Lott. He then expressed his pleasure in being present and emphasized that the spirit of freedom and enjoyment exemplified is such social gathering was something of which all true Canadians should be proud. "Compare our lot with citizens of other nations where such gatherings are prohibited, our excellent highways, prosperous farm lands owned by the men who till the soil and beauteous pleasure resorts within easy access to all and we at once become enthusiastic supporters of the democracy that has given us these things."

Describes Anniversary Banquet

For the benefit of all present, Mr. Cameron then vividly described the banquet tendered Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, recently in Toronto. Numbered among the 3500 privileged guests at that important function were 35 Liberals from within the bounds of this riding. The banquet was a portrayal of confidence and esteem on the part of the gathering toward the guest of honor who twenty years ago had accepted the leadership of the Liberal party and since that time had given it such worthy leadership. Accepting the responsibility of party leadership was a tremendous task and reflections upon his services in that capacity revealed an astounding record. In four out of five elections held during that time the Liberal Party was returned to power under his able leadership and since the election of 1935 two seats had been added to the 179 returned at that time which denotes added strength. Stirring speeches were delivered that night by leading orators from all parts of the Dominion creating sincere Liberal enthusiasm which reached its climax when the Prime Minister himself rose to speak! Reared in an environment of true public service the Prime Minister had always placed his own personal feelings far in the background and worked intently for the welfare of all Canada and today he is recognized particularly in London and Washington as one of the world's leading statesmen At the close of his address Mr. Cameron led the gathering himself in three rousing cheers for the Prime Minister.

Byron O. Lott

Byron O. Lott, veteran of municipal life of Sidney Township and prominent Liberal, spoke briefly and recalled having cast his first ballot for the Liberal party in 1874. Since that time his interest had remained steadfast because it embodied all the righteous Parliamentary principles he endorsed. In 1896 Mr. Lott was Reeve of Sidney and since that time he has been vitally interested in all affairs of the municipality.

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater

Speaking with regard to the present representative of this constituency Col. Roscoe Vanderwater spoke of the excellent manner in which he had filled his position during the past four sessions of Parliament. His methodical action on all matters pertaining to the riding was a worthy characteristic and his willingness to serve was more than evident on every hand. Others speaking, offering sincere and worthy praise to the local representative included Deputy Reeve Samuel Nicholson of Sidney and Councillor Ben Bleecker. This part of the programme closed with three rousing cheers for Mr. Cameron and the gratitude of the gathering was expressed to the ladies of the executive committee for making such a pleasant event possible.

Sports Events

The remaining part of the afternoon was spent in various games including softball and horse-shoe pitching and bathing, and a complete schedule of competitive events created a great deal of interest with the following results:

Girls (under 10)—Winnifred Neno; Eloise Sine.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, August 17
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A MOST propitious time for launching new projects and for putting over objectives of major conseqeunce. Initiative and enterprise are under exceedingly high pressure for tackling the almost impossible in a spectacular manner. Yet there is need rigorously to keep in control such strenuosity, lest "vaulting ambition overleap itself to fall on the other side." Over-emphasis and indulgence may run into pitfalls or curious intrigues which may culminate in litigation, fraud, defeat and disillusionment. Be alert but calm.

Those whose birthday it is will find themselves in a year of exaggerated tempo, with things moving under very aggressive urges, particularly new propositions or major ambitions demanding audacious, original and even spectacular initiative and enterprise. uper-tension and high-powered application of force may precipitate toppling into pernicious schemes, intrigues or illicit entanglements climaxed in litigation and failure. Confer with superiors in crises.

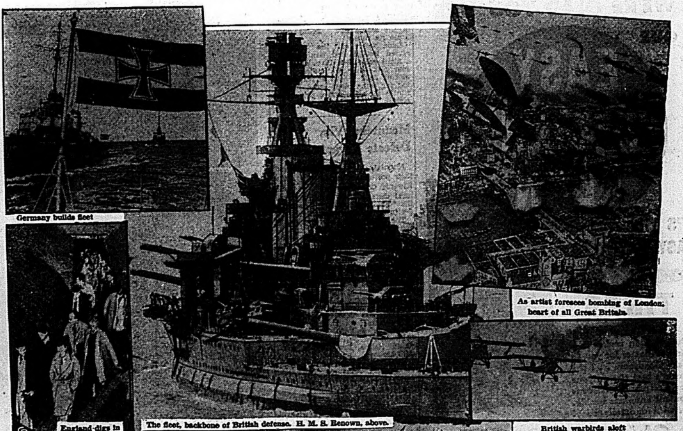
IF WAR COMES, BRITAIN TO DEPEND ON HER FLEET



Germany builds fleet

The fleet, backbone of British defense. H. M. S. Renown, above.

British warbirds aloft

Though rapidly building her air force to a status comparable to that of a potential continental foe, Great Britain counts on her huge sea fleet to win the final decision should war come again. For this purpose the British have brought their great sea power to a maximum state of readiness for any emergency. Opposed to the theory of widespread, prolonged warfare is the expresses German belief in a "blitzen krieg" —lightning war—a series of rapid, vast scale bombing attacks on great centres of population, stunning blows smashing the enemy into quick submission and bringing complete victory to the attacker. Prospect of a protracted conflict with Great Britain is not relished by the Nazis because while Berlin is as vulnerable to attack by British war hawks as London is to the thrusts of Germany's air force, Germany cannot possibly match Britain's sea power for years to come. Meanwhile, the British continue their nation-wide air raid precaution program.

DOUBLE PLAY SEES AIR FORCE DOWN BELLEVILLE 4-3

Lecompte's Leaping Catch Halts Belleville's Final Rally

PITCHERS' DUEL

Kelleher and Dole in Hurlers' Battle, Allow 6 Hits Each

Louie Lecompte's leaping catch of Chuck Barriage's lofty line drive for a double play halted Belleville's ninth inning rally as the Air Force snatched a 4 to 3 Bay of Quinte League verdict from the Belleville "Orfuns" at the Fair Grounds last evening. The game, one of the best played on the local ball lot this season, was strangely witnessed by the largest baseball crowd of the year, all of whom saw some sparkling ball in a sterling pitchers' duel.

Joe Kelleher, hurling for the homesters, tangled in a smart pitchers' duel with elongated Harry Dole of the Air Force each pitcher giving up but six hits, but Kelleher being the victim of a rather hard luck play in the fourth when shortstop Riggs and leftfielder Plummer collided while racing for a high fly with a result the ball was lost and two subsequent runs, sufficient to prove the margin between victory and defeat crossed the plate.

Sparkling Fielding

The game was interspersed with some fine fielding and three fast double plays, Belleville having two and the Air Force one, the latter halting Belleville's ninth inning rally. Kelleher struck out seven to Dole's three, while each pitcher gave up one base on balls. Collins, Belleville's second baseman, and Smith in left for the Air Force led the hitters with two hits in four official tries each.

Belleville opened the scoring in the third and forged to the fore with two runs, the result of hits by Plummer and Carson. The Flyers knotted the count in the fourth as the result of an error, Smith's single coupled with the play saw Riggs and Plummer collide when each were about to snag a high fly in short left. Lockyer's double and a fielder's choice gave the visitors one more in the sixth and hits by Ferrier and Leach added a fourth Flyer run in the eighth. Hits by Wilkins and Collins gave the locals a third run in the eighth, as they left Collins stranded on third ,with the tying run.

Rally is Nipped

In the ninth, however, Plummer arrived at second by virtue of a walk and a stolen base. Barriage then drove a hard high liner over second, that Lecompte leaped into the air and caught to complete a double play that was sensational and saved the Air Force issue.

The lineups:

Belleville: Barriage 3b; Wilkins cf; Carson 1b; Weeks rf; Collins 2b; Kelleher p; Riggs ss; Churchill c and Plummer lf.

R.C.A.F.: Lecompte 2b; Ferrier 3b; Lockyer ss; L'Heureaux c; Leach cf; Smith lf; Crawford rf; Oleskivis 1b and Dole p.

Score by innings:

		R	H	E
Air Force	000 201 010—4		6	2
Belleville	002 000 010—3		6	2

Pastor Trains in Ring That Once Saw Louis Wobbly

Detroit, Aug. 16 (CP)—By a strange coincidence the ring in which New York's Bob Pastor will train for the heavyweight fight with champion Joe Louis on Sept. 20 is the same ring that saw the Detroit negro's career almost stopped by a young Canadian five years ago.

Scotty Monteith purchased the ring at the Detroit Naval Armory when gathering supplies for the Brighton Mich. training camp without realizing the significance of the act. Within the same ropes Alex Borchuck of Windsor and Oshawa, Ont. staggered Louis with a third round punch in a 1934 bout that the champion says was the hardest blow he ever received.

Joe rallied to knock out Borchuk, now known as Al Delaney, in the fourth round. It was Louis' fifth professional fight and an upset then might have stopped permanently his climb to the heavyweight throne. Beset by contractual troubles, Delaney has done most of his recent fighting in Great Britain.

Pastor's training camp is 30 miles west of Detroit while the champion will tune up at Northville 22 miles nearer the scene of the Briggs stadium title bout.

Yankee 'Farmhands' Perform Chores in Winning Manner For Both Reds and Yankees

Neggeling, Former Yankee Recruit, Paced Reds to Win Over Pirates

KELLAR COMES THRO'

Cards Win in 10th to Keep Pace, but Red Sox Lose Ground

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

A couple of former New York Yankee farmhands performed their chores in superlative fashion and because they did both Cincinnati Reds and Yankees are enjoying seven game margins in their respective Major baseball leagues today.

The "farmhand" heroes of yesterday's seven-game program were Johnny Neggeling and Charlie Keller, both products of the vast Yankee system.

Niggeling, who has been with Kansas City and Newark of the Yank domain, paced the Reds to a 6-5 National League victory over Pittsburgh Pirates in his debut in a Cincy uniform. He scattered eight Pirate hits to keep the Reds steaming toward that world series melon.

Keller came through for the parent association with a rousing double that scored Red Rolfe with the winning run for a 3-2 American League decision over Washington Senators. That gave the Yanks their eighth victory in 15 tries with the Senators, which may or may not show that Clark Griffith's constant chirping "the Yanks are bums" has some effect on his hired hands.

Cardinals Win

One run margins were generally the rule in the National League. In addition to the Reds' win, St. Louis Cards slipped by Chicago Cubs, 7-6, in a 10-inning tussle that saw seven pitchers do duty. Bob Bowman was the most successful of the lot, getting credit for the win by singling home Terry Moore with the winning run.

Boston Bees dropped their 29th encounter of the season by one run to the Phillies. They just finished a road trip in which they lost 10 games by that margin and the 4-3 pummeling from the Phils hardly augurs well for an end to the streak. Walter Beck bested Lou Fette though Lou gave up only six hits.

The one National League game not decided by a one run margin went to the Dodgers by 8-5 win over New York Giants. Luke Hamlin was a little short of sensational, being touched—and none too gently—for 12 blows but the Dodgers won it the easy way, piling up all their runs in the first three innings and then coasting home.

Newsom Winner

In the American League Detroit Tiger's combination of Buck Newsom's hurling and Benny McCoy's hitting was too much for Cleveland Indians—by 12-3. Buck hurled three hit ball to get his 14th win of the season and Benny drove home six runs.

Lynn Nelson of the Athletics caused Boston Red Sox to drop a night game, 3-0. He allowed but four hits while his mates were nicking Jack Wilson and Joe Heving for seven blows—good for one run in the sixth and a pair in the eighth.

Mountain View Defeats Kiwanis 8-4

Mountain View softballers evened their post-season series with the Kiwanis Club "mushers" at the rural diamond last night, dunking the "city slickers" to the tune of 8-4 in an abbreviated pastime.

The Mountaineers scored three in the initial inning, added one in the second, tacked on three more in the third and pasted out a single in the fourth to end the scoring. The Clubmen got one in the first, were blanked for the next four chukkers and shoved one in the fifth and two in the sixth to end their part of the run-getting.

The final game of the series will be played on the B.O.I. campus diamond next Tuesday evening.

The teams:

Kiwanis: Baldwin, Cahoon, J. Follwell, Ted Follwell, W. Fitzgerald, Hanna, Browning, F. Follwell, Motley.

Mountain View: Barber, Black, Jones, May, Mumby, Thompson, Minaker L. Minaker.

Wrestling Last Night

ALL-STAR TEAM NAMED TO PLAY VERSUS 'OILERS'

Benefit Game Slated for Friday Night; Three Pitchers Are Named

Frank Sedore and his Shell-Aajmaa "Oilers" now realize there is more truth than poetry in that old proverb of "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." Only last week the "Oilers" won top honors in Belleville O.A.S.A. softball wars and no sooner had they been declared champions of all they viewed than sinister plans were under way to give the new titleholders what is generally known as "the business". The only authentic manner in which this could be put into practice was to isolate the champion "Oilers" and challenge them to play an All-Star team composed of the best talent selected from the remainder of the league, in the proposed benefit game for Umpire Josh Maracle, who sustained a fractured ankle some time ago.

Skipper Sedore and his charges immediately accepted the challenge and feel with Johnnie Bawden their ace hurler, having the advantage of a week's rest, the matter of beating this "All-Star" aggregation is simply as easy as "breaking sticks." Final arrangements for this benefit game between the "Oilers" and the All-Stars were completed and the great game is scheduled to be played at Coleman Flats on Friday night.

Players Selected

The "Oilers" will be at full strength while the "All-Star" team will be composed of such players as Steve Hook, Jim Hunter and Connie Harris pitchers Murney Green and C. Tuttle, catchers; Bud Gaulin, Art Cole, Teddie Henn, H. Reid, F. Whitehead, Cy Barriage, G. Ethier, P. Loft, infielders and Art Genereaux, Ross Clare, G. Bennett Jim Barriage and Joe Semain from whom the outfield will be selected. Every club composing the league, Corbys A.C., Point Anne, Dracup Tire and Citizens' Dairy juniors.

The entire proceeds are to be given to Umpire Maracle who has been convalescing ever since his unfortunate accident, when he sustained a fractured ankle while officiating in a league game.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Luke Hamlin, Dodgers: Gained his 14th victory of the season though touched for 12 hits by the Giants.

Walter Beck, Phillies: His eight hit pitching job nosed out the Bees 4-3.

Johnny Niggeling, Reds: His eight hit job gave his his first victory as a Red hurler, downing Pirates.

Enos Slaughter, Cards: Three hits including a homer, and two runs batted in helped Cards shade Cubs.

Lefty Gomez, Yankees: Pitched a three hit game to beat Washington 3-2 in ten ninings.

Buck Newsom, Tigers: Limited the Indians to three hits gave him his 14th win of season.

Lynn Nelson, Athletics: Shut out the Red Sox with a four hit performance in a night tussle.

'Canadian Golfers Lack Tournament Experience'—Horne

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 16—Poll the Canadians in the National Open golf championship and they'll say, almost to a man, that slight Stan Horne of Montreal has the best chance of any for the first Canadian victory in 25 years. Ask Horne about it and he will say without any boastfulness:

"I'm playing well enough to win."

With the quiet confidence of a man knowing his own capabilities, the 26-year-old Horne will start shooting in the open tomorrow convinced that if nothing out of the way happens he may pocket the Seagram Gold Cup and $1,600 on Saturday evening. He's had two seasons on the winter tournament circuit, getting the tournament experience he considers essential.

"That is what the Canadian pros, in my opinion, lack more than anything else," Horne said. "There are lots of them like Dick Borthwick, Bobby Gray and Lex Robson of Toronto with all the shots. But because they haven't had the necessary toughening in tournament play the shots are not enough."

Stan has been getting this experience by spending the last two winters in the southern United States, competing against the continent's best. He played in 10 tournaments last winter, topping his performances by finishing 11th in an all-star field in the Pinehurst North-South.

BEARS HITTING STRIDE, HEADING FOR PLAY-OFFS

Newark Chalks Up 5th Consecutive Win at Expense of Royals

LEAFS SPLIT

Lazzeri and Elliot Given "The Gate" at Baltimore

Don't look now, but that team sprinting in the direction of the International League's first division is none other than Newark Bears.

At the rate they're travelling the champs have a fair chance of finishing in the money again.

The present Newark Club is a far cry from the powerhouse which finished 18 games ahead in 1938 and 25 in front two years ago. They have been staggering along in fifth place since July 5. However, they suddenly have come to life and in the last 22 games have won 16 to climb to within two games of fourth place.

Errors Costly

The Bruins continued their drive last night by knocking over Montreal Royals 6-4 to make it five straight victories.

Two errors by shortstop Leo Norris, former Newarker, helped the Bears push across five unearned runs. Joe Mack helped along the winning cause with his eighth homer of the year.

The Bears climbed a game and a half closer to fourth when the Rochester Red Wings handed Syracuse a double setback 8-2 and 2-0. Johnny Grodzicki hurled the opener and was assisted by homers from the bats of Harry Davis George Kurowski and Estel Crabtree. Mike Ryba and Johnny Gee lanky Syracuse ace engaged in a tight duel in the second game.

Teams Split

Buffalo Bisons and the league leading Jersey City Giants split a twin-bill but Jersey Manager Bert Neihoff protested the 6-2 decision against the Little Giants in the first game. While the Bisons were leading 2-0, the lights were turned on when Ollie Carnegie was at bat. He slammed out a homer with the bags loaded. Neihoff claimed the lights were turned on without orders from the umpires. The Jerseys came back to swamp the Bisons 8-2.

The Baltimore Orioles and Toronto Leafs also split. Baltimore won the first game, 1-0, behind Roy Baruner's four-hit pitching, and dropped the second 6-2. Toronto Manager Tony Lazzeri and outfielder Bob Elliott were given the old heave-ho during the second stanza.

SPELL IS BROKEN

Montreal, Aug. 16 (CP)—Cornwall's spell over Canadiens in the senior group lacrosse race was broken last night when the Montreal outfit defeated the Ontario team 15-8. The defeat was the second handed the league-leading Cornwall team this season and put Canadiens back on even terms with St. Regis Indins for second place.

Four successive goals in the first 11 minutes gave the Montrealers a lead they never lost. They increased their margin as the game progressed.

PECK'S BAD BOY OF BASEBALL IS ON BLACKLIST

"Boots" Poffenberger Back Carrying Hod After Jumping Royals

PLAYS SANDLOT

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 16 (CP)—Peck's bad boy of baseball hunched his brickyard laborer's shoulders and took his licking standing up today when they sent him out of organized baseball for keeps.

Elwood Cletus (Boots' Poffenberger, the crossroads husky who went out with hay in his hair to stand big league batters on their ears—when and if he felt like it—opined he was still young enough to get a job in the brickyard or the tannery and play a little sandlot baseball or go fishing.

Boots, who admitted he jumped the Brooklyn club and didn't report to Montreal when they sold him, still feels his side of the story never had an airing. He said he hoped he'd get back in baseball sometime—but admitted the blacklist hung on him by Commissioner K. M. Landis would probably keep him out for good.

Poffenberger, 25 years old said he'd asked for a transfer to the Montreal club all through the season before he jumped the club in Cincinnati. He jumped, he said, because his arm wasn't right and he felt he needed to work the kinks out against hitters in the lower league.

When they sent him to Montreal, he took his transportation and headed for Canada he said only to be recalled by a telegram in New York saying his wife was seriously ill at their home here.

He didn't show up to play with the Royals. Moguls of baseball put it down as another Poffenberger escapade and the threats they made got the Boot's dutch up. So he went fishing, and heaved a few to the boys on the vacant lot, and when his wife recovered, he was already marked for the skids. Confirmation came yesterday with formal notice of the blacklist issued by Landis at the request of the Brooklyn club.

Boots wrote to Landis today. He didn't beg for reinstatement. He only asked if it would be all right for him to play sandlot baseball here.

GENOVESE WINS

Minneapolis, Aug. 16 (CP)—Frankie Genovese of Toronto, jabbed his way to an easy decision over Cleo McNeal of Akron, O., in the 10-round windup of an outdoor boxing show here last night.

During the early rounds he concentrated on the negro's face then finished up with a shower of blows to the midsection and jaw. Genovese weighed 148 1-2, McNeal 143 1-2.

Canadian Open Golf Championship
GOLD CUP

Tomorrow another Canadian open golf championship gets under way, and this year's scene of battle for the first time, is the Maritimes—the Riverside course at St. John, N.B. It's been 25 years since a Canadian last captured the national championship, and the native sons are faced with a tough task again this year as the leading American pros go after the $1,000 first prize money and the minor awards. Shown here are Sam Snead last year's champion, the Seagram cup, awarded annually to the winner, and views of two of the tests to be faced by contestants. TOP view is of the 15th hole. It is a 350-yarder, steeply downhill, with a green the exact shape of a horseshoe. For the other hole shown, the 387-yard 17th, you tee off in spruce woods and after negotiating a dog leg, reach a well-guarded, sidehill green. The clubhouse can be seen in the LOWER picture and the pretty Kennebecasis river in both.

Lou Ambers, contender for the lightweight title, from Herkimer, N.Y., squares off with Jack Skelly, RIGHT, of Peekskill, N.Y., who was a popular featherweight fighter in 1892. Annually the Air Force at Trenton hold a field and track meet, terminated with a programme of stunt flying and air manoeuvres to which the general public is cordially invited. Wing Commander C. M. McEwen, commanding R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, today informed us this annual presentation would be featured on the Aerodrome Friday, August 18th, comencing in the morning, with the flying features being presented at the conclusion of the field day events. Squadron Ldrs. Riddell and Van Vliet will head the flying programme which will consist of formation flying, individual aerobatics terminated with a parachute jump. The public are advsied there is no charge in connection with the entire day's programme, while Wing Comander McEwen stressed the fact that a ground display of all types of aircraft, in use at the Trenton Air Station, will be on display in a specially designated portion of the Aerodrome, where the general public may obtain a closer view of these modern man-made birdmachines.

Baseball fans who took in last night's Flyer-Orfun game were well rewarded for their attendance as the teams dished up the best class of ball presented in the local ball yard this year even if the Flyers eked out a 4 to 3 win. Joe Kelleher and Harry Dole, pitching for the locals and Flyers respectively, hurled fine ball, each restricting the opposing hitters to six safeties. As is usually the case in such closely contested ball games, the breaks of the game decided the issue. In the fourth shortstop Riggs and leftfielder Plummer, of Belleville, crashed into each other while attempting to field a short leftfield fly. The ultimate result saw two Air Force runs counted. Then in the ninth with the tying run on second, Louie Lecompte, of Flyer hockey fame, leaped high into the air to stab Chuck Barriage's stinging line drive and double Plummer off second. Belleville kicked in with two splendid double plays and all in al it was a spendid ball game, played in jig time.

Yesterday's announcement that the Belleville "Orfuns" and the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" had been classed as "B" clubs in the O.B.A. naturally leaves the inference that Picton and Napanee will continue in the intermediate "A" baseball classification. Cobourg was named by the parent association as a class "B" intermediate team and as they've already been eliminated in the Lake Shore group, it naturally follows that Belleville and the Air Force will have to commence a best two-in-three play-off almost immediately, the winner to meet Cobourg. The relegation of the "Orfuns" and Airmen came rather as a complete, but we imagine a most aceptable, surprise. With play-offs in both intermediate "A" and "B" on his hands President Lorne McDougall will be a busy man for the next fortnight.

Poland's national athletic committee has asked American sports authorities for complete information on the sports situation in the United States, with the idea of copying its athletic system. The Poles were especially interested in baseball and the American form of football. Russia also has asked for information on baseball and may try to promote the game.

Do you remember when Johnny Vander Meer passed 10 men and gave but five hits as Syracuse defeated the Maple Leafs at Toronto 3-1 two years ago today. The left-hander went up to Cincinnati last year and startled the baseball world with two consecutive ni-run, no-hit games—a record unequaleld in the history of the game.

Elsewhere in today's issue is the list of softball All-Stars, who were selected by Secretary Harry Knott and his colleagues to meet the Shell "Oilers" in that much-talked of benefit game for Umpire Maracle. Carefully the roster of Corbys A.C., Point Anne, Dracups and the Citizens juniors were gone over with precision with the result three pitchers were selected only. Purposely the Cementmen's hurlers were left off the list because the Point Anne squad is at present engaged in O.A.S.A. playdowns. Otherwise the best possible material at hand was selected and we are satisfied that Johnnie Bawden and company are going to have just about the toughest assignment they ever encountered. Remember also, it's a charity show when the coffee pot comes your way.

The Cincinnati Reds kept their lead of 7 1-2 games in the National League by beating the Pirates yesterday, just as the Cardinals were taking a 7-6 hairline decision from the Cubs at the expense of "Ole Diz" Dean, who ankled from the bull pen in the tenth inning to be chalked up with the Cubs' loss. Chicago had previously scored in the eighth and ninth to knot the count but it wasn't just "The Great One's" day. Those Washington Senators can always make it close and interesting for the Yankees. Yesterday the Nationals chased the Yankees over the wire to a 3-2 decision in favor of the champs, but not before the losers had proven exceedingly stubborn. The Red Sox dropped a full game, leaving the Yanks 7 games in front as the Boston nine was blanked by the Athletics 3-0 to make the going tougher.

Sport Spice — Les Tice, former Belleville senior goalie now residing in New Ontario, is vacationing here and took in last night's ball game....Les looks hall and hearty and says the Belleville contingent are all A1 up where 'men are men, etc.'....They do suggest that Rogers Hornsby, the greatest batter of modern times is on his way out as skipper of the Baltimore Orioles....Paul Dean was released outright by the Cardinals to the Columbus Red Birds yesterday, which means 'fare-thee-well, Paul', no doubt....Begins to look as though Peterboro will have to be satisfied with intermediate rugby football this fall judging from the exodus of their star gridders of late.

POLISH SOLDIER

Army trucks and field cars are seen in greater number than in previous weeks. Planes whose markings cannot be made out are flying over with increasing frequency.

The new pontoon bridge over the Vistula to provide better communication from German East Prussia will be opened to traffic Saturday.

Young Officers Seen

Hotels are crowded, and a greater sprinkling of young officers is to be seen on the streets and in the cafes.

Danzig police said the soldier wore a Polish army uniform but carried no identification papers. Four shots were fired, police said, one of them by the Pole, who was shot in the back.

The new incident came as the League of Nations High Commissioner, Professor Carl Burckhardt, was attempting to quiet the troubled Danzig situation by bringing the Polish Commissioner General, Marian Chocacki, and Arthur Greiser, Danzig's Senate President, together in a conference.

The soldier was the second Pole to be killed in recent border incidents. A Danzig citizen also was slain in a border shooting.

Polish and Danzig versions of the shooting differed.

The Polish version was that the Polish soldier, Aleksander Rozanovske, was only 16 yards from the border after having lost his way in the darkness.

When Danzig police claimed that Rozanovske had fired at least one shot, the official Polish version was that the Polish soldier had not fired at all.

2 LAWS TO CUT TOLL ON HIGHWAYS

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 16 (CP)—Two important traffic laws go into effect Sept. 29 in an effort to cut Michigan's accident toll, Road Commissioner Oscar Olander announced today. Crossing the centre line of a four-lane highway will become a misdemeanor, punishable by a jail sentence, pedestrians failing to walk facing traffic on highways will be subject to similar punishment.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 16 (CP) — Detective Keith Bean's theory that every driver breaks traffic rules sometime was borne out today. Bean wanted to search a car driven by Gilbert Delgado, 33, but had no warrant. He followed the automobile until Delgado allegedly drove through a red signal and then arrested him and searched the vehicle.

Delgado was lodged in jail on gambling charges on the basis of evidence of policy ticket sales uncovered by Bean.

FOOD SHORTAGE MAY DEVELOF INTO RIOTING

Famine Becomes Apparent in Large Parts of Occupied China

FLOODS, DROUGHT

By MORRIS HARRIS
Canadian Press Foreign Staff

Shanghai, Aug. 15—(AP)—A food shortage threatening to develop into hunger riots and famine became apparent in large parts of Japanese-occupied China today—a by-product of more than two years of war.

Floods, drought, crippled transportation facilities and Japanese trade and military restrictions caused the shortage, which was evident here and in Shantung, Hopeh, Honan and Anhwei Provinces.

In drought areas Chinese Christians prayed for rain. Other Chinese carried idols into the parched fields so that they might see with bronze eyes the woe that had befallen the peasants.

Shortage of Rice is Concern

International settlement authorities in Shanghai viewed with concern an impending rice shortage.

Rice stocks are dwindling fast. Prices are skyrocketing. Officials have been unable to keep more than a few weeks ahead of the needs of the 4,000,000 Chinese in this tiny neutral island who are dependent on them for the staple.

Efforts of settlement authorities to obtain rice from surrounding Japanese-occupied territory have met with little success, the invaders saying it is "very difficult" to transport grain from Wuhu and other Yangtse valley concentration points.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and harvey came over after supper to play bridge with pop and ma, and they were talking about different subjects such as politics, Gladdis saying. It all seems to be a question of taxes and where the money is coming from. Well instead of taxing necessities like theatre tickits and things of that nature, why dont they put a great big tax on alcohol in all its forms and end the problem once and for all? she said.

Yes, and on tobacco, ma said. All that money that constantly goes up in smoke might as well be going up into taxes at the same time, and the goverment wouldn't have anything more to worry about. It's simple enough, so why do they insist on making it complicated? I'll tell you why, now that you ask me, because they're just a conglomeration of so called practical men, that's why, she said.

I can think of more useful taxes than that pop said. How about clapping a rousing good tax on every household that doesn't eat liver and onions at least once a week? Think how it would pep up the languishing liver industry, he said.

Liver and onions being his favorite thing, and Harvey said, A tax on all kinds of boiled fish would be good. They tell me I miss a lot by refusing to eat boiled fish, so if they only made the price prohibitive you proberly couldn't keep me away from it, because that's a way I am, he said, and Gladdis said, Harvey you practically never get boiled fish, so dont complain that you do, even by innuendo, and pop said, If they realyy want to bring in a flock of money why dont they charge triple rates every time a woman telephones to her husband's office and tells him she hopes he wasn't busy?

This conversation is getting childish, I thought we were suppose to play bridge, ma said.

Wich they started to.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—Stocks trudged backward trail today and losses of fractions to as much as 3 points were posted for leaders. The retreat began at the quiet opening and was emphasized as the session wore on. Toward the fourth hour most shares were at about their lows.

Stocks nipped by the small selling wave included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union, Anaconda, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, Du Pont, Johns-Manville, U.S. Gypsum, Santa Fe, Great Northern Texas Corp., Celanese and Loft.

McIntyre Porcupine slumped nearly 2 points in the Canadian group while smaller losses were scored for C.P.R., Hiram Walker, Distillers and Lake Shore. Traders shied away from Dominion 4s in the Bond Market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 16.—(CP)—Toronto Exchange turned weak today. Prices were down from Tuesday's closes. Volume picked up shortly after noon sales totalling 196,000.

Higher-priced golds held well against the trend but juniors sold off. Dome, Hollinger, Lake Shore and Wright-Hargreaves showed little change. Pamour was off about 8. Coniaurum lost about 9. East Malartic and MacLeod-Cockshutt dropped 7 each.

Buffalo-Ankerite was off 15. Prices were down for Preston, Chesterville, Central Patricia and Francoeur.

Senior Oils showed little change. Western Oils were down. Royalite and Texas Canadian held Tuesday's level.

Consolidated Smelters was down around a point. Also off were Noranda, International Nickel and Sudbury Basin. Steels and Food shares were easier.

Trading Dull on Produce Market

Toronto, Aug. 16—In trading barely sufficient to establish a price, butter lost a fraction yesterday on an otherwise featureless Toronto open produce market. According to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, trading in butter was at a virtual standstill, with only the odd sale being reported. Eggs and cheese were steady.

During the morning, holders of first-grade creamery solids asked 21 3-4 cents pound, but no business was transacted at this level and the price eased to 21 1-2 cents in the afternoon. Even at the reduced figure, the market was quiet and draggy. Ontario receipts were light. Western butter was reportedly sold at 21 3-4 cents per pound outside Toronto, but no sales were made in the city.

Firmer egg prices at Montreal gave the Toronto market a little stronger undertone yesterday as buying increased. Prices were unchanged. Receipts were not heavy but were apparently adequate for the demand. A-medium and Grade B eggs enjoyed the best inquiry. The firmer feeling was noted particularly in the graded section.

Montreal Potatoes Ease

Montreal, Aug. 16—(CP)—Potatoes again yielded about five cents on open produce markets here yesterday while eggs continued steady with receipts in sufficient volume for demand. Cheese dipped a trifle in exceptionally quiet trading and butter held mainly firm.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2c to 22 3-4c a pound and solids for 22c to 22 1-4c Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21 3-8c to 21 1-2c. Receipts: One box.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11c. Quebec white and colored were both quoted at 10 3-8c. Receipts: 3,251 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27 cents a dozen for A-large, 25c for A-medium, 20c to 21c for A-pullets, 19c to 20c for B-large, 14 1-2c to 15c for C. Receipts, 732 cases.

MAKES SUCCESS IN FARM VENTURE

Thomas Andros Spends 16 or 17 Hours Daily in the Fields

Toronto, Aug. 16—(CP)—Thomas Andros' determination to keep off the relief rolls took him to the Don Valley in Eastern Toronto three years ago and today the 32-year old bachelor said he was making a success of his farming venture.

Andros wields a huge, imported hoe and has eight of his 12-acres under cultivation. Unaided he expects to harvest at least 40,000 pounds of late tomatoes, along with other crops of cabbage, corn, melons, vegetable marrow, pumpkins and carrots.

Andros lives alone in a one-room cabin and does his own washing and cooking. He spends 16 or 17 hours daily in his fields and feels his hardest battle this summer was with twitch grass and green tomato worms. The worms threatened to wipe out his entire crop.

"Poison didn't seem to help, so I had to collect them daily, dump them in a pail of gasoline and cremate them," he said.

Old Kentucky CIGARETTES

Returning to England after eight years in Canada during which time he said he had come to speak of "we Canadians," Major E. D. Mackenzie, Comptroller of the Household of the Governor-General of Canada, sailed from Quebec on board the Empress of Britain. Seen here in his suite aboard the Empress, Major Mackenzie told reporters he would take up new duties as manager of the estates of Lord Derby. In the post he has just vacated Major Mackenzie served under the Earl of Bessborough and Lord Tweedsmuir.

'SOMETHING IN AIR'

Il Messagero said "wisdom and prudence advise Poland to negotiate with Germany." It added that Great Britain and France "have the duty to suggest moderation to Poland and expressly invite it to negotiate with Germany."

The same advice was given by Il Piccolo with the statement that if London and Paris failed to use their influence in this direction they would show their intentions to "provoke a new world war."

The newspaper said that if Poland negotiated a settlement with Germany, Chancellor Hitler would "not only respect but largely satisfy the economic needs of Poland."

This, they said, should dispel Poland's fear of economic strangulation by Germany through loss of the Danzig port.

Annexation Hitler's Plan

Paris, Aug. 16—(CP)—Hitler's final price for a settlement with Poland still is German annexation of Danzig and a German route through the Polish Corridor to East Prussia, sources close to the French foreign office said today.

In return, they said, Hitler offers to recognize all Polish economic rights in Danzig, to grant Poland a free port there, to pledge permanent respect for the Polish-German boundaries and to conclude a 25-year non-aggression treaty with the Warsaw government.

This was the proposal, they said, that Hitler made to Professor Burckhardt.

Hitler's present proposals, it was pointed out here, are a reiteration of those he made in a speech before the German Reichstag last April 28 when replying to President Roosevelt's peace appeal. Poland rejected them, offering instead to negotiate abandonment of the league regime over the Free City and to discuss granting the Reich wider transportation facilities across the corridor.

One Encouraging Feature

The only encouraging feature of Hitler's observations to Dr. Burckhardt, French foreign office quarters said, was that the Fuehrer agreed to instruct his Nazi lieutenants at Danzig—Albert Forster the party leader there, and Dr. Arthur Greiser, President of the Free City Senate—to pursue their talks with the Polish High Commissioner, Marian Chodacki, toward settlement of purely local disputes.

The Fuehrer criticized Poland for the sharp tone it adopted in a note addressed to the Danzig Senate on Aug. 5, Dr. Burckhardt is reported to have revealed.

MUNICIPAL BAND ATTRACTS CROWD TO CITY'S PARK

Largest Throng of Current Season Pays Appreciative Tribute to Musicians

'FLYERS' BAND NEXT

A cooling breeze that swept in from the Bay of Quinte, a star-studded sky, that was crossed intermittently by the gleaming lights of night-flying airplanes, provided a perfect setting in Victoria Park last night where the largest crowd of the current season was in attendance to enjoy the splendid musical program provided by the Belleville Municipal Band in the third of their series of summer concerts.

Further exemplification of the appreciation of music-loving residents of the city and districts of the artistic ability of the fine band of musicians under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson, was seen in the large crowd that thronged the green carpets of grass in front of the bandstand. Seats and benches were filled while cars that crowded every available space near the stand, honked a noisy acclaim at the end of each number.

Fine Program

While the program was one of those variable kind that appeals to the ear of the average music-lover. Lieut. Jobson and his arrangers showed excellent taste in their selection of the various numbers, by inserting a group of popular numbers. Featured among these, and in fact one of the outstanding attractions of the program was the popular "Beer - Barrel Polka." Young and old accorded vociferous and other kinds of applause at the conclusion of the first rendition, with the band generously playing an encore.

Ex-Bandmaster Hinchey's arrangement of "Liebestraume" also met with well-merited acclaim. Mr. Hinchey wielded the baton during the playing of these two selections. Stirring marches, the well-known music of "The Byng Boys Are Here" famous wartime revue that featured George Robey and Violet Lorraine in "If You Were the Only Girl in the World"; the soft cadences of classical music added to the general musical enjoyment.

R.C.A.F. Band Next

Announcement was made at the bandstand during the performance to the effect that the band of the Royal Air Force, Trenton base, would through the kind permission of Wing Commander McEwen, offer a concert in the park next Tuesday night.

The band, some sixty strong, will be under the baton of Flight-Sergeant Tommy Cooper, and a fine program has been arranged by this capable conductor.

Police Blotter

A battery, that was stolen from the Trudeau Motor Sales lot yesterday, was recovered by city police later in the day. The recovery was materially assisted by a group of local teen aged boys, who have organized a sort of a junior police department in Belleville.

G. H. Chalmers, Trent Road, reported the theft of a chrome plated fog light from the front of his motorcar. Mr. Chalmers was unable to inform police just when the light might have been taken.

When the front tire of his motor car blew out as he was making a lefthand turn onto the upper bridge yesterday, a motor car driven by J. E. Mahon, 74 Purdy Street, crashed into the cement abutment of the bridge. The front fender, wheel and tire of the vehicle were all badly damaged during the impact. P.C. Taylor reported the matter as purely accidental. No one was injured.

City police have been instructed to rigidly enforce all traffic laws and city ordinances in the future in an effort to keep motor accidents at a minimum.

No arrests have been necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours.

1 KILLED, 20 INJURED AT PREMATURE LAUNCHING

New Partition Of Poland Urged By Nazi Press

Anti-Polish Campaign Reaches New Height with Predictions of 'Frightful Terror' to be Expected by Germans in Poland

REICH 'CUT IN TWO'

Frontier Incident Reported on Vistula River 20 Miles from Danzig

Berlin, Aug. 17—(CP-Havas) — As the anti-Polish campaign reached a new height Nazi newspapers charged today that "terror" has started in Poland and "frightful terror" is to be expected.

A new partition of Poland to eliminate the "Polish Corridor" emerged as a principal German aim, as reflected in the controlled press.

"Terror on Upper Silesia," said a headline in the 12-Uhr Blatt. "Alarming reports from Kattowice; 1,000 Germans arrested, including Senator Wiesner."

(In Warsaw officials said a Nazi espionage plot was responsible for the arrest of 71 persons, including Senator Rudolf Wiesner, head of the Polish Jungdeutsche party and leading representative of the German minority in Poland.)

'Frightful Terror' Expected

The Berliner Zeitung Am Mittag said that "Polish Insurgent" Associations had been armed by Polish authorities, and that "frightful terror against disarmed Germans" was to be expected.

Reporting an alleged incident at the frontier bridge of Dirschau, a town on the Vistula River20 miles southeast of Danzig, the same newspaper said in large-type headlines:

"Germans from the Reich and British reporter are fired upon; Polish banditry as the Dirschau bridge-head."

It added that the Danzig Senate will protest "against these flagrant frontier violations by the Poles."

In addition to outright return of Danzig to the Reich, the German press went a step further than Chancellor Hitler's previous demands for an extra territorial corridor through Poland to East Prussia. Newspapers came out flatly for an end to the situation in which the Reich is divided by Polish territory.

Reich 'Cut in Two'

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, demanding abolition of the Polish Corridor, said: "It is incompatible with the honor of our Reich that it must remain cut in two parts whose link is threatened by a country which has placed itself in the enemy camp."

Lokal-Anzeiger said: "A corridor across German territory is not a problem but a piece of nonsense which must be abolished....shall Germans in these territories of the Reich any longer be delivered up to Polish hatred and terror? No! Reason and the facts commend a solution which is fitting, reasonable and vital—and that can be only a German solution."

Berlin, Aug. 17—(AP)—Guarded hints were thrown out today that Germany has left the door open to Poland for direct negotiations over Danzig, but that a bigger issue than mere unconditional return of the Free City to Germany is at stake.

The press indicated that Germany would prefer direct dealings with Poland and denied reports that any settlement involving other powers was in prospect.

Circles close to the government said they considered the time ripe for the settlement of issues involving the fate of more than 1,000,000 nationals living in the Polish regions bordering on Germany.

Increase of Demands Seen

These well informed sources said the viewpoint is rapidly gaining ground that Danzig is not enough and that Germany should increase its demands. Danzig was described as no bargaining point at all.

Semi-official and controlled press comment was to the effect that it was nobody's business but Germany's and Poland's to solve the problem of Danzig and Pomorze—the strip of land known as the Polish Corridor which separates German East Prussia from Germany proper.

A conference with anyone over Danzig, government spokesmen said plainly, could be only to discuss the method of handing over the Free City unconditionally to Germany.

Hitler's Demands Grow

Circles close to the foreign office and newspaper articles conveyed the growing impression that Chancellor Hitler's previous proposal to Poland for a combined highway and railway track across the Corridor no longer would meet Germany's requirements.

The official German news agency, in a dispatch from Katowice, Poland, reported Polish police had arrested Rudolf Wisner, the German minority leader in Poland.

The agency said the Poles made approximately 1,000 arrests during the past days, including all officials of the German minority organization.

HANDS CRUSHED IN MACHINE

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 17—(CP)—Robert Hunt, 24, Brantford, suffered severe injuries today while at work on one of the roofing machines in the plant of the Brantford Roofing Company Limited, Sydenham Street.

Hunt had both hands caught in a pair of pull-rolls. Fellow-workmen released him and first aid was administered. Dr. D. A. Morrison was called and firemen were called with the ambulance to convey Hunt to hospital.

Both his hands were crushed.

CAMPBELL'S BOAT HITS 110-114 M.P.H.

Coniston, England, Aug. 17—(CP)—Malcolm Campbell's speedboat Bluebird II hit "between 110 and 114" miles an hour in its first trial.

"She handled beautifully and she is planing wonderfully. I have little doubt we will do 150 or better when the racing engine is put in," said Sir Malcolm.

He used his testing engine with "soft" spark-plugs to guage the manoeuvrability of the big silver craft.

Twice he ripped up and down the glassy smoothness of the lake. On the second trip he came within 50 feet of a steamship laden with newspapermen and took one hand off the wheel to wave.

Despite earlier protests of disturbing the water a group of citizens wished Sir Malcolm well last night. This morning only a few irreconcilables clung to the belief that this home of John Ruskin should never be disturbed by the roar of motors.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 17—(CP)—Thundershowers have occurred in southern Manitoba, the Rainy River district, also in some sections of Quebec and New Brunswick though elsewhere the weather has been fair and warm. War Can Come Only from Aggression, France, Britain Patient—Churchill

Belfort, France, Aug. 17—(CP-Havas)—War in Europe could only come if Great Britain and France or their allies "were the victims of brutal aggression," according to Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty during the Great Har.

Concluding a tour last night of the Maginot Line of fortifications facing Germany, Mr. Churchill told French newspapermen that the future "depends on the will and caprice of a man raised to heights related neither to the interests of the world nor those of his own country."

Churchill continued:

"Of my first impressions the strongest is that France is protected by a material shield and above all by a shield of men who will assure this region absolute security and defend France against the horrors of invasion.

"As a former officer of the British army I was practically struck by the alertness and intelligence of the troops. Every soldier, every non-commissioned officer, every officer could explain his role immediately and exactly."

"Neither France nor Great Britain will do anything which might provoke war," he said of the international crisis. "Both peoples have always given remarkable proof of patience."

MAYOR J. BONE NOMINATED IN UNITED COUNTIES

Northumberland and Durham Conservatives Make Choice at Warkworth

UNANIMOUS CHOICE

Eight Others Retire in Favor of Mr. Bone at Convention Meeting

The busiest office in Belleville today was that of Mayor Jamieson Bone who last evening at a largely attended nomination meeting at Warkworth was chosen Conservative candidate for the united counties of Durham and Northumberland.

The choice was an unanimous one, eight other candidates withdrawing in favor of Belleville's mayor.

Today congratulations were contained in a veritable flood of telephone calls received at his private office. During the day scores of other well wishes called personally to offer their best regards and aid during the coming campaign. Telegrams contained other expressions of good will from many others throughout the Province.

In accepting the nomination last evening, Mayor Bone warned his supporters that he would not accept the office with any thought of hampering ties enforced by any party. He declared in no uncertain terms that "the days of chair-warming members of Parliament are over", and expressed the conviction that what people of the riding of Durham and Northumberland, as well as those of the ridings of other sections of the country needed was action on the part of their elected

FINDING 'SMOKES' BRINGS TROUBLE

James Caughey Fined $50 and Arthur Post Given Year Suspended Sentence

Picton, Ont.—(Special) — James Caughey, Sophiasburg farmer, found guilty of receiving stolen goods, was fined $50.00 and his own costs, or three months in the county jail by Magistrate Shea, in police court here yesterday.

Arthur Post, Mountain View, employee of Caughey, in connection with the same charge, pleaded not guilty to theft of a carton of cigarettes valued at $60.00, but was found guilty and given a year's suspended sentence, and ordered to pay half the court costs.

The charges arose out of the finding of the cigarettes by Post while bicycling to his work on the Caughey farm. Evidence brought out at the trial revealed that Post had taken the cigarettes to the farm of his employer, and announced his intention of notifying authorities. The carton was assigned to the Newman wholesale Company of Picton from the Imperial Tobacco Company, Montreal, and had presumably fallen from a transport.

He was advised by Caughey to wait "until an advertisement appeared" Post told the court. This failing, the two men opened the carton and divided the cigarettes, destroying the container, it was revealed in evidence.

Subsequent charges were laid by police with the above results.

Magistrate Shea warned Post about accepting the advice of others regarding such affairs. "You have been under the influence of an elder man, and regarding that fact I give you one year's suspended sentence", he said.

'We Cannot Stand by While Hitler Proceeds To Eat Up Europe'

Lord Maugham, Lord Chancellor of England, Speaking to Canadian Bar Association Predicts War Unless Hitler Heeds Repeated Warnings — Britain is Ready for Whatever Issue, Association is Told

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 17—(CP)—Unless Herr Hitler heeds repeated warnings there will be war in Europe in the opinion of Lord Maugham, Lord Chancellor of England.

Speaking in the role of a fraternal delegate to the Canadian Bar Association from the legal profession of the United Kingdom. His Lordship delivered a blunt summary of the British position in the current European impasse.

Holding as he does a seat in the British cabinet his words created a flurry of comment in the audience which included many of Canada's leading judges and lawyers.

Cannot Stand By

"We know the cost," he said, "the destruction of our cities and the lives of thousands of innocent people. We have counted all that but we cannot stand by while Hitler and any friends he may have proceed to eat up Europe and force on the people who are not German a regime which they detest.

"Our country, its people and its government are ready to face the issue whatever it may be."

The grim note of war came unexpectedly from His Lordship. Earlier in the day he received an honorary degree from Laval University along with representatives of the French and American Bars, Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff and L. E. Beaulieu, President of the Association.

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 17—(CP)—Byron Stapleford, 22-year-old Kirkland Lake miner, died en route to hospital here from facial injuries suffered when he was struck by a motorcycle driven by Ab Crowder, Sudbury miner, during a Sudbury motorcycle meet last night.

Some of the 1,000 witnesses watching the race said Stapleford, believed born in Agincourt, near Toronto, was thrown from his machine on the track's north bend and struck by Crowder, another competitor in the meet's third event, following 50 yards behind.

KUHN ADMIRES HITLER

Washington, Aug. 17—(AP)—Calling back Fritz Kuhn for further questioning about the German-American Bund, the United States House of Representatives Committee investigating un-American activities sought today to link his organization with other societies in the United States.

Before the witness resumed his testimony, one committee member told reporters:

"Here is an inter-locking setup by which certain organizations reprint each other's propaganda, support each other's meetings, and cooperate to advance their common cause."

GERMANS 'DIG IN' WITHIN 300 FEET OF POLAND'S BORDER

Gleiwitz, Germany, Aug. 17 (AP)—German troops moving into the upper Silesian region have "dug in" within 300 feet of Poland's border.

A 40-mile ride along the German-Polish border today showed that with the closing of "a section of the Polish border" yesterday German engineering troops have speeded up work on an already well-developed trench system.

From behind blinds 18 feet high erected in the region of the village of Schoenwald, six miles south of here, came the sound of grinding concrete mixers, the chugging of Diesel engines giving power to little material cars, and the sucking of water pumps.

POLAND DETAINS MINORITY LEADER RUDOLF WIESNER

Will Take Firm Step Against All Nazi Leaders in Country

ARRESTS MADE

Warsaw, Aug. 17—(AP)— Polish authorities announced today that Rudolf Wiesner, one of the leaders of the German minority in Poland, has been released from custody.

It was understood, however, that he must be "at the disposal of the Polish Attorney General."

Warsaw, Aug. 17—(AP)—Rudolf Wisner, co-leader of the German minority party, was under "temporary detention" today and a sweeping Polish campaign against all Nazi activities was predicted.

Foreign observers regarded detention of the middle-aged German as evidence that Poland is prepared to take firm steps against Nazi leaders within her borders lest relative passivity bring a repetition of Czecho-Slovakia's 1939 experience with the Sudeten area, where Konrad Henlein was German minority leader.

WORLD NOT SAFE FOR DEMOCRACY

Earl Baldwin Declares 'Cannot be Safe if Things Let Slide'

New York, Aug. 17—(AP)— Earl Baldwin, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, believes the world "is not safe for democracy."

"We cannot make our own country safe for democracy by letting things slide," he told the Congress on Education for Democracy last night.

"Nor can we educate our peoples by holding up our hands in horror at the actions of totalitarian states. How a country is governed is its own concern. It is when the totalitarian country imposes, or tries to impose, its system on a people outside its borders that its action becomes the concern of all free men."

He expressed belief democracy not only faces perils from without but perils from within which can be averted only by reliance on its spiritual, rather than political, foundations.

Lord Baldwin, who less than 10 months ago lauded Prime Minister Chamberlain for saving world peace by yielding to the demands of Fuehrer Hitler at Munish, said he now saw an "unbridgeable gulf between democracy and the 'isms' that are for the time being in control of so large a part of Europe."

Totalitarian Threat

The threat of totalitarian countries to democracies was "plain for the world to see." His external threat might constitute "a challenge to the death" in Europe. But of at least equal importance, he insisted, were the "perils from within" which, due to the spread of totalitarian ideas, "are common to us all."

DR. RETA KILBORN AGED MISSIONARY HOME FROM CHINA

Relates Thrilling Story of Hardships and 'Horrifying Experiences' in Chengtu

FLEES WITH BABY

Is Well-Known in United Church Circles of District

Schumacher, Ont., Aug. 17 (CP)—Story of hardship and thrilling experiences was related today by 75-year-old Dr. Reta Gifford Kilborn, here on a visit to a son, Kenneth, after 40 years of missionary medical service in the Chinese Province of Szechwan.

Dr. Kilborn was the first white woman in Szechwan and for almost the entire period of her service was stationed at Chengtu. She spent about two years in Chungking, now the provisional capital of Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Besieged By Mob.

During her early years in Chengtu, Dr. Kilborn had what she described as a "most horrifying experience". City officials had stirred up resentment toward foreigners and on the feast of the fifth moon, a Chinese holiday, a mob congregated before the compound missionary residence. Dr. Kilborn, her husband and their two-months old baby had to take refuge in the hospital.

She said the rioters forced entry to the residence, looting it, and then laid siege to the hospital. After spending eleven terror-stricken days in the city, fleeing from one hiding place to another, the Kilborns succeeded in boarding a boat and escaping.

PALESTINE TO STOP ILLEGAL ENTRY

Jerusalem, Aug. 17 (CP-Havas)—A new drive to stamp out illegal Jewish immigration into the Holy Land by stiff prison terms and reinforcement of the Coast Guard was revealed today by the Palestine Government.

The Official Gazette published a decree conferring upon the High Commissioner for Palestine, Sir Harold MacMichael, power to determine the sentences to be meted out to illegal immigrants, who will be interned in special camps.

Hitherto the immigrants, mainly Jewish refugees from Central Europe, had been given only short jail terms, the heavier penalties being imposed on the crews of ships involved in bringing them to Palestine.

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (CP)—Opinion of Canadian merchants on a reduction from 48 hours to 24 hours in the time Canadian tourists must spend in the United States before they can return with $100 worth of duty-free goods is being tested with a view of obtaining a reciprocal change in the United States Custom Law, the Ottawa Board of Trade was told yesterday.

Law Says Lap Dog Must Accept Registered Letter, Make Paw Imprint

Baltimore, Aug. 17—(AP)—The law says a little lap dog named Flossie must accept a registered letter and sign for it, but doesn't say how.

John Bouse, rtgister of wills in Baltimore, sees his duty but doesn't know how to do it and he prepared today to toss the Flossie cause celebre into the lap of State's Attorney William Walsh for a decision.

Flossie was the devoted companion of Mrs. Mary Herman, who died and in her will set up a $2,000 trust fund to ensure the care of her pet.

Buy Maryland probate law specifies the register of wills must advise any legatee by registered mail of his legacy, and the legatee must sign.

Bouse can think of only two solutions: Maybe a guardian can be appointed with powers to sign for Flossie's mandatory mail, or Flossie's paw print on the receipt may be accepted for her "X".

Flossie is staying with friends until her dog-biscuit funds come out of litigation.

Aircraft Carrier Runs Down Ways To Belfast Lough

Service at Christening of Ship About to Begin When Crackling of Timber Supporting Vessel is Heard

FRAGMENTS HURLED

Lady Wood Has Just Time to Strike Bottle of Wine Against Prows and Band Strikes up 'Rule Britannia' — Shipwrights Beneath Vessel Rush to Safety — Spectators Struck

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Aug. 17—(CP)—An aircraft carrier burst her supporting cradle in the shipyard where she was built today and made a runaway launching into Belfast Lough, killing one woman among a crowd of spectators.

Mrs. Isabel Kirk, one of the onlookers, was fatally injured, dying in hospital. A flying fragment struck her. Her husband suffered minor injuries.

20 Other persons were injured as H.M.S. Formidable, 23,000-ton newest addition to the Royal Navy slid into the water prematurely, hurling blocks of wood supporting her keel among the thousands gathered to watch the ceremony.

Just as Lady Wood, wife of Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood, got to the launching platform the vessel broke away in some unexplained manner and began to move down the ways.

Lady Wood managed to break the traditional bottle of wine on the receding bows but that was all.

The Formidable will house more than 60 airplanes and mount 16 4.5 inch guns.

Crowds Startled

Lady Wood was accompanied by her husband and surrounded by Lord Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, the Lord Mayor of Belfast and clergymen assembled to hold a service at the christening.

Theye were startled by the crackling sound of pieces of timber breaking away from the cradle supporting the 735-foot-long vessel. As the carrier receded Lady Wood reached over the platform railing and hastily broke the christening wine against the ship, calling its name.

Shipwrights Race to Safety

Scores of shipwrights, who were below the vessel to act in freeing her at a given signal, raced to safety as the cradle crashed about them.

The bandmaster of the Royal Ulster Constabulary shared Lady Wood's presence of mind and struck up "Rule Britainnia" just as if the launching had been on schedule half an hour later. When the injured were taken away the planned religious service was carried out.

BANDIT BELIEVED SHOT BY OPERATOR

Beamsville, Ont., Aug. 17—(CP)—Police of the Niagara Peninsula searched for a man believed wounded by a revolver shot, fired by Stanley Gibson, garage operator, during an attempted robbery of the service station early today.

While no blood stains were found in the garage, Gibson said he saw the man collapse and hang head down over a rear window sill as he rushed to make a getaway after four shots had been fired. It is believed that an accomplice on the outside assisted the wounded man to an automobile which stood nearby with the motor running and a third man behind the wheel.

Mayor Jamieson Bone of Belleville, who was nominated last evening at Warkworth as the candidate for the Conservative party in the next Dominion General elections.

NORTHBROOK GETS NEW O.P.P. POST

The establishment of a Provincial Police detachment at Northbrook, on Highway No. 7 east of Tweed, was today announced by Inspector Frank Gardner, in charge of District No. 8 O.P.P. Provincial Constable Carl Fisher, a native of Belleville who was attached to the Belleville District O.P.P. recently, was named as the officer in charge of the Northbrook post, which will not be officially opened for another two weeks. No replacement of Constable Fisher was announced by the Povincial Police here today.

FLICKERING BOREALIS TINTS NORTHERN SKY

Residents of the district last evening observed one of the most brilliant displays of Aurora Borealis which played over the northern skies in lurid shafts of bluish-white light which flickered and swept with almost searchlight intensity at times. Older residents predicted a change in the weather as the result of the bright evening displays of the Aurora which have brightened the skies during the past week or so.

GULLS GIVE HINT OF COMING FALL

Another hint of fall in the offing has been given by gulls of the district which this week have been flocking and gathering on their old winter feeding ground, the bare rocks in the middle section of the lower Moira River. Many of the birds have apparently returned from the lake as the result of continued rough weather there during the past several days, according to reports of fishermen.

CANNED TOMATOES WAIT FOR EXPORT

Piled in tall rows at one side of the government dock warehouse, 1660 cases of canned tomatoes destined for markets in the British Isles awaited this morning the week-end visit of the steamer Glen Allan for transportation to Montreal.

The consignment from the Cressy factory at Picton is the heaviest shipment of canned goods that has been received at the local dock for a lengthy period, and is believed the first order of an increasing demand for the goods.

HOME KITCHEN COOKS OFFERED COMPETITION

Amateur cooks of the district are being given an excellent chance to compete for valuable cash prizes in the special baking contest arranged by a well-known milling firm for the Belleville Fair. It was announced this morning in a communication received by the office of the Fair Secretary that duplicates of a number of the cash prizes will be offered by the company in the domestic science class. All entrants must prove their exhibit is made with the company's flour.

LIVESTOCK ENTRIES REACH RECORD PEAK

"We will have one of the biggest exhibitions of pure bred horses, cattle, sheep and swine ever arranged for the Belleville Fair," commented Fair Secretary R. H. Ketcheson this morning checking over the entries that had been received up to last evening, the last day of registration for this class of livestock.

"According to the entries we have so far received, the number of exhibits will be about one-quarter larger than even last year, which was a fair year from the exhibitor's standpoint. Many classes which in previous years were represented by only one or two exhibits this year have from twelve to fifteen," declared the secretary.

DESERONTO BASS AGAIN IN PRINT

Large black bass are being caught in Deseronto district this year. Fishing in the bay near the villag this week, Kenneth Detlor landed one fine specimen which weighed 4½ pounds. Just one year ago he caught a bass at the same place while casting which weighed slightly over four pounds.

South Hastings Inspectorate Witnesses Retirement of Inspector H. J. Clarke

The Inspectorate of South Hastings, rendered vacant through the retirement under the Civil Service of Ontario of Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., has been filled with the transfer of J. R. Pickering, B.A., B.Paed., who is at present inspector for District No. 13, with residence in North Bay, it was announced today. Mr. Clarke will be in charge of the local district until September 1 when he will retire after nearly half a century of teaching and inspection.

Mr. Pickering is highly regarded at North Bay and in educational circles. He is a member of the United Church at that place. He and Mrs. Pickering have two sons and one daughter. Mrs. Pickering's father is a retired minister of the United Church.

Prices Steady On City Market

In spite of the fact there were much larger volumes of produce on the city market today price tones retained their steady level of the previous week-end. Raspberries were scarce for the first time this season with quotations firm at two boxes for twenty-five cents.

Home-grown tomatoes were plentiful today with vendors stating that no reduction in market quantities would ensue due to the fact that canning factories were quoted at eighty cents with baskets ranging in price from fifteen cents.

Potatoes were steady with bushel-lots offered at one dollar each and pecks at twenty and twenty-five cents according to size and quality. Onions, carrots, beets were offered in good quality at five cents the bunch with radishes selling at three bunches for ten cents. Cabbage and cauliflower were scarce today with a small quantity of good stock at from five cents the head.

Imported peaches again descended on the market via truck and were offered at forty cents the basket. Plums were quoted at the same price. Huckleberries still remain popular and sold at ten and fifteen cents the box. Harvester apples together with Duchess and other early cooking varieties were fairly plentiful and were offered from twenty cents the basket.

Whitefish was quoted at seventeen cents the pound with a few trout moving well at twenty cents for the same quantity.

'Shades' of Smoke Reynolds May Resent Modern Intruder

'Ghost' Due to Appear Today According to Schedule

'CUBE CONVENTION'

Chief Biddle Recalls Story of Frozen Horse Placed in Church

Shades of "Smoke" Reynolds, doughty pioneer and his stalwart fur-capped companions, who have patrolled the ghostly byways of Prince Edward County's United Empire Loyalist district for the past 160 years have unexpected opposition.

The spooky "chiseller" which, in the parlance of the underworld has "muscled in" on the Reynoldian territory, making so-called noisy appearances for the past two Thursday nights, heralds his arrival with strange knockings, doors that open and shut and a "pale green moonlike" circle of light that appears in the attic of the home of Mrs. James Ackerman, eighty-six year resident of the southern county town.

Like manna from heaven, is a "ghost" story to newspaper hawks. For the past few days the knights of the pencil and pad have flocked to the scene of "Smoke's" opposition and the result has been some colorful stories that have lost nothing in the telling.

Maybe Its Jealousy

However, the colorful "Smoke", himself a pioneer dictator in his own right, has jealously guarded his territory for the past century, and there is no doubt that if the mystery is not cleared up satisfactorily by earthly investigators the old pioneer will likely put the foot down and "bump off" the bold intruder on his ghostly domains.

Tonight is Thursday night again, and according to the Ghost Union, a non-member can go on the air but one night a week. Hence, folks of the district are awaiting with more or less trepidation or curiosity, the third appearance of the claustrophobic spook who disdains enclosed spaces, and chucks around spikes and scissors with careless abandon whenever a mere mortal attempts to secure him in his favorite hangout.

It Couldn't Be

In the meantime several theories have been advanced by not only those connected with the incident but also people from a distance.

A local man, claiming to be a descendant of the pioneers of that district, advances the theory that since the boys of the old pioneer brigade were not averse to shaking the galloping dominos of their day, they have selected the Ackerman attic for the scene of their nightly "shoots".

"Smoke" and the lads loved to roll the cubes, he states, and there might be such a thing as this impertinent strange "taking" the lads for a ride.

The knockings, he opines, are the sounds of the ghostly "bones" as they roll across the floor to spiritual fortune, or disaster. The door opening, is the result probably of a desperate spook who has his ghostly garments in the middle of the loor, and in a last effort to retrieve his fortunes, has thrown the cubes about with extraordinary vigor.

The "pale green light" he thinks, is the reflection of a spooky eye that is watching jealously the clever manipulations of the bones by a competitor.

"Broke" in Spirit.

The door rattling, he claims, is the last stand of a spirit gone "broke" who stands near the door watching the final throw that will mean bliss or oblivion. As the ghostly cubes cavort about the attic floor, the spectral hand, betrays signs of nervousness and unable to control itself shakes under the strain causing the knob to quiver audibly.

The continued knocking, he reckons, is just ghostly appreciation of an exceptionally clever operator of the ivories, who has just completed several passes to the acclamation of the misty company.

"A Good One"

Be that as it may. Chief Bert Biddle who refuses to become alarmed over the still unsolved mystery, comes forward with a story that is as good as if not better than any ghost yarn to come out of the "Garden County".

It appears, according to the chief, that years ago a student of those merry days, not averse to doing a bit of "cutting-up" on his own account, gathered a few young blades of the era about him, and placed the carcase of a frozen horse they had discovered, in the pulpit of the church.

Frozen stiff, the deceased Dobbin sat upright in the small enclosure with its front hoofs placed on the reading desk.

A few minutes later the sexton of the church entered to light the candles. When he saw the "apparition" sitting in the pulpit, he gave vent to an unearthly yell, and ran out of the church screaming "The Devil is inside".

Crowds gathered, and it was some time before a brave-hearted local gathered sufficient courage to enter and see what it was all about.

End of Harvest Yields 32,000 Boxes Berries

Establishing a near record at the beginning of the week when one hundred and thirty pickers had harvested thirty-thousand boxes of raspberries from a nine-acre field, Messrs. Baitley and Munday, Wellington, Ontario, growers announced today, the end of the harvest that occurred yesterday had netted them he all-time record of thirty-two thousand boxes of the fruit.

Favored with timely rains two-thirds through the season, the well-cared-for canes became suddenly productive of a yield well beyond the expectations of the owners.

The crop was under contract to a prominent Prince Edward County canning concern.

Burning Feet Demand 'Stop,' Girl Bathes 'Hot Dog' in Pop

They built a new barn on the property of George Baitley, prominent Wellington agriculturist, a few days ago, and according to the time-honored traditions of this country, the boys and girls gathered from near and far to celebrate the occasion with an old-fashioned barn-dance.

They swung their partners in the quadrilles. They "sat-'em-down" in the square-dances, and the lofty walls of the new building echoed to the strains of the stately waltz as one hundred and thirty dancers glided over the new floor.

But in spite of the old-fashioned flavor of the affair, there were modern dances too. The 'swing-cats' were out in force 'jiving' and 'rug-cuttin'' in the best Goodman style.

But the night was warm and so were the dancers. A little group congregated near a sweet young thing who appeared flushed from her terpsichorean exertions. "Bring me a bottle of pop", she smiled at the boy friend. He did. Calmly she reached down, removed her shoes and stockings, and poured the cold liquid over her feet.

Nearby dancers smiled at the unusual performance.

"What's going on here", master-of-ceremonies inquired as he strode to where the group were congregated.

The sweet young thing was equal to the occasion.

"Hot dogs and pop", she smiled sweetly.

Shannonville

over the week-end was received enthusiastically by district farmers who are now expecting bumper tomato crops. Local residents who are expecting employment in the canning factory are also highly pleased and grateful and all in all the rainfall should prove to be of great benefit to this community. It was learned over the week-end that the canning factory would in all likelihood start on Friday of next week and everybody is hoping for a bumper year. Mr. John A. Weese, president of the canning company has been in the village during the past week making a final checkup prior to the opening date.

The heavy wind that accompanied the rainfall over the week-end wrought considerable havoc although of not a serious nature however. When one resident awoke he found one of his windows were a minus quantity while the platform that seats the orchestra at the dance pavilion situated on the rink was blown over. In some places corn was blown out by the roots and many other such incidents were noted.

A local highway employee believes that he has discovered the world's meanest thief. Last week he went to work and left his dinner pail alongside the road and when he returned at noon he found that the dinner pail and contents had disappeared and therefore the tired and hungry worker had to walk home to obtain his dinner and if this is not the meanest trick ever played this gentleman believes it will do a close second.

The largest crowd to attend a ball game in this village in years attended the fourth playoff game between Cannifton and Shannonville held on Friday night which the Shannonville team won. The enthusiasm of the crowd following the game knew no bounds and everybody intends to go to Cannifton on Monday night to watch their boys perform. Shannonville is to be congratulated on their splendid effort. Going into the semifinals their first baseman received a broken leg and then their coach, Bill Houston, received work on the highway which necessitated later hours than the rules call for and he is unable to get to the games until very late and this of course hampers the efforts of the Shannonville boys. Now to make things worse it was learned that Eugene Maracle, starry right fielder, had left for the United States and would not be able to take part in the deciding game.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack McDonald were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rightmyer of Bloomfield.

Mr. Thomas Vivian of Toronto was a week-end guest of his grandfather, Mr. Thomas Vivian, Sr.

Mrs. Jack Kent and family returned home from Noranda on Saturday where they had spent a two weeks' vacation. On their return they were accompanied by Douglas who is employed at that town. Douglas expects to spend a week's vacation in the village before returning to work.

Mrs. Olive Mayell and family are spending a few days at Cressy the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bateson and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCabe of Roslin and Mr. Alex Fraser were Wednesday dinner hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wilson.

Mrs. Willis Wilson was a Thursday dinner hour guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mastin.

Mrs. Geo. Leverton was a Thursday evening tea guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy.

Mr. Bert Rupert had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse last week due to the heat. This is the first case reported in the district as yet this year, however, although the heat has been unbearable at times especially to those working in the direct rays of the sun.

Mrs. J. W. Stewart returned home on Tuesday following a week's vacation in Toronto where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Watson.

Mrs. Lela Stewart, Mrs. John Graves and Mrs. Alice Caniff were Thursday tea hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roluf of Point Anne.

Mrs. Arthur Booth and Mrs. Arthur Sled of Ottawa and Mrs. F. Carscallen of Belleville were Saturday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald.

Mr. Allan MacDonald who has been at his cottage spent the week-end at his home in the village.

Mr. Ross Fuller spent the week-end at his home in the village.

Messrs. Allan and Stanley MacDonald attended the funeral of the late Walter Foster, Trenton, on Saturday.

Mrs. Myrtle Greatrix and Miss Edith Greatrix, Front Road, called on Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fuller on Sunday.

Mr. and Mr. Stanley MacDonald were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Grills, Sidney.

MORE CARE ABOUT FIRE IN HOMES

Property valued at more than $1,800,000 was destroyed in 4,179 fires in Ontario in April, May and June of this year and official statistics, released today, show that approximately 69 per cent of the total fires, representing approximately 24% of the total losses, occurred in dwellings in which much of the loss could have been avoided, according to an announcement by the Canadian Underwriters' Association.

Fourteen per cent of the total fires were caused by carelessness in smoking which led to destruction of property amounting to $235,890, by far the largest individual cause of the loss exceeding $1,800,000.

In the second three-months of the year the number of fires increased by 499 with an increase in loss of $261,324 over the corresponding quarter of 1938, while for the first half of 1939 there were 482 more fires than in the first half of 1938, although total loss figures showed a reduction.

"The number of losses," according to the Canadian Underwriters' Association, "can easily be reduced by more care on the part of the individual householder. The 'Board' companies are constantly utilizing all their services to help reduce losses with the idea of reducng insurance costs, but, in the final analysis, citizens have the remedy largely in their own hands because the figures prove beyond doubt that most of the fires are attributable to causes which can be largely eliminated by a little extra personal attention to the question of safety in the home."

NAZIS UPROOTING HEROES

Germany goes on apace with the obliteration of much of its past. It has sent out those Jews, whom it has not in prison, it has purged army officers, it has purged the church and raised up Teutonic gods who have not been believed in for over twelve centuries, and now it commences to excavate the old German heroes. Germany used to honor the memory of Emperor Charles the Great, known best by the French form of Charlemagne from the Latin Charles Magnus, Frederick Barbarossa, Henry First and Frederick the Great.

Schoolboys of today, it is said, are told Charlemagne was a vicious aristocrat, that he was a Frank and not a true German. But the schoolboys' fathers and ancestors had been taught to honor this man's memory as one of the greatest Germans of all time. Charlemagne was a religious man and respected the church, whom Nazis have tried to break down. Because Charlemagne warred on some German tribes to make them Christians as the Nazis say, he does not deserve respect of Nazi Germans. Charles was a great conqueror and accepted conquered tribes as equals. That is bitter to Nazis.

The German National Socialists in their reconstruction of history are maltreating Frederick Barbarossa, the Emperor. They blame him because he did not drive eastward and used his influence to put a brake on Henry, Duke of Saxony, for starting a crusade to conquer the east. Rather his idea was to seek dominion in the south. That would not do today.

Frederick the Great comes in for condemnation because he liked things French.

Henry the Fowler is still respected by the German Nazis, for he "drove towards the east" and today he is called the Founder of the First Reich. Nazis see that he had much of the modern Hitler in him.

But where is all this going to land the Nazi historians? They have to convince German peasants of the Hartz mountains that Frederick of the Red Beard is dead, though the latter know he is alive in a state of enchantment in the mountains. They have to be taught that it is not true that the emperor with the red beard is drowsing on his throne waiting for a time to come when all Germans shall be free. It is said he is stirred at times when Germans are in danger, but his last waking from his long sleep was when he flashed lightning and breathed thunder from his mountain throne against Napoleon. Nazi teachers have all this to overcome.

Nazis have a long program to uproot every trace of foreign influence in German art, philosophy, literature and history.

If all German life needs so much purging as the Nazis feel it requires to make it perfect National Socialism, then the Germans surely should feel they have all through their history been sadly treated by so many of their Emperors, their writers, their clergy, their philosophers, their soldiers, until the day of Naziism came. When that era is fully come Nazis may expect Germany will be able to have her rights, even if German Jews, Emperors, philosophers, writers and scientists have had to be driven out if living or uprooted (if dead) from the respect of the people.

It is just such action which leaves the world puzzled how to answer the question "How are the Germans ever to settle down among the nations with the notions of superman gone?

SEA-TOSSED

The garish lights upon the starboard beam
Have slipped away, the spectral reef is past,
The final buoy has blinked its farewell gleam,
And ocean sweeps where night enfolds at last.

A riding moon above, and here below
The dark of sluicing surge upon the deep,
And I a derelict, except I know
An eye to star, a hand to helm will keep.

So is my span of years, bewildering glare,
The skirted shoals with fitful spark to guide,
The broad, choatic sea of life, the prayer
To trust a pilot through the seething tide.

POOR LITTLE RICH BOY WAS HENRY CLEWS, born into Manhattan's Four Hundred. Cursed with too much money, bored to death with everything that makes up a rich man's life, Henry Clews turned to art and became a sculptor. He put on several shows of his work in New York City but failed to arouse any marked enthusiasm. Then he went to France and founded an estate in the seclusion of an eighth century fortress-monastry at La Napoule, on the shores of the Mediterranean. Much money was spent upon restoring the estate, and the peasantry in all the region roundabout profitted. Henry Clews was eccentric and stocked the whole place with white birds and animals. It is said that to his white pigeons he had tiny flutes fastened, which whistled musically as they flew. Henry Clews died two years ago and his widow purposes to open the estate with its collection of sculpture, paintings, and other objects of art to the public.

JUPITER PLUVIUS, in delivering much needed rain to Ontario, certainly made a good job of it and made up for previous lack of moisture. Good soaking rains spell good crops, and good crops spell prosperity, and every prospect pleases, but only man is vile and liable to spoil things out of sheer devilishness. What kind of psychology is bred over the sea that has only the killer instinct for ambition?

TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE IN CANADA TAKE A CHANCE, perhaps ten times ten thousand are willing to take a chance but don't want to get caught at it. Ten thousand are on the Post Office black list as ineligible to participate in the Canadian mail service because they have been caught using the mails for improper purposes such as lotteries, etc. Under Section 204 of the Postal Regulations if the Post Office is satisfied a person is publishing obscene, seditious, fraudulent, or other illegal matter or is engaged in the lottery business, it can refuse to deliver mail to his or her address. This was not generally known until recently when an Ontario newspaper stumbled across it accidentally and it has been a matter of interesting discussion ever since, some people challenging the right or justice of banning any taxpayer from the full use of this public utility. As the result of bringing this matter into the open the justice or otherwise of this postal ban can be thoroughly discussed and adjusted.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Insulin Used in Stubborn Cases of Sleeplessness

Research workers have been able to prove that if one can get two hours of quiet natural sleep and from 6 to 8 hours of quiet relaxation, there is no danger to life itself. On the other hand, if one goes without any sleep or rest for 24 hours, it is estimated that it requires seventeen nights of rest and sleep to make up for this loss of one night's rest and sleep. It can thus be seen that while we may live on a small amount of sleep, sleep is of great importance to the health of body and mind.

No one has been able to tell us what causes sleep. In my student days we believed there was a sort of cycle of events during the 24 hours and at a certain period the blood left the brain—the brain became anaemic—and this caused sleep. This has been disproven.

Patients who are nervous, emotional, under severe mental strain, must be given rest or the wear and tear on heart, bloodvessels, and nervous system may cause exhaustion and collapse.

In speaking of the usual methods of bringing rest and sleep to these high strung, upset individuals, Dr. G. Wilse Robinson, Neurological Hospital, Kansas City., Mo., in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, tells of three —(a) drugs, (b) baths, and (c) psycotherapy (treating the mind disturbances by free discussion of them with the individual.) As these three methods have certain disadvantages or fail in a number of cases, Dr. Robinson states that insulin (the treatment given to diabetics) has been used successfully by a number of research workers including himself in quieting and bringing sleep to patients suffering with mania, overactivity with or without impending collapse.

"The patient who requires to be "quieted" is invariably under the influence of abnormal emotional tension states which seem to disturb the way carbohydrate (starch) is handled by the body processes. By the use of a certain amount of starchy food which is controlled by the injection of insulin, a natural drowsiness is soon followed by natural sleep."

This method is certainly better than drugs and when hydrotherapy and psycotherapy fail, it should prove a valuable aid.

These stubborn cases of sleeplessness where insulin is used should, of course, be handled in hospital.

After two decades at bottom of North sea

With scrap iron, due to the world-wide armament race, in increasingly greater demand, British salvagers are raising additional units of the Gerrman high seas fleet scuttled in Scapa Floy by the Germans themselves in 1919 rather than turn the ships over to the victorious allies. Among the many warships sunk were S.M.S. Friedrich der Grosse and S.M.S. Von der Tann. Some of the metal work in the super-liner Queen Mary was salvaged from previously raised German ships at Scapa Flow.

Move Against Non-Germans Fatal

However much one might dislike Hitler's methods he had done much for Germany and until he took control of Bohemia and Moravia, the remainder of Czecho-Slovakia after his earlier acquisition of the Sudetenland, his actions had some color of right, said Lord Maugham.

The last move, however, would prove a fatal step in the end. Every move made against non-German nationalities built up a feeling of hatred and hope for rebellion. It was to be hoped that sooner or later the German people would become aware of the hatred growing against them and realize a thirst for conquest could be assuaged at too great cost.

Hitler Stirs up Britain

Hitler had achieved what seemed impossible in stirring up the British people who were slow to anger, slow to move and apt to think the other side might have something in its favor. Now, however, the British people were united behind their government.

"If Hitler does not heed the warnings which have been given again and again to him and his people and to the Italian people as well the result will be a war," declared Lord Maugham.

France was equally determined to prevent the domination of Europe by force and both countries had made phenomenal preparations for war in the last year. Other peoples in Europe were ready to fight with France and Britain. All three attempts to dominate Europe in modern times had failed.

Playground Notes

Friday evening the East End lassies defeated the West End Senior girls in the softball playoffs, which evened the games to three apiece. The score was 17-11. This left a sudden death game to be played and the East End girls were triumphant by score of 21-20. Norma Maker of "East" was the outstanding player of both sides in this last two games. Other outstanding players were—"Shirt" Meagher, Rose "Dazzle" Smith. These girls really take their game seriously. Tuesday night's game ended in almost a riot when a player of the "West" was called out for leaving her base before the ball had been deliverd over the plate.

This week will wind up the playoffs for the pennants and each game either for the baseball, horseshoes, volleyball, checkers, ping-pong or track and field will be worth taking time to see. Amateur still put on the best show! Norma Maker won the senior girls' singles and the Bantam horseshoes championship was won by Bill Anderson and Joe Galbraith.

Everyone is invited to attend the Track and field meet between the two hills this Friday afternoon at one p.m. Parents of the competitors in the meets should be there to see how good their children really are and cheer them on to glory.

Birds-of-Prey Championed By Kiwanis Club Speaker

Neil Bissonette Urges Conservation of Owls, Hawks etc., "Necessary to the Country"

'DEVILS-IN-FEATHERS'

The much-maligned birds-of-prey, "devils-in-feathers" as he aptly described them, have a staunch defender in Neil Bissonnette, Stratford schoolteacher, whose highly informative address Tuesday on these unsung birds of the air, gave members of the local Kiwans Club a deep insight into their usefulness as feathered denizens of the woods and fields.

"Man is predisposed as to what he thinks about them," this champion of the hawk, owl and eagle told the clubmen in his effort to show that "their black character is as pure as the newly-blossomed lily."

"The general attitude of the public towards the man that blasts down a bird of prey is of hero-worship," Mr. Bissonete declared. "Only four varieties of the hawk are killers, the sparrow-hawk, the groshawk, the sharp-shinned hawk and the Cooper hawk. Other varieties feed on mice and rabbits. The bad things these birds destroy more than balance the number of birds they eat. In fact, they are an actual benefit to the birds they eat," smiled the speaker, explaining that he was trying to prove that 'black was white.'

"Birds of prey are necessary to the districts in which they live. If they were cleaned out of any area, the game birds would likewise disappear," the speaker affirmed, adding that these "devils-in-feathers" are so scarce in Ontario that if cleaned out of a district they would not be seen again for two or three years.

Disease Kills Game Birds

Contraction of Avian tuberculosis by grouse from henhouses where they sometimes go for food in the wintertime has been responsible for a heavier loss of game birds than from the ravages of birds-of-prey, he said. Weakened by disease that spreads rapidly, partridge and grouse, when they make their annual winter foray into the snow are unable to use their natural defenses against the hawks, consequently the greater majority of game birds killed by these killers are already ravaged with disease."

Drawing a verbal comparison between the methods of killing of various types of animals, the speaker declared the feathered killers are more "humane" in their efforts. "A hawk will kill its prey almost instantly. They kill only what they need. Cat-animals such as the ordinary cat, lion or tiger, will kill everything within reach. They play and torture their victims before the kill."

Far-Reaching Effects

Killing of these birds-of-prey has had far-reaching effects, Mr. Bissonnette told his listeners. "In the old days we had no flocking of birds such as the blackbird and more recently the starling, because the hawks were here. Four or five sharp shinned hawks would account for perhaps only ten of a flock, but they would frighten the birds into dispersion."

"People in areas where these flocks of birds have become a nuisance have themselves to thank," he said, quoting conditions in Stratford, where public parks have to be closed at this time of the year due to the bird nuisance.

The good the hawks do is so great that we should not think of destroying them without undoing the good they do, he said.

The speaker urged that birds-of-prey be left alone for a period of five years. "Do this and you will get rid of the faults of other bird pests," he said. "We would have no shortage of game birds, while the flocking of starlings and other similar nuisance birds would be done away with." He urged Kiwanians to discourage the idea that man is a hero if he shoots a bird-of-prey, and to encourage the idea that we need more of them.

The speaker was fittingly introduced by Kiwanian Cliff Baragar while Club appreciation of the fine address was voiced by Kiwanian Ab. Boynton. President Dr. "Dick" Flynn was in the chair.

Coroner Inspects Track

Coroner Dr. G. A. Enry announced he will inspect the track, owned by the Sudbury Driving Club, and decide today whether an inquest will be held.

Spectators said heavy clouds of dust, rising from the track behind two other motorcyclists who completed the race unaware tragedy had struck on the track's back stretch, obstructed Crowder's view. They said he appeared to swerve to avoid the overturned machine and struck Stapleford, lying nearby.

Chief Constable Joe Mulligan of the McKim Township Police Force, an eye witness of the accident, conducted the investigation. No charges have been laid.

Winner of Novice Race

Stapleford won the evening's first event, the novice race, and placed second in the amateur race following. When the accident occurred he was in third place in the five-mile open race for the Dorsett Trophy.

Both machines involved in the mishap belonged to Stapleton, who came here earlier in the day with Clarence Muncaster, formerly of Sudbury, for the meet. Neither machine was badly damaged.

POLAND DETAINS

Wisner is considered very open in his Nazi beliefs. He is popularly regarded as ambitious to become the Henlein of the German minority in Poland, but here, Polish circles insist the parallel must cease.

Several Hundred of Arrests

An official announcement said that "several scores" of Germans of Polish citizenship and several German citizens also have been arrested, on charges of "belonging to an espionage and subversive organization having its headquarters in the German part of Silesia."

The grand total of these arrests is believed to be several hundreds, including many at such prominent Silesian cities as Katowice. German reports of 1,000 arrests are sharply discounted.

Further evidence of Polish determination to clamp down against any subversive activity was seen in announcement that the headquarters of two prominent organizations among the German minority, the young German party and the (German) trade union workmen have been closed.

An official communique claimed the action was taken because of evidence of the "existence of an organization in German Silesia for espionage regarding military activities along the Polish frontier."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Good Girls Go To Paris"

Co-starring two of the screen's most popular favorites, Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas, the hilarious, gay and witty comedy "Good Girls Go To Paris" is the number one feature attraction now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Good Girls Go To Paris" is tops in entertainment and besides the top-notch team of Douglas and Blondell, Walter Connolly, remembered for his outstanding performance in "You Can't Take it With You" heads a supporting cast of Hollywood's most famous personalities, including Joan Perry, Isabell Jeans, Stanley Brown, Alexander D'Arcy and Howard Hickman, to whom much credit is due, for making "Good Girls Go To Paris" a World's Fair of fun, from the opening scene, through eighty minutes of side-splitting laughter. In addition, "Lone Star Pioneers" a splendid story woven around the adventures of "The Texan Rangers" after the civil war, is presented in the program and features Bill Elliott, Columbia Studio's new outdoor cowboy star. A clever cartoon entitled "The Early Bird" will also delight both the kiddies and adults alike, as it is one of the most original, ever produced. You will find this entire show is one of the best yet to come to the McCarthy and we heartily encourage you to see it.

AT THE BELLE

"Daughters Courageops"

All the charm, all the humor, all the pathos, all the simple, human and folksy quality of last year's memorable "Four Daughters" have been recaptured by Warner Bros. in "Daughters Courageous" which is now at the Belle Theatre.

To make the parallel still closer between the two pictures, every member of the cast of the first have a role of equal importance in the new picture. The feminine contingent again includes the "four daughters", Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane and Gale Page. Fay Bainter, that supreme character actress, has been added to the original cast as the girls' mother, and a very welcome addition she is. May Robson is again cast as the crochety, lovable old family standby. The male roles are in the capable hands of John Garfield, Jeffrey Lyon, Claude Rains, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran, with the ever-reliable Donald Crisp as a newcomer to the many-daughtered family. Furthermore, the director was Michael Curtiz who proves conclusively that the success which attended his efforts in connection with "Four Daughters" was no mere happy accident, that he has a distinct flair for this type of screen tale.

And then the screen play, suggested by a stage play from the pens of Dorothy Bennett and Irving White, was written by Julius J. and Phillip Epstein, the former of whom was also co-author of the "Four Daughters" script. The Epstein brothers have, in this instance, turned out a script which fully measures up to—in fact, this previewer is of the opinion it is even better than the "Four Daughters" script.

With all this parallelism of cast, direction, writing, the new picture nevertheless is in no sense a sequel to the former.

Claude Rains is again the father of the four girls, but this time they have a mother too, in the person of Miss Bainter. Miss Robson is not any sort of relation but a faithful old servitor. She has, however, as much to say concerning the affairs of the family as if she ware a member of it. Garfield, Lynn, McHugh and Foran are again suitors of the girls.

Crisp is a solid and respectable business man of considerable means who is a suitor of the girls' mother. Yes, she has been divorced from their father, for plenty of cause.

On the eve of his former wife's marriage to her wealthy suitor, the errant ex-husband returns and throws the household into considerable turmoil. His daughters feel they should hate him, but he is such a charming fellow that they can't. He takes more interest in the lives of his four daughters than his former wife feels he has any right to do, his worst offense, in her eyes, being to encourage the youngest girl, played by Priscilla, in her infatuation for the fascinating, though brash and seemingly worthless, son of a Portuguese fisherman. The latter role is played by Garfield.

The picture leaves one with that same warm glow of sentimental happiness, tinged with a little sadness, that was the dominant quality in "Four Daughters." What makes it seem just a little bit better is the fact that it has a bit more comedy along the way, and the comedy is exceptionally bright and witty.

About the acting of a cast so large and so obviously brilliant as that of "Daughters Courageous," there is little need to comment.

It may be a little unfair to select any member of the cast for special mention, since they are all so fine, but it would be dodging a responsibility to fail to mention that Garfield again tops all the others, even if it is only a little bit. Particularly fine also are Priscilla Lane and Miss BaBinter.

Clyde McCoy and his orchestra in a smart musical revue will be presented on the same program.

High and new on the head is a turban of black cire satin. It covers the hair back and front, and is draped and shirred.

Don't Frown!

DEANNA DURBIN has the freshness of youth and shows no frown lines or worry wrinkles

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE'S nothing that knocks a girl right out of the beauty race so completely as facial acrobatics. You know her, you've seen her, and no doubt you have watched her talk, with her features distorted, hands and shoulders moving; and you have acquired a terrible case of jitters.

It is a poor method of expressing animation. The eyes and the lips can do the job by themselves.

We seldom see ourselves as others see us. Certainly one does not see one's face in action. The girl who twists her phiz into all manner of shapes probably has no idea that she does it. She nods her head; throws it back. She tilts her nose, digs frowns between her eyes, does her lips in puckers or droops or ghastly wire smiles, showing her teeth. Very distracting to the observer. It is a senseless waste of energy.

But that's not the worst of it. Too much twisting and pulling of the muscles will eventually produce what those in the beauty trade call expression wrinkles. They get a strong foothold, and getting rid of them is no easy job.

Lifting the eyebrows cut gullies crosswise of the forehead. Pulling the eyes together produces frown lines. Pulling down the mouth corners causes the tissues covering the jaws to sag, lines to firm from nostrils to lip ends.

Be tranquil, my child, be tranquil. You'll stay young-looking all your life long.

One of the new nail veneers is so faint a pink it is almost white. A new note, and a welcome one, the world being a bit weary of murderous looking bright red claws. This new product has a brilliant sheen, making the finger nails look like highly polished shells.

If you would be a few steps ahead of the beauty parade, try out the pink-white idea. It goes with fluffy clothes and that sweet frail look that some of the smarties are affecting. With pastel costumes it is the only thing, since a strong pigment starts a color fight right off the bat.

Believe it or not, the faint tone is charming with tanned skin, forming an interesting contrast.

SECRET OF WINNING CONTESTS REVEALED BY FIVE WOMEN

Won First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Prizes for White Bread at Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto—and ALL Baked with Robin Hood Flour!

Interviewed after the Exhibition they said:

MRS. WYLIE (below): "I've used Robin Hood Flour for years and my mother used it before me. Have unfailing success with it . . . kneads with less trouble and goes farther."

MISS JEFFERSON: "I think Robin Hood is better than any others. Robin Hood is the whitest and nicest I've ever handled."

MRS. FORESTER: "I prefer Robin Hood. The dough is spongy and elastic, easy to work with and it goes farther."

MRS. JAMES EWART: "I love Robin Hood. Started using it two years ago. Never before have I had such nice bread."

MRS. WM. McCLURE: "I only started baking bread recently but now the family won't let me stop. All my friends are becoming enthusiastic about baking—and about Robin Hood Flour too."

So here are five good reasons for baking with Robin Hood. You, too, can find baking a pleasure and a triumph if you use the flour milled from washed wheat.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Where Do You Find Your Thrills?

Countless numbers of young people of this generation live on thrills. Does this include you?

Or, at least, do you talk about thrills most of the time? Do you go around looking for experiences that you think will thrill you, and do you cast aside just about everything that you think hasn't a thrill in it?

If that's the case, I'm interested in knowing what it is that thrills you. It goes without saying that the chief thrills in everybody's life are produced by love.

Love is the most powerful battery in the universe, and the things that love does to us are more agitating and more delicious—and sometimes more terrible—than any other 'kick' that life can give us.

A normal boy and a normal girl find each other the most thrilling objects conceivable. And about this there cannot be any argument.

But people aren't in love all of the time. Even the youngest and most thrill-hungry have hours, days, weeks, unoccupied by love.

What is it then, that thrills you? Detective stories? Movies? Compounds of mystery and love and crime, Most young people nowadays resort to one or the other.

And sport, perhaps? Undoubtedly great thrills are to be found in sport, whether at first or at second hand. It's exciting to play ball or to swim. Or sometimes it would seem that it's almost more exciting to watch others play. Perhaps you're one of the thousands who go to football games and who say, at the time, that that's the biggest thrill of all.

There are many men and a few young women who say they get a big kick out of prize-fights. Am I right?

Or have you the airplane fever? Or do you desire to be taken on an expedition to the end of the world, so you can explore? Or does it thrill you to drive a car for long distances? Or is it just the danger in all these things, apart from the pleasure and the novelty that excites you?

Youth shouldn't be sleepy and timid. Youth has a right to its thrills, to its few short years of glorious excitement. And we older people like to see younger ones living intensely.

But—need you allow yourselves to become feverish?

It's feverish to court danger for its own sake, and the boys and girls who do it are going to be terribly tired, dragged-out creatures by the time they are thirty.

To us on-lookers, it's a great satisfaction that there are so many youngsters who say they get their thrills out of just making things, which is perhaps the greatest sport in the world.

Making a loaf of bread. Making an electric contrivance that really works? Or, when you're older, making a house, or a bridge, or a picture or a poem. Starting at the very beginning and making something that you yourself have planned, and making it well.

That is the way that some of the greatest thrills of life are experienced. Try it, before you ever allow yourself to sink into boredom. Try it before you decide that you've experienced all the thrills that are.

Are you a thrill-chaser?

If so, what gives you a thrill?

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Is Your Radio a Pest to Your Neighbours?

"Will you please keep your radio tuned to a moderate level so that your neighbors won't be disturbed."

Cheers . . . hurrahs .. huzzas . . and hallelujahs to the radio station whose announcer late at night, makes this human plea.

This courteous appeal to us to remember our neighbours is the very stuff of human kindness. Especially in these warm nights when our windows must be open and when we are exhausted by the heat and yearn, desperately, for quiet and sleep.

Practically every home has a radio. Unfortunately not every home has a radio-conscience. Perhaps if all radio stations would follow the excellent example of the station quoted above we could develop a radio-conscience; point it up as a guide to the code of etiquette that must be developed for this comparative newcomer to our social life.

Consideration is an elementary principle of good manners. Consideration of and respect for the rights of other people, consideration of and respect for the privacy of other people.

As far as your radio is concerned have you a decent consideration for your neighbours? Do you keep your radio on full blast morning, noon and night? When the windows are open, do you torture your neighbours by your utter selfishness in forcing them to listen to your selection of broadcasts at all hours of the day and night? When you know that the walls in your apartment house are thin, do you let your radio run incessantly at full volume. When you come in late at night, do you turn on your radio for music or late news, disturbing the peace of your neighbors?

When you are alone, and when you are sure that you will not disturb anyone in the house or in the neighborhood, let your radio entertain you at its maximum power.

But when you know, if you will but take human thought of "the other fellow", that you will disturb someone, have mercy, have a heart. It is possible, you know, to tune down the volume so that the radio can be heard in your own range, and not beyond!

Correct Stationery

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Is it correct for me to use my husband's initial on my letter paper for business and general correspondence?

2—Is it proper for guests at a church wedding to wear long dresses? The ceremony is to be at three o'clock in the afternoon, with a reception following at the home. We are not relatives.

Ethel.

1—Your husband's initials, on letter paper, used for either social or business letters, indicates, of course, that the letter paper is his. For your social letters you should use letter paper carrying your own initials or else use plain paper.

The paper on which you wrote to me . . .with your name and address printed at the top . . .is appropriate for business and professional letters, for family letters and for certain informal types of letters.

2—In some communities we see many women wearing long dresses to afternoon weddings and receptions. In large cities, women customarily wear street-length dresses to afternoon weddings.

But anywhere a woman guest at an afternoon wedding will be correctly dressed if she wears a street-length dress of a material and color inclined to formality, an appropriate hat and well-chosen accessories. The type of costume that she would wear to a formal luncheon or to a tea.

Courtesy Tip

When a hostess is seating her guests at an informal dinner, she stands at her own place at table and tells each guest where she or he is to sit. First she mentions the woman guest of honor, or the woman to whom she wishes to pay most compliment: "Mrs. Allen (or 'Mary') will you please sit at John's right?" Then, "Mrs. Forbes (or 'Jane'), on his left". Then the other women guests. Now, the man guest of honor, "Mr. Allen (or 'Tom'), here by me" . . . and so on.

Fashion Flashes

A COOL DAY at this time of year brings forth dresses which show Autumn trends. Typical of the new bustle mode is a frock of black faillie with a sash finished by two fan-shaped ends.

Still around is the dirndl with full skirt and snug bodice. The bodice of a dinner dirndl in ice-blue satin crepe is laced in dark blue velvet through rhinestone eyelets from a square-neck.

Accessories to bridge the gap between late summer and early autumn include bags and shoes of black faille. One such bag has rows of shirring and a crystal ornament at the base of the wide self-strap.

Stripes star in many smart fashions. A widely-striped black and pink satin is trimmed with tiny black and pink box-pleated net ruffles at the square neckline and hem.

UNEARTH STONES OF HOME OF FOUNDER OF GANANOQUE

Gananoque, Ont., Aug. 17.—(CP)—Stones from the foundation of the original home of Col. Joel Stone, founder of the town of Gananoque, were unearthed yesterday by workmen extending a parking lot. Stone came to the site of the town prior to 1812.

Andrew Edwards, president of the Gananoque Historical Society, is positive the stones came from the Stone House. Two families were prominent in the town's early history, the Stones and the MacDonald's. The MacDonald home is now the Town Hall but the Stone mansion was demolished.

Washington Pitcher Goes to Yankee Well Once Too Often And is Finally Beaten 4-0

After Stopping Yanks Four Times Dutch Leonard of Senators is Finally Beaten

ALLOWS SIX HITS

Reds Lose Game and Ground as Cards Win Two Over Pirates; Walters a Loser

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

The newest nominee for the pitcher that went to the well once too often was Emil (Dutch) Leonard of Washington Senators.

Because he had phenonenal knack for tying the world champions in knots, Leonard properly was the first thought of his manager, Bucky Harris, every time the Nats faced New York Yankees this season.

Dutch stopped the Yanks the first four times he was called while no other pitcher in the American baseball league could beat them more than twice, but yesterday they solved his jinx with a 4-0 conquest.

Leonard gave only six hits and pitched five hitless, runless innings in a row. However, his offerings included a pair of doubles in the first inning, one of them by Joe DiMaggio, a home run by DiMag with one on in the seventh and another homer by Red Rolfe in the eighth. In addition his own teammates were warped into wrinkles by Marius Russo, rookie southpaw, who pitched a four hitter.

Indians Win Two

There were other notable examples of pitching. Cleveland Indians swept a doubleheader from St. Louis Brown 3-0 and 7-1 with Mel Harder earning the shutout on seven hits and lefty Al Milnar taking the nightcap on four—missing credit for a whitewashing when Chet Laabs hit his fourth homer of the last four games.

"Fiddler Bill" McGee of St. Louis Cardinals pitched a three-hit 8-0 shutout in the second frame of a National League doubleheader with Pittsburgh irates after the Redbirds had won the opener 4-3 to narrow the gap between them and Cincinnati's league leaders to six games. Terry Moore's two home runs inside the park were the deciding factor in the first contest. Joe Medwick remained out of the lineup because of a sore back.

Galan Hits Hard

Bucky Walters of the Reds, only 20-game winner in the Majors so far this season, held Chicago Cubs to five hits but suffered his eighth defeat 2-1. Augie Galan doubled a run across in the first frame and then homered in the seventh. This was more than the Reds could accomplish with eight scattered safeties off Claude Passeau.

Bill Posedel pitched Boston Bees to a 9-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies on six hits in the first half of a double bill and had plenty of help. Henry Majeski doubled with the bases loaded and hit a home run and Buddy Hassett tripled with the bases jammed. But in the nightcap Hugh Mulcahy stripped the stingers out of the Bees for a 3-2 triumph.

New York Giants pounced on Al Hollingsworth in his Brooklyn Dodger debut with three runs in the first and scored four more off "Tot" Pressnell in the fourth for a 7-3 conquest which went to the credit of Cliff Melton. The southpaw pitcher had to be helped on the mound, but not at the plate. He contributed a perfect day at bat with a double, two singles and a sacrifice.

During the game the Giants announced the indefinite suspension of second baseman Burgess Whitehead for breaking club rules. One of his infractions was showing up late for games.

Gehringer is Back

Another second baseman, a chap named Charley Gehringer got back into Detroit Tigers' lineup after a long illness to deliver a pinch home run with one on in the ninth. This tied the score against the Chicago White Sox, but the latter won out in the 12th inning 7-6 on two singles and an infield out.

Boston Red Sox and Philadelphia Athletics were idle.

Bellevillle Tennis Championships Won

Top ranking tennis honors were won at the Belleville Tennis Club yesterday when the club championships were the order of the day on the club's splendid courts. Keen competition marked the entire tournament, that saw new club champions declared and subsequently honored.

In the ladies' singles Miss Marion MaocLean successfully defended her club championship defeating Miss Mary Lockhart, but only after three fine sets had been played.

Dawson MacLean stepped to the fore to wi nthe men's singles club championship, defeating Jack Dickens in a torrid final match, that saw both players at top form.

In the mixed doubles teh team of Miss Jo Crujo and Jack Dickens triumphed over Dawson MacLean and M. Howard to take these honors.

The largest entry in the history of the Belleville Tennis Club competed in the club championships yesterday.

English Boxer Is Suspended

Trenton, N.J., Aug. 17 (AP) — Jack (Kid) Berg, eteran English welterweight, was suspended indefinitely today from New Jersey rings by Athletic Commissioner Abe Greene.

Berg was scheduled to fight Lou Fortuna of Philadelphia in Trenton tonight.

Greene said he was notified by Berg's managers that Berg, "without notice to them, had undergone an operation for removal of scar tissue around the eyes and would be unavailable" for tonight's match.

Tweed Comes From Behind to Win 18-11

Tweed, Aug. 17 (Special)—Tweed defeated Foxboro at the local grounds Tuesday night by a score of 18 to 11 in the first game of the intermediate C playdowns. The return game will be played on Foxboro grounds later in the week.

Foxboro opened the scoring in the first inning when Wright laced out a four base knock scoring Brown and Woods ahead of him. Davidson struck out three men in this frame. The visitors scored again in the third when they connected with Davidson's offerings for four hits coupled with an error, for four runs. Two runs in each of the sixth and 7th innings concluded the scoring for the visitors. Davidson who pitched the entire game for the locals fanned an even dozen men and issued only three bases on balls, only one of which was converted into a run.

Tweed found Short's curves a puzzle for the first two innings and went down in order. In the third Meraw's double, a walk and an error accounted for two runs, to make the score 7 to 2 for the visitors.

The locals found their batting eyes in the fourth inning which produced 8 runs and gave the locals a lead which they never relinquished. Two men were out and Marsh was on second base when the deluge started. Courneyea, Meraw, Wagar and Orr hit safely, the hits including a double and two three baggers. Wright playing at second base relieved Short on the mound without a chance to warm up. He issued three successive free tickets to first base forcing in two runs before he retired the last man.

Short returned to the mound in the next inning but his offerings were no puzzle to the locals who made four hits and scored three runs.

Campbell replaced Short at the start of the sixth inning, but the homesters, sensing victory, collected five hits, including a home run by Wagar, and five runs to secure a commanding lead.

Meraw with four hits and Wagar with three were the leading batsmen. Orr was close behind with two triples.

C. Barnett and Alex Simpson of Belleville umpired the game.

Tweed: Courneyea lf; T. Meraw 3b; Burrows 2b; G. Wagar cf; Orr c; Tummon 1b; S. Meraw rf; Marsh ss; Davidson p; J. Wagar lf.

Foxboro: Wray rf; Brown 3b; Bradford rf; Woods ss; Campbell lf, p; Wright 2b, p; Thrasher c; Jury cf; Peacock 1b; W. Short p, 2b.

Point Anne Tennis Team Crowds Leader

Winning four of the six events of the day, the Point Anne Tennis Club today are crowding the league leading Belleville nettisters in the Bay of Quinte League, by virtue of clean cut victories over the Madoc Tennis Club at the Canada Cement courts yesterday.

The Madoc squad won the men's singles and a second set of mixed doubles, the Point Anne team taking the remaining sets.

The results in the men's singles, Art Genereaux, Point Anne, lost to Ken West of Madoc, 6-3, 6-0. Men's doubles, B. Roseberry and Jack Hart, Point Anne, defeated C. Nickle and J. Naylor, Madoc, 7-5, 6-3 and Clark Fraser and Thomas Bowler, Point Anne, defeated K. Reid and F. Naylor, Madoc, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

In the ladies' doubles, Hilda Callaghan and Donalda Long, Point Anne, defeated B. Nickle and J. Nickle, Madoc 6-1, 6-4.

In the mixed doubles, Mavis Gilmore and Jack Watson, Point Anne, defeated E. Cole and R. West, Madoc, 6-2, 6-0, and Bruce Vanorder and Jessie Taulk, Point Anne, lost to Audrey Callaghan and M. Bell, Madoc, 6-2, 6-4, 7-9.

The west seems to have plumb given up on the New York Giants ....The other day a Detroit paper printed a story of a New York defeat on the obituary page, directly under the death notices....It will cost the Athletics $800 a head to transport the players by boat through the Panama canal to the new training camp at Anaheim, Cal.

Newark Bears Chalf Up Sixth Consecutive Win as Buffalo Lose

Minor League baseball magnates are beginning to think the showing of their major league "parent" clubs has a lot to do with the way their own clubs make out. For instance, look what's happening to Buffalo and Newark in the international league.

The Bisons were going along at a great clip a few weeks ago and threatened to bump the Jersey City Giants out of the league lead while Newark was down in the depths of the second division. But on top, Newark's Bears had the New York Yankees, who weren't asking for players and could toss an extra hired hand to its minor league affiliates now and then, while the Bisons' working agreement was with Cleveland, which found the going rocky and called in Buffalo's brilliant infield combination of Ray Mack and Lou Boudreau before the International leaguers expected it.

DeShong Called In

Since then Buffalo has had a few costly injuries and after a 3-2 defeat by Jersey City last night wound up 6 1-2 games off the pace in fourth place. The Bears, meanwhile, called upon Jimmy DeShong, recently sent down by the Yanks, to pitch them to a 9-2 triumph over Montreal Royals for their sixth straight victory. They're still in fifth place but only a half game behind Buffalo.

DeShong, making his first start for Newark, gave 10 hits and five walks but called upon his experience when the going was tough to pitch shutout bal lup to the eighth. Walt Judnich and Mickey Witek backed him up with four blows apiece to send in three runs each.

Chief-Wings Square

Syracuse Chiefs and Rochester Red Wings, secand place rivals, wound up their season's series all square as Jack Tising outpitched Si Johnson to give Syracuse an 8-2 win. Rochester managed to hold second by a half game margin, but Johnson missed his when he was belted out in three innings.

Baltimore also finished on even terms with Toronto by belting out an 8-3 victory in their final clash of the season. Nick Etten pounded a two-run homer off Phil Marchildon in the first inning and the young Leaf flinger never recovered. Larry Mutuzak limited the Leafs to five hits.

CEMENTMEN WIN OVER DESERONTO BY 19 TO 5 SCORE

Win First O. A. S. A. Play-Off Game With Apparent Ease

GET 22 HITS

Point Anne "Cementmen" experienced little difficulty winning their first intermediate "C" playdown game in the O.A.S.A. as they disposed of the Deseronto nine by a 19 to 5 score on the home diamond last evening. The homesters scored in every inning except the fifth and eighth, while Deseronto scored three in the fifth and two in the eighth to count all of their runs.

The "Cementmen" garnered 22 base hits, many of the extra base nature, off the deliveries of Green, the Deseronto pitcher, while "Ding" Luffman, hurling for the homesters coasted in easily allowing nine bingles. After scoring three in the first and two in the second, the Cementmen rattled home seven for Deseronto in the eighth.

Lusty Clouting

Art Genereaux with a home run and three other timely hits paced the homesters, as Bennett counted four hits and Gaulin a circuit blow, double and single. Every member of the Point Anne team hit safely, except pitcher Luffman for more than one safety as he counted two singles. Lindsay, the visitors' second baseman, was the only Deseronto batter to fail to hit safely as Luffman limited the visitors to one hit each, with the exception of Frazer, Luffman struck out six. The return game will be played in Deseronto on Saturday. Deseronto booted the ball around for seven errors, while Point Anne had three. The lineups:

Point Anne: Genereaux cf; Whitehead ss; Loft 3b; Green c; Gaulin 1b; Bennett rf; Whalen 2b; Hutchings lf and Luffman p.

Deseronto: Hoppings rf; Frazer 1b; Jackson lf; Hughes ss; Lindsay 2b; Culhane c; Detlor cf; Green p and Brant 3b.

Cannifton Wins League Title For First Time, Defeating Shannonville 6-4 in Final

South Hastings League Pennant Goes to Cannifton After Hectic Six-Game Series

ALWAYS IN PLAY-OFF

Pitcher Jarrell Given Splendid Support by Teammates Who Supply Feature Plays

Foxboro, Aug. 17 (Special)—Congratulations Cannifton! At last they have achieved their fondest desire! Emerging victorious from out of a hectic playoff series against Shannonville, the Cannifton "Sluggers" last night accomplished the ultimate in baseball honors when they took the sixth game of the current playdowns from the 'Hawks' by a 6-4 count to win their first South Hastings League championship.

For seven long years the Cannifton lads have waited for the honor they received last night, and for six of those seven years have been forced to accept elimination from the playdowns as their lot while other teams finishing lower in the standing have gone on to take the silverware. So regular have the Cannifton team finished on top of the heap in the regular playing schedule that the other teams of the loop have long since become resigned to their fate and have almost annually conceded the Cannifton lads the top rung. Finishing first in the regular schedule has been no particular advantage to the Cannifton team, however, as last night marked the first time in the history of the league that the team finishing on top ever went througn to win the championship. Apparently completely unaware of the "jinx" which had been dogging their footsteps, the Cannifton team nevertheless went on to again finish first this year and, by eliminating Shannonville from the playdowns to win the league title, blasted, forever, any thought that a "Jonah" had been following their footsteps.

Naturally enough, however, the team which eventually won the championship last night was a far different team from the original one which lost out to Foxboro back in 1933 when these two teams stacked up in the finals in the first year the South Hastings League operated. Gone were most of the old faces, as old Father Time had taken his toll to account for all but three of the orignials who were with the team on that memorable occasion. And, oddly enough, it remained for what was left of that original lineup to spark the newcomers on to victory over Shannonville in the current series and bring southward that old silver mug which has so long remained in the possession of the two clubs in the northern end of the loop.

Largely Attended

Proving beyond all shadow of a doubt the utter fallacy of ever allowing an outside player to take an active part in a rural baseball league, the attendance at last night's game in Shannonville far surpassed anything ever before witnessed in the league, even before the influx of imported players which so reduced the fans' interest a few years ago. With the entire rosters of both clubs participating in the playoffs this year being comprised of strictly local talent, the fans turned out in unprecedented numbers to cheer the lads on and it is safe to assure that when the baseball season rolls around again next year, the fans will be clamouring for early action in the South Hastings loop.

As for the game last night, it would be grossly unfair to pick out any individual stars as each and every player gave his all to bring honor to his team. Errors there were of course, but they all go to make the ball game and although it was Cannifton's good fortune to be presented with a couple of runs, which just represented their margin of victory, there was also some sparkling plays made by players on both sides to cut short rallys by the opposition.

Cannifton Takes Lead

Juby started on the mound for the homesters and after an error in the first inning had allowed one run by the visitors there was no more scoring until the fourth and it began to look as though that one run lead was going to be all that Cannifton needed as Jarrell was going great guns, only nine batters facing him until the fourth. In the top half of the fourth Cannifton broke away to score three runs and obtain a 4-0 lead as three safe hits and an error ended Juby's sojourn on the mound. Barberstock came in to relieve him and after allowing two more runs in the next frame settled away to pitch shutout ball for the balance of the game. Shannonville cut into Cannigton's lead in their half of the fourth when they got to Jarrell for four safeties to score two runs and added single counters in the sixth and seventh to fall just two runs short of tying the game.

The entire Cannifton outfield came to Jarrell's support to rob Shannonville of several hits, with Farquharson turning in the feature play of the evening when, with two runners aboard he took Hill's line drive to left to end the inning. Dies, in right field for the losers also made a couple of nice catches to pull Juby out of trouble.

Empson and Curley led on the offensive for the winners with Empson getting a brace of singles and Curley a double and a single, with E. Jarrell also conking out a double. Reid and Barberstock went well at the plate for the losers, both getting two singles with Juby helping his own cause by knocking a double.

KINGSTON RINK WINS ANNUAL MIXED BOWLING

21 Mixed Rinks Compete in Successful Lawn Bowling Tourney Here

LOCAL RINKS WIN

Lawn bowlers from all parts of Eastern Ontario competed in the annual mixed rinks tournament at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club yesterday with Frank Newman's Kingston rink winning the major honors of the tournament.

Twenty one rinks, consisting of two gentlemen and two lady players each, vied for the day's laurels in the most successful mixed rink tournament ever sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club. With 84 players in common competition, play opened early and concluded late last night. Twelve of the competing rinks included players from the Belleville Club, Kingston entering three rinks, Madoc two and Campbellford, Tweed, Deseronto and Peterborough one rink each.

Three winners were declared in the first flight of three wins high. The winning rink, that of Skip Frank Newman of Kingston, won major honors with three wins high and a score of 35 plus 18. Mrs. Green, D. Derry and Mrs. Newman were the winning skips players. Second, with three wins high, was the Madoc rink with a score of 35 plus 4, consisting of Jas. Watson, skip, Mrs. Watson, T. Gunn and Miss Beatty. Third, with three wins high and a score of 33 plus one, was the Belleville rink made up of Rod Mitchell, skip, Mrs. Ward, R. Richards and Mrs. O'Connor.

In the lower bracket with two wins high the Belleville rink of Fred Harper, skip, Mrs. Watkin, O. Hales and Mrs. Joss won while with one win high the Belleville rink of Harold Cross, skip, Mrs. Cross, Alf Symons and Mrs. Sandercock won. The low score bracket, with no wins, came the Deseronto rink of D. Stover, skip, Mrs. Young, O. Fitchett and Mrs. Stover were given consolation prizes. Splendid prizes were given the winners in each winning division.

Belleville lawn bowlers won three of the major prizes awarded for the day's competition, winning one set of three wins high, the two win high and the one win matches.

BENEFIT GAME IS SLATED FOR HASTINGS LOOP

Champion Cannifton Nine Play "All-Stars" at Latta Friday

Foxoro, Aug. 17 (Special)—With the Cannifton-Shannonville final series now all past history and for the first time in the history of the league, Cannifton returned as champions of this popular rural league, the next item on the sports' programme and of interest to South Hastings baseball fans, will be the all-star benefit game scheduled for Friday evening over at Latta.

As will be remembered, Gerald Sager, first sacker for the Shannonville nine, had the misfortune to break his leg in the first game of the Latta-Shannonville semi-final series and at the time a benefit game between the ultimate champions of the league and a picked squad from the other teams of the loop was planned to help defray his expenses while convalescing. So with the winner of the loop now decided the boys can get together and gang up on the Cannifton nine to get revenge for past defeats and at the same time be doing an act well worthy of commendation.

Arthur Hall of Latta has been entrusted with the responsibilities of picking the team to stack up against the champions and just who Art has in mind for the various positions on the team is known only to Arthur himself. Undoubtedly the hurling chores will be looked after with Allan Dunning and Ken Peacock available for that important position, to say nothing of Ken Juby and Barberstock of the Shannonville nine. In view of the fact that these two last named lads have just emerged from a tough series with Cannifton, however, it is doubtful if they will see much service. For catching duty, Art will have at his command John Stewart of Foxboro and Houston, while the infield will be chosen from such players as Parks and Hall from the Latta club and Reid, Cook and Hill from Shannonville. With Jack Gowe, Breese and a couple more heavy hitting outfielders it would seem as though Art can field a real formidable squad and one that will give the champions all the opposition they desire.

All that remains is for the fans to sort of get the idea of the thing and if they turn out in anything like the numbers that attended the finals the success of the venture will be assured.

The Dodgers passed the 750,000 mark in home attendance yesterday....Craig Wood, the golfer, thinks he has a coming champ under his wing in Henry Poen the former Duke University star .... The recently released draws of the O.A.S.A. playdowns have proven most favourable towards the City Softball finals for the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy, insomuch as Trenton withdrew from the intermediate "A" playdowns, thereby giving the Shell "Oilers" a full two weeks of idleness in which to play the City League finals. The Point Anne "Cementmen" should have little difficulty in disposing of their first round intermediate "C" rivals, Deseronto, in jig order, following which the Ox Point squad have a bye into the zone finals, which commence on the 31st of the month. However, it looks like softball every night next week, with the City finals commencing Monday. The junior O.A.S.A. playdowns get under way with Belleville at Oshawa no Tuesday next and back here on Thursday, but the big softball show of the week is the Shell "Oilers" versus the league "All-Stars" at the Flats Friday evening in a benefit game for Umpire Josh Maracle. There is much concern over this game, as every player on the selected team is anxious to give Johnnie Bawden and company one decisive trouncing before the O.A.S.A. zone playoffs get under way.

After knocking on the league championship door for practically every year in the existence of the South Hastings League without previous success, the Cannifton "Sluggers" were at last rewarded for their untiring efforts as they defeated the Shannonville 'Hawks' 6 to 4 in a sixth and final league play-off game at the eastern village last night. The current S.H.L. play-offs which saw Cannifton emerge winners and champions, has attracted considerable attention and no doubt this rural league will continue to prosper in years to come. Jarrell, the Sluggers' ace moundsman, bested two Shannonville pitchers to annex the Tummon trophy for the first time last night. Today the new champions are being congratulated from every side upon their achievement which has been so long coming, but doubtless is the more sweet today.

Buddy Gaulin's Point Anne "Cementmen" experienced little difficulty in disposing of Deseronto in their initial O.A.S.A. play-off game winning 19 to 5 last night. The "Cementmen" have a powerful intermediate "C" club and should about win the provincial title in their classification.

Italian sportsmen flew swallows from Turin 79 miles to Rome and clocked them at 137 miles an hour. Man's air speed record is 440.6 miles an hour.

All previous arrangements for play-offs in the Bay of Quinte League were tossed into the discard by President McDougall yesterday when the O.B.A. announced that Belleville and the Air Force had been relegated to an intermediate "B" status. As the picture now stands Napanee and Picton will play-off for the Bay of Quinte honors with the winner meeting the Lake Shore loop winner, between Port Hope and Bowmanville. In the intermediate "B" series, however, Cobourg drew a bye and is now awaiting the result of the Air Force-Belleville series. The decision of the parent body in the matter of Belleville and the Flyers assures every Quinte loop club of a league play-off berth at least. In the meantime Secretary Crossman, Napanee, has called the Quinte League moguls into conference this evening to talk over play-off dates.

Jimmie Courtland, considered an outstanding and potential Canadian Olympic star in the javelni throw, broke his leg at Geraldton, Ont., yesterday. Courtland was being counted on by the Canadian Olympic heads as one of their outstanding threats. He is a Queen's University student employed at the Little Long Lac Mine, where he sustained his injury.

Do you remember when a little man who had a busy year, Henry Armstrong, spent the toughest 15 minutes of his career in the ring one year ago tonight, when he defeated Lou Ambers for the world lightweight boxing crown. It was Henry's third title victory in 10 months. He had previously taken the bantam and featherweight titles.

Victoria Park was the mecca of hundreds of local kiddies yesterday when the Wharf Street Debating Club held its annual picnic and summer frolic. It was a merry day for young Belleville, races on land and in the water were thoroughly enjoyed, featured by the greasy pole walk, a feat that always attracts large crowds, who eagerly awaited the contestants' ducking. Herb Collins, Eddie George and all the club members were busied seeing that all kiddies thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The Belleville Yacht Club supplemented the day's program with sailing races on the bay. Actually it is too bad there are not more such outings for the children of Belleville during the hot sweltering summer days. Along the same lines we find the city playgrounds nearing another summer's activities with their annual inter-grounds field day this afternoon.

The Belleville Lawn Bowling club did itself proud yesterday in its annual mixed rinks tournament, 21 rinks from all parts of the district competing. This makes a total of 84 players in common competition during the day, which is the largest entry of "kitty knockers" to grace the new bowling greens. Belleville rinks won three of the five events, but Frank Newman's Kingston rink was tops.

The Picton intermediates wound up their Bay of Quinte League schedule by beating the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" 10 to 7 yesterday. Al Lait's Airmen outhit the homesters 12 and 9, but Picton ran bases amok. Abbott and Dalnard laboured on the mound for the winners, while Ferrier and "Spider" Webb toiled for the Flyers. Judging from the last few games perhaps it is just as well for Picton, that Belleville and the Air Force have been relegated to intermediate "B" in the provincial playdowns.

Sport Spice — Well the Yankees beat their old ijnx, Dutch Leonard, of the Senators, winning yesterday 4-0....DiMaggio and Rolfe homered and as the Red Sox were idle the Yankees now enjoy a 7 1-2 game lead.....Over in the National loop, however, the Reds, who have been very versatile of late, dropped a 2-1 decision to the Cubs and are only 6 games afront of the Cards, who took both ends of a doubleheader from Pittsburg....Keep an eagle eye on that National League race from here in....They never miss the umpires, that is until they fail to arrive, yesterday the umpire failed to turn up for the Galt-Guelph game, strangely enough the game was postponed, which proves something or other, but what?.... Burgess Whitehead, Giant second baseman of all men, was suspended for breaking training rules yesterday....Which proves one never can tell.

Pinkie George, Des Moines promoter, has bought the contract of Lee Savoldi, St. Paul heavyweight from Mike Gibbons.....There is a humor here Michigan will weaken and name an outsider to referee Postor vs. Louis.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

BOX OF RUBBISH IGNITES

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (CP)—A box of rubbish ignited spontaneously last night to cause a basement fire in two stores on downtown Sparks street.

The flames began under a ladies' wear shop and crept along the ceiling of the ground floor to a men's haberdashery next door. Amount of the damage caused by the smoke and water could not immediately be determined. Two firemen were slightly overcome by the smoke before the flames could be subdued.

The blaze was under control in about an hour.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of doubtful conditions is read from the predominant astral configurations, although affairs may move at a lively pace. It would be well to use much sagacity, especially in the outlay of funds, which are under a perilous aspect. Be wary with strangers and do not run counter to the wishes and methods of employers or those in recognised authority, and all may be turned to good account. This applies to private life also.

Those whose birthday it is may have a fair year, with matters moving at moderate pace, but with certain financial hazards calling for vigilance and acumen. Be cautious with strngers and placate opposition from superiors. Maintain harmony, social and domestic.

A child born on this day will have fair talents, particularly in mental, artistic or professional pursuits. It will be genial, kindly and personally enjoy popularity nad prestige.

Slight Drop in Butter — Eggs Firm

Toronto, Aug. 17.—A further fractional decline in the price of butter was recorded yesterday on the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Cheese also eased slightly, while eggs closed on a firm note.

Although supplies of Ontario butter were light, the market was quiet and draggy all day. Buyers made very little inquiry and first-grade ceramery solids consequently eased to a range of 21¼c to 21½c. One dealer explained that butter consumption was light in Toronto but heavy in Ontario's summer resort areas, and that producers were shipping their stock to centres outside this city. Holders of western butter asked 21¾c pound, but no sales were reported.

Trading in eggs increased, but prices were generally steady. Receipts were somewhat lighter on the local market, but were apparently ample for buyers' requirements. A-medium eggs continued to receive the best inquiry. In the graded section A-large sold at 25c to 26c and A-medium at 24c to 25c.

Montreal Potatoes Recover.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—After two early week slipping sessions potato prices moved up from 10 to 15 cents on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Eggs were again steady with a firmer undertone and receipts moving more readily. Slight weakness marked butter and cheese offerings in extremely quiet trading.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-22¾ cents a pound and solids for 22-22¼. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21¼-21⅜. Receipts: 315 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 10⅜. Quebec white was quoted at 10¼ and colored at 10⅜. Receipts: 2,971 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27 cents a dozen for A-large, 25 for A-medium, 20-21 for A-pullets, 19-20 for B-large, 14½-15 for C. Receipts: 694 cases.

UNKNOWN FIRES SHOT AT TRAIN

Melville, Sask., Aug. 17 (CP)—The firing of a shot at Canadian National Railways passenger train Number One, westbound from Melville, by a person hiding in a clump of bushes at a crossing one mile east of Goodeve Tuesday, is being investigated by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and railway police.

An expressman heard the shot fired as the train roared past the crossing and the impact of the bullet as it hit the baggage car door. Running to the door he opened it to look out and saw a man ducking into the bushes on the north side of the tracks.

At the same time a rock hurled by someone hidden on the south side smashed the window of the dining car.

SAYS IT WOULD MEAN WAR

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador to the United States, said yesterday that any attempt by Germany to incorporate Danzig in the Reich would "mean war."

EMPIRE SUSTAINS WORLD BALANCE

Prof. Wilkinson Says Empire Would be Biggest Booty Ever Offered to Aggressor

Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 17.—(CP)— War might lead to disintegration of the British Empire, Professor B. Wilkinson of the University of Toronto, said last night in an address to the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics.

"The British Empire almost sustains the political equilibrium of the world at the present time", Professor Wilkinson said in his discourse on British Foreign policy. "The Empire is the biggest booty ever offered to an unscrupulous aggression".

A major war would virtually destroy democracy and possibly substitute world chaos, the speaker suggested, declaring the same threatening forces of today had destroyed civilizations in the past.

Duty to Avoid War

Professor Wilkinson said it was the supreme duty of a statesman to avoid war. Collapse of the British Empire, "the greatest Empire since the Roman", would go far "toward destroying democracy throughout the world", he submitted.

Calling Canadian foreign policy "a definite policy of doing very little", Professor Wilkinson declared North Americans should have a greater realization that "if the battle for democracy is lost in Europe it is lost in the world."

Professor Wilkinson called Prime Minister Chamberlain "small-minded and a typical politician" but said he had succeeded at Munich in averting a European war, even though it may have involved betrayal of Czecho-Slovakia.

Appeasement Policy

Analyzing the Chamberlain "appeasement policy" that led to the Munich settlement, Professor Wilkinson claimed Mr. Chamberlain was manoeuvred into yielding to German demands by a set of circumstances outside his control.

"First there was the tremendous desire for peace in Britain, largely due to the hangover of war weariness from 1918. Any Prime Minister in September of last year would have had to reckon with that feeling as a tremendous force. With that went the knowledge that Britain was totally unprepared for war.

Hitler's Stand

"Further, Hitler took his stand on the principle of self-determination of peoples, a fundamentally British tenet. Englishmen were not being asked to fight for the Czechs but for the right of the Czechs to keep the Sudeten Germans from the people of their choice."

But the decisive act, he said, was the telegram of President Roosevelt to European statesmen which said in effect: "Don't fight—negotiate."

"Once Chamberlain had accepted that call to negotiate, he had agreed explicitly to concede territory," Professor Wilkinson asserted.

Militancy Required by Gov'ts

Concluding a series of three addresses to the Institute, Professor Max Lerner of Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., said militancy on the parts of Governments was needed if democracy were to survive.

"It's not going to do us much good if we find ourselves in a concentration camp a few years hence, to say —'Well, anyway, we never gave our government power'," Professor Lerner said.

"Reluctance to give the government power plays into the hands of those unscrupulous groups who want to capture power for their own ends", he asserted. "A government can die without power, and any democracy that hasn't got affirmatives and militancy cannot survive".

GERMAN VETERAN, WIFE, CREMATED AT OWN REQUEST

Dr. Julius Veich and Nobleborn Wife, Refugees from Reich, Suicide

Baltimore, Aug. 17.—(AP) — Twenty-five years ago there was pomp and military fanfaronade when the German nation decorated a twice-wounded officers for gallantry.

Today Dr. Julius Veith and his nobly born wife, refugee-suicides from the Third Reich, were to be cremated without ceremony, by their own wish.

He was chief medical officer of the Crown Prince of Bavaria's Own Regiment. She was a member of the Van Valentinis, noble Bavarian family.

He was past the age limit when the war came, but volunteered. He won the Iron Cross, First Class.

He took up his war-shattered career in the peace that came, and won prominence. Veith was president of the Gottingen Medical Society and one of Germany's leading ophthalmologists.

But his parents were Jewish. In the Nazi Reich, he was stripped of his practice and fled Germany. His wife, purest of Aryans, chose exile with him.

They came to live with their son, a camera salesman here but were unhappy. One son was still in Germany. Dr. Veith, seventy-one, was too old to make a new career.

Tuesday night, arm in arm, they turned on the gas in their room.

"We are going to seek happiness in eternity together", wrote the war hero and his wife. "Have courage". They signed it "mama" and "papa", in the German fashion.

FRENCH BOMBERS VISIT ENGLAND

Compulsory War Risk Insurance on Real Estate Will be Considered

London, Aug. 17—(CP)— Great Britain met war talk today with further defence preparations and calm insistence that the European situation so far called for no initiative from the Anglo-French anti-aggression bloc.

While diplomatic activity lagged, the Royal Air Force and anti-aircraft defences were kept on the alert. French bombers engaged in an allied nations "reprisal" for British air "attacks" on France — all part of their reciprocal training program.

At Belfast H.M.S. Formidable, third of a series of aircraft carriers being built under the British naval program, was launched and at Southampton the first 500 men called up for naval training under new conscription law reported for duty.

War Risk Insurance

Meanwhile, an announcement of plans for national registration of manpower in event of war was followed by a disclosure that the Association of British Chambers of Commerce had drafted a plan for government-sponsored, compulsory war-risk insurance of real estate to be considered after parliament convenes.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax resumed his holiday in Yorkshire after talks with the Polish and Turkish Ambassadors. His departure was taken as emphasizing the British view that the Danzig situation is "serious but not alarming." Official circles attributed the flood of rumors to what they called Germany's "war of nerves."

The British government, these sources said, expects "every imaginable rumor of imminent war or possible peace will go the round of the capitals" while "increasing German pressure" is put on Poland in an attempt to force Danzig concessions.

French Bombers Visit England

Paris, Aug. 17—(AP)—More than 200 French bombers and fast sky fighters "raided" population centres of England last night in reciprocal Anglo-French warplane tests and returned to their bases today reporting all objectives had been reached.

An air ministry communique said the planes "struck" at London, Liverpool, Bristol, Birmingham, Manchester and Oxford.

British anti-aircraft batteries were trained on the French raiders outside London.

Two squadrons of fighters preceded the bombing planes across the English Channel.

The communique said the raid—the first made by the French following up British flights over France in July—was in cooperation with the Royal Air Force which tested out its defences against the invaders.

Increase of Demands by Germany

The Daily Herald (Labor) said: "Germany has increased her demands. The German claim is now not only the return of a 'purely German city' but for annexation of a purely Polish province. And this on the preemptory ground that 'German wishes' must be obeyed."

The News Chronicle (Liberal) said that "in London nothing is known of any settlement proposals from any quarter and the reports are believed to be part of a deliberate move by the axis in the war of nerves."

"We repeat again, everyone wishes to see the Danzig dispute settled by free negotiation," this paper said. "But it is essential that we should keep a close watch on all so-called compromises to make sure they do not in fact 'sell the pass' as the Munich compromise did."

RIVER FLOODS SHANGHAI STREET

Tientsin, Aug. 17—(AP)—Victoria Road, the main business street in the British concession, was a foot under water which gushed from sewers today as the Hai River rose at a steady rate, overflowing the British Bund at one point.

Farm lands beyond the country club were under six feet of water. The Japanese drafted one man from each Chinese family to work on the dikes. West of the Chinese city villagers voluntarily labored to save the embankments, plugging breaches with sandbags.

SAYS INVESTIGATION NOT YET CLOSED

Toronto, Aug. 17—(CP)—Attorney-General G. D. Conant said today investigation is not closed into the death of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley, malted milk heiress who died at the home here of W. Perkins Bull, prominent lawyer and historian, July 6, 1938.

Mr. Conant declined to make a statement as to what progress is being made.

MORATORIUM OF 30 DAYS URGED

New York Man Sponsors 'War Moratorium' and Plea to Governments

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 17—(AP) — Hamilton Fish of New York, sponsoring a 30-day "war moratorium" toward settlement of international disputes by negotiation, urged today a "strong united plea to the governments of the world, including the Vatican."

Placing his resolution before the Interparliamentary Union Congress Fish, member of the United States House of Representatives, said, "If the Danzig and Polish agitation continues the slighest spark may start a world conflagration."

He added, "we should shirk our obligations to humanity, our duty as representatives of millions of free people if we join the defeatist attitude towards peace.....

Fish, a Republican, emphasized he was acting as a private individual.

French Treat it Roughly

Paris, Aug. 17—(AP)—Hamilton Fish's suggestion for a 30-day truce in European power politics was treated roughly today by French newspaper commentators.

"His name is Fish," said the newspaper L'Ordre, "isn't that clear enough? The fish has bitten."

Other newspapers commented that Fish was given a free airplane ride by Germany's Foreign Minister and declared that he was duped by the German and Italian propaganda machine into floating a trial balloon. Fish flew to Oslo from Germany in a plane lent by Joachim von Ribbentrop.

WORLD NOT SAFE

"The success of a democracy depends upon every one realizing his or her responsibility to it, thinking of his duties and forgetting for a time his rights," he added. "If he recognizes no duties towards the form of government to which he is ready enough to pay lip service and to shout for, the day may come when he will lose his rights by dangers from without or within." He believed Fascism was now a far more serious threat to Great Britain than Communism.

'Radiation Sickness' Cure is Announced By Canadian M.D.

Chicago, Aug. 17 (AP)—A cure by a Canadian doctor for "radiation sickness," which has been a major obstacle in giving cancer patients X-ray treatments, was announed today by the American Medical Association.

The discovery was reported in the association's journal by Dr. J. Wallace Graham of Toronto.

Dr. Graham found that nicotinic acid, a form of the vitamin B complex, proved "definitely effective" in relieving the illness in 74.3 per cent of 70 patients to whom it was given.

Of the 70 cases, 27-1 per cent showed "excellent results" and 47.2 per cent "good." A "fair result" was obtained in 14.3 per cent and 11.4 per cent the drug failed.

Cause of the sickness, which Dr. Graham said occurred in about 27 per cent of the X-ray patients, is unknown. The untoward reaction has been a "major problem of roentgen therapy," he said.

"The GLASS SLIPPER"

by MIGNON G. EBERHART

CHAPTER ONE

It was Steven who talked of the glass slipper. That was the night the thing began; the night Rue Hatterick had her first intimation of disaster; the night of November eighteenth. That was the night Flagstad sang Isolde, the night of the Bachelors and Benedicts ball; a cold, drearily rainy night in Chicago, with the pavement slick and shining with reflected lights from the towers of Chicago's near north side.

Rue gave herself a last glance in the mirror and went to the window and pushed aside the gray taffeta curtains which had been selected, as everything else in the house had been selected, by her predecessor, the first Mrs. Hatterick. Brule had not come home to dinner, and she had not yet heard him arrive, and they were going to be late. She looked down into the street below—or tried to look—but the black windowpane only reflected herself in her shimmering silver-shot gown.

How many times had she seen herself reflected just so in the dark glitter of a window against the still night. With startling clearness the composite recollection of many nights came to her; anxious, muted nights in a great hospital; herself raising or lowering a window, pausing to put her cheek for an instant's rest against the cold glass—and to see herself then, as now, as another woman. Then her fair hair was not so faultlessly done but instead was pulled back smoothly to a knot below her starched, trim white cap; her nurse's uniform was white and crisp and trimly tailored, refreshingly astringent in memory and in contrast to the clinging artful loveliness of the gown she now wore; her face then was scrubbed and bare of any suggestion of make-up. For the chief of staff, the great and famous surgeon, the veritable emperor of that small, intensely circumscribed and terribly important world, Dr. Brule Hatterick, had frowned on make-up on the faces of his nurses.

But he liked it on his wife's face—softly and glamorously applied. He didn't like the serious, thoughtful expression her beautifully planed face with its firm generous chin and curving red mouth was all too likely to take on. It annoyed him. He wanted her to be gay and laughing and, though he didn't say it, frivolous. A doll, pleased with the pretty things he gave her instead of love. A person who didn't really matter and thus wouldn't trouble his conscience.

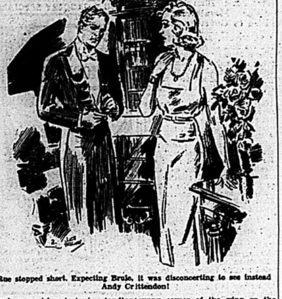
Not that she had any right to expect his love; that had been clearly understood, and it was outside their agreement. But it had been a serious business, stepping into another woman's place, trying to fulfill all the duties that had fallen to the lot of the well-known and socially prominent first Mrs. Hatterick, Crystal Hatterick, whose beautiful portrait still hung in Brule's library.

A little gust of impatience touched Rue, and with one of the impulsive gestures she was learning to control, she picked up long white gloves and small, jeweled bag and turned to leave her room—the big silken bedroom which had been in its pseudo-Victorian luxuriousness a triumph of the decorator employed and assisted by Crystal Hatterick.

The first time Rue had ever entered that room she had hated the soft, enveloping scent of roses that permeated it; she still hated it and could not entirely dispossess it. It clung to the room like a ghostly reminder of Crystal's presence.

A French screen, all cupids and Fragonard-like ladies and gilt, stood before the door.

Rue, pausing, remembered sharply and clearly the first time she'd entered that room; she saw herself standing on the threshold, a little hesitant because it was the great Mrs. Brule Hatterick she had come to nurse; because she had been selected (from all the nurses at the hospital) by Dr. Brule Hatterick to care for his wife. She'd had a panicky instant, standing there in the shadow of the great screen, her blue nurse's cape still over her shoulders; her little leather bag in her hand. What would Mrs. Hatterick be like? Would she be a difficult patient? Would she, Rue, succeed in the exacting eyes of the great Brule Hatterick? It had taken all her courage to step around that screen and go to Crystal, ill, white, hard to please, waiting for her in that great soft bed.



Rue stopped short. Expecting Brule, it was disconcerting to see instead Andy Crittendon!

She had failed because Crystal Hatterick had died. Yet she hadn't failed in Brule Hatterick's eyes; for a short ten months later he had married her.

Married her and brought her as mistress to that house she had first entered as a nurse. Crystal's house.

The autumn had not been so difficult; they'd been at camp; she'd been able to fall in with the routine of the household even if she had not quite grasped the reins of it from the capable and determined hands of the domestic staff Crystal had hired and trained. Steven had helped, quietly and kindly. Madge had been her main problem but she had known Madge would be; it was mainly because of Madge, Brule had told her in the curiously frank interview, that he wanted her, Rue, for a wife.

But now it was winter; the social season was beginning; Brule depended upon her to carry on exactly the same life Crystal had balanced so easily and lightly in her poised and certain hands. But Crystal had been born in that very house; it had been her money and her position that had started Brule on his meteor-like flight upward. She had been considerably older than Brule, she had known all the people who could help him; she had known all the affiliations, all the loyalties, all the age-estabished feuds; she had known who counted and who didn't, she had made no mistakes. Rue had all that to learn, and she must learn it, for Brule's position demanded it, and Madge, now fifteen, later must be suitably launched.

Well, Alicia would help. Alicia Pelham, who had been Crystal's best friend and was to be married to Steven.

In the hall she met Steven, and he paused to look at her.

"Going to the opera?"

"Yes."

"And to the ball later?"

"Yes."

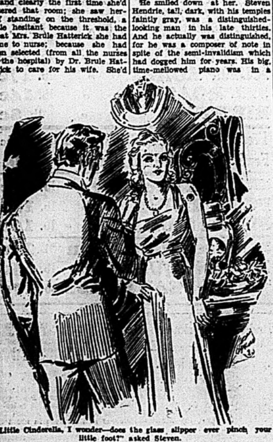
He smiled down at her. Steven Hendrie, tall, dark, with his temples faintly gray, was a distinguished-looking man in his late thirties. And he actually was distinguished, for he was a composer of note in spite of the semi-invalidism which had dogged him for years. His big, time-mellowed piano was in a sunny corner of the wing on the first floor which had been built for his work room; the repetitious, clear notes from the piano were so constantly and familiarly a part of the fabric of the household that you were almost unconscious of the sound.

Crystal's brother—or stepbrother was it?—and Brule's patient, was a fixture in the Hatterick household. He had never married, though his engagement to Alicia Pelham was a long-standing affair. Crystal probably liked having him there, especially when he became famous. And after Crystal's death he had stayed on with them, for it was his home as much as it was Brule's, since Crystal had willed it to them jointly. He bore his share of the expenses, so he was in no way a pensioner on Brule's bounty. Rue liked him, for he'd been her friend from the first. She never knew exactly how much he knew of her curious relationship with Brule, but she thought he guessed a great deal, for he was extremely sensitive. And, specially lately, he had befriended her in many small ways. Steven, indeed, made her life bearable. And Steven could always manage Madge. She answered the smile in his deep-set, strangely luminous brown eyes with cheerful friendliness.

"You are very splendid," he said.

"Thank you." Rue looked down at the expertly suave lines of her gown.

It was then that quite suddenly Steven's eyes sobered. He touched the dress lightly with his strong, musician's fingers. And he said rather gently: "Little Cinderella, I wonder—does the glass slipper ever pinch your little foot?"



"Little Cinderella, I wonder—does the glass slipper ever pinch your little foot?" asked Steven.

CHAPTER TWO

Cinderella. It was an apt analogy of course, so far as it went.

She was mistress of that house and all its luxury and beauty. In the hall below a maid waited with a dark sable wrap of incredible softness to place around Rue's shoulders. Outside a motor was waiting, long and shining, with a uniformed chauffeur at the wheel.

A year ago, thought Rue with a strange little clutch at her heart, she had scrambled for a place on the crowded elevated; had clung to a swaying strap, had fought her way through crowded streets. Curiously there was a touch of sadness in the thought. She ought to be happy. Married to the chief of staff, the fashionable young Mrs. Hatterick—jewels, gowns with the labels of famous dressmakers, furs—everything a girl could want.

"No," she said, avoiding Steven's eyes. "It doesn't pinch. Is Madge downstairs, do you know?"

It was a rebuff. Steven's eyes deepened a little. He said coolly: "You would never tell if it did. Yes, Madge is still downstairs, I think. Do you want to see her?"

"I thought I'd show her my dress. But—I'm not sure Brule has come yet."

"He hasn't." Steven looked at his watch. "I'm afraid you're going to be very late. I expect he was detained with a patient. Don't mind being late; it will only give Brule a chance to show you off in all your glory. There's nothing like entering a box in the middle of the overture for getting the concerted gaze of all the opera glasses in the house. And I must say you'll do him credit. It's your first public appearance, isn't it?"

"I—yes."

"Don't worry. You're very beautiful. Here's Madge now."

She came up the stairway, eyes lowered and pretending to be unconscious of Rue and Steven standing at the top of the steps. She was a living, feminine reproductio nof Brule; lithe and compact and trim, with ruddy cheeks and wide, ruthless jaws, masked only a little by the youthful roundness of her face. Her thick hair was cut long and fell on her shoulders in a dark mane; red mouth was straight and a little sulky; even her square small hands were suggestive of strength.

She said nothing. Steven spoke, bridging the gap between Rue and Madge as he had done so often in the past two months.

"Isn't she lovely, Madge?"

Madge stopped. She wore a simple dinner gown with a little-girl white collar; she looked demure, if sullen; but then she lifted her thick long eyelashes and gave Rue an altogether unchildish look.

"It is a beautiful gown," she said coolly and added with studied rudeness, "My father chose it, didn't he, Rue?"

"I chose it," said Rue. "But I hope Brule likes it."

"It must be nice," said Madge, "to have so much money to spend. You never had it before, did you?"

"Madge," said Steven quickly and sharply, "don't be silly and childish."

Madge whirled abruptly away and went quickly up the second flight of stairs without another word, and Steven turned hopelessly to Rue. "I'm sorry, Rue," he said. "She's got dreadful manners and a worse disposition. She looks like Brule, but she's exactly like Crystal."

"Hush, she'll hear you....I don't blame the child. It can't be easy to see another woman taking your mother's place. She loved her mother."

Madge's own door closed. Steven said slowly: "Madge is too young and too selfish to love anything. Don't mind her, Rue. She'll come around."

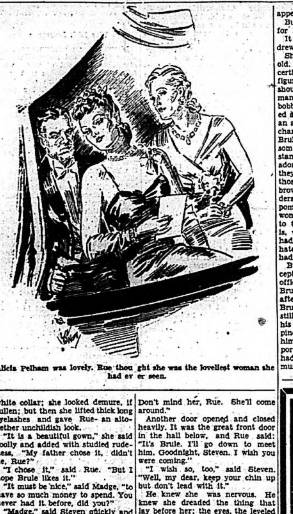
Another door opened and closed heavily. It was the great front door in the hall below, and Rue said: "It's Brule. I'll go down to meet him. Goodnight, Steven. I wish you were coming."

"I wish so, too," said Steven. "Well, my dear, keep your chin up but don't lead with it."

He knew she was nervous. He knew she dreaded the thing that lay before her; the eyes, the leveled opera glasses and lorgnettes, the whispers. That's the new Mrs. Hatterick. The nurse he married, you know, after Crystal died. So soon after, too. They say she was the nurse who took care of Crystal when she died. How young she is! Well, you never know.

She wondered if any of them would be kind.

Steven took her hand in an encouraging gesture, touched it gently with his lips, and Rue smiled her gratitude and went down the curving stairway, clinging a little to the polished railing, her short train swishing gently on the steps. Would Brule be pleased with her appearance?



Alicia Pelham was lovely. Rue thought she was the loveliest woman she had ever seen.

But it wasn't Brule who waited for her in the library.

It was Andy Crittendon. Dr. Andrew Crittendon.

She stopped short on the threshold. Expecting Brule, it was disconcerting to see instead a tall, lean figure with youthfully graceful shoulders and blond hair. How many hundreds of times had she bobbed to her feet when he entered a hospital room, swiftly, yet with an appearance of cool leisure and a charming smile as was his way. Brule was reverenced by the nurses, sometimes hated, always feared, instantly obeyed. But Andy was adored; they hung on his words; they invented excuses for seeking those words. He was young, his eyebrows had a humorous lift; his orders were terse and brisk and not pompous. And he had a way with women, a charm that went straight to the nurses' hearts. Except, that is, with Rue. She hated men who had a way with women. And she hated Andy Crittenden after she had nursed Crystal.

But he was like a son to Brule except in years; he shared Brule's offices; he had been from the first Brule's protege and friend. Even after Crystal's death and the things Brule must have guessed. Brule still was Andy's best friend. He sent his patients, he permitted Andy to pinch-hit for him when Brule himself had other and more important irons in the fire; if Brule had a confidant, Rue thought, it must be Andy Crittenden. Brule, then, was as sensitive to Andy's charm as any of Andy's fluttering female patients. Rue had nursed for Andy as she had for Brule, and she gave him grudgingly a professional respect. And because of Brule she'd had to accord him a surface friendliness.

But why was he here? And where was Brule?

CHAPTER THREE

"Ah, there you are. I was waiting for you," said Andy as Rue came into the room toward him. Odd how a beautiful gown gave you poise and an ability to appear gracious whether you felt gracious or not. "For me?"

He was ill at ease. He said: "Yes, of course. Didn't Brule telephone?"

Andy always knew more of Brule's affairs than she, his wife, knew. Was it possible that she was jealous of Andy? No, certainly not. She had other and fully sufficient reasons for her hatred.

He noted her hesitation. He said quickly: "I expect he didn't have time. He was hurrying off. He said he had a patient. He meant to telephone to you himself. He can't make it tonight. He—he sent me instead. If you don't mind."

"Thank you. It's kind of you. But I think I won't go tonight. I—I didn't really feel up to it anyway. I—was only going because Brule wanted me to go. I——"

"I want you to go," he said abruptly. "There's a special reason. I've got to talk to you."

Later, in the warm motor, purring quietly along Michigan Boulevard, she wondered a little that she had given in so easily. Was it habit because she had for five years obeyed Brule and obeyed Andy's least and smallest order? Was it because for the moment that she was now Mrs. Brule Hatterick, enviable in her security, in her luxury, in her position?

Andy, beside her, took off his opera hat, smoothed it thoughtfully and replaced it. His white scarf came up to his chain his profile was clear in the half-light. From the river below, lost in the darkness, a freight boat tooted hoarsely. Andy leaned over and rolled up the glass between the tonneau and the front seat where Kendal, the chauffeur sat, straight-necked and imperturbable.

How well Andy knew the car! How instantly his gloved hand had found the correct lever when he closed the window!

How many times, Rue thought, had Andy, top-hatted and white-tied and correct, escorted Crystal?

She wondered what he wanted to say to her. Evidently he didn't want the chauffeur to overhear. It was something about Brule, of course.

Suddenly he said in the semi-darkness: "I think we'd better go to the opera, if only for the first act. Then we can leave and go somewhere we can talk. Unheard."

Rue turned with a jerk.

"What is wrong, Andy? Is it—have I been neglecting Brule?"

Highlights of the Royal Menu Contest

1. Mrs. R. R. Stirrett of Swift Current, Sask., who planned the best-balanced, most typically Canadian meal in the "Plan a Supper for Royalty" contest. Sponsored by the millers of Robin Hood Flour.
2. Mayor Croll of Windsor, Ontario, and Robin Hood executives at presentation of second prize cheque for $100.00 to Miss Lillian I. MacKay, 1668 Goyeau St., Windsor.

4. Mayor Taylor of Swift Current presenting cheque for $200.00 and the sterling silver cup to Mrs. Stirrett at Memorial Park, Swift Current.
5. Miss Jessie Read and Miss Marie Holmes, two of the menu contest judges examining some of the thousands of entries.

The tremendous enthusiasm shown by women all over Canada was a striking tribute to the timeliness and real educational value of this unusual contest.

Here are twenty of Canada's finest small bore marksmen shown shooting for the famous Lord Dewar International Trophy in the match which preceded the D. C. R. A. Annual Prize Meet being held this week at Connaught Ranges, Ottawa. The foremost small bore event in the world, the trophy is competed for annually by Canada, Great Britain, New Zealand, Australia, South Africa, India and the United States, teams being made up from each country's best .23 rifle shots irrespective of age or sex. The crack Canadian marksmen shown above are: Team Captain A. W. Seaman, Montreal; Lieut. J. Boe, Toronto; Capt. A. S. Boa, Montreal; Lieut. S. Johnson, Calgary; Geo. Gray, Montreal, D. Rae, Montreal; E. Gagne, Montreal; J. J. Naylor, Toronto; Lieut. E. Cowan, Ottawa; M. J. M. Watson, Toronto; E. J. Burke, Montreal; D. E. Miller, Granby, Que.; A. B. Young, Toronto; A. Stafford, Toronto; J. P. Allan, J. F. Peacock, Toronto; M. R. Atkinson, Streetsville, Ont.; H. Nurse, Norval, Ont.; J. R. Edmunds, Medicine Hat, Alta.; T. L. Jamieson, Montreal.

Canada has yet to win the trophy which, since it was first at stake in 1909, has been won three times by Great Britain and twenty-seven times by the United States, defending champions. While Canada's official score in the 1939 match will not be known until the targets have been checked in London, England, the unofficial score made by the twenty marksmen shown above who shot forty rounds each over 30 and 100 yard ranges was 7836 x 8000.

Insert is H. Nurse of the Norval Rifle Club who, with G. Gray headed the list scoring 396 x 400.

POLICE COURT

The largest list of cases ever presented in a local traffic court was handled by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's special traffic court at the Court House this morning.

Twenty persons were fined for excessive speeding. Motorcycle Patrolmen Sam Ervine and Harry Caldwell preferred the charges. Not a single plea of "not guilty" was heard during the entire proceedings.

"I can't see where there has been any proof of neglect on the part of this man, and thereby dismiss the case", His Worship stated when passing judgment in a case that saw Ross Sweet, Thurlow, charged with leaving the scene of an accident, which occurred some weeks ago north of Belleville on Highway No. 37, following an accident when Sweet's car left the road. The evidence had been heard in a previous court, His Worship dismissing the charge today.

Fred Kyle, Belleville, was convicted of reckless driving and fined $10 and costs and his driving rights were restricted for two years. The case arose out of an accident west of Belleville recently, when a car driven by Kyle was in head-on collision with another vehicle.

Leonard Lockwood was also fined ten dollars and costs on a similar charge arising out of an accident, which occurred on Boardman's Hill on Highway No. 14, on July 22nd., last. Lockwood's driving permit was cancelled for three months.

Lloyd Rennick, Peterborough, who was sentenced to serve one year in the Reformatory after being convicted of the theft of a motor car at Napanee, yesterday, appeared in today's local court charged with the theft of gasoline from a Milltown service station. Following a plea of guilty Rennick was given a concurrent sentence with that of yesterday's term.

B. C. Donnan K.C., conducted the prosecutions in all cases.

Gannochy Lodge, Edzell, Scotland, Aug. 15.—(CP)—The King and Queen enjoyed an outdoor picnic lunch today as guests of J. P. Morgan, the banker.

KUHN QUIZZED

Indications were that members of these groups would be called before the committee when Kuhn and his aides in the German-American Bund have been questioned.

Kuhn, talking with newspapermen after yesterday's hearing, said his examination had been "very fair" aside from a clash with representative Joe Starnes (Dem.-Alabama) in which the two nearly came to blows.

Almost at Blows

Starnes, a lieutenant in France in 1918, drew an outburst from Kuhn, a machine gunner on the other side of the lines, when he asked:

"What connection have you with the German government?"

"Absolutely no connection whatsoever," replied Kuhn.

"Are not the aims of your organization identical with the aims of the National Socialist (Nazi) organization headed by Mr. Hitler?"

"That's an absolute lie, a flat lie," Kuhn sputtered.

Starnes, his face flushed, plunged through a crowded row of photographers and reporters toward the witness chair, then suddenly stopped.

"Don't call me a liar" he shouted. By that time, a big policeman jumped between him and Kuhn and the committee member returned to his place.

Kuhn declared there was no connection between the present German government and the American Bund and said he was against Nazzism for the United States. He said, however, he had visited Hitler and admired him.

WOOD ASHES WORTH MONEY IN OLD DAYS

Gananoque, Ont., Aug. 17—(CP)—William Dungan, veteran engineer of the Ferry Champion, plying between Gananoque and Clayton, N.Y., yesterday recalled the time when wood ashes were a valuable commodity along the St. Lawrence river.

"In the old days the boats were fued with wood," Dungan said. "I can remember burning 110 cords of wodo a week on the Alexandria.

"Ashes were at a premium and the firemen used to save the furnace ashes, put them in barrels and sell them at money in those days and sometimes there would be thirty barrels."

Berlin Sees Peaceful Solution

Despite military precautions, the opinion prevailed among observers that a Danzig-Pomorze solution would be a bloodless one.

Germany stood ready for any emergency. Preparedness measures that may go into history as the most extensive of their kind were being completed.

Western fortifications facing France have been pronounced impregnable by Hitler and Air Minister Hermann Goering. The region along the Moravian-Polish border in the south is being fortified swiftly.

Residents at Gleiwitz, on Poland's southwestern border, said fresh German troops "in large numbers" have arrived there within the last week. Work on troop emplacements on the German side of the border was reported.

To the north, in an area of Germany facing Pomorze in the vicinity of Polish Bydgoszez (Formerly called Bromberg), army crews were stringing a network of communication wires, using existing poles and tree.

The Bad Dream

GERTRUDE Von BERNUTH

It was a stormy winter night. The wind blew a gale, the rain came down in torrents, and Cynthia Blake was all alone in the Long Island house.

Cynthia didn't like being alone, and on a night such as this she hated it. Especially since it had recently been in all the papers that David had gotten a fifty thousand dollar executor's fee from the Dodge estate. That made her nervous. But she lighted a log fire and settled down beside it with her book, hoping against hope that the time would pass quickly. David would be home by 11.30 anyhow.

Eight o'clock, nine o'clock—surely that clock must be slow!—ten o'clock—and the telephone rang. Cynthia sprang to answer it.

"I'd like to speak to Mrs. David Blake." It was a man's voice, business-like, yet rather sauve.

"This is Mrs. Blake" said Cynthia.

"Oh! Well, Mrs. Blake, I'm afraid I have some disturbing news for you."

"Yes?" said Cynthia, striving hard for self-control. Something had happened to David! "What is it?" she asked faintly.

"Er—Mr. Blake has had an accident." Cynthia gave one cry of anguish and then forced herself to listen.

"Mr. Blake was on his way home in a taxi, and his car skidded on Queensboro bridge. I happened to be driving by and stopped to see what had happened. Mr. Blake isn't seriously hurt, but they insisted upon taking him to Bellevue for examination and treatment. His one worry seemed to be about his wife, so I told him that I'd phone you. In fact, I told him that I'd gladly take you in to Belelvue, if you cared to go."

"Oh, would you? That's awfully kind of you!" cried Cynthia. Her one wish was to get to David, darling David. That was all that counted.

"How soon can you be ready Mrs. Blake?" asked the voice.

"In five minutes! Oh you're sure that my husband's not badly hurt?" she implored. "You're telling me the truth, aren't you?"

"Mr. Blake is not badly hurt. He may have a broken rib or two, but —"

"Come on, come on, cut it out," broke in a rough voice. "We ain't got much . . ." then silence. as if a hand had been suddenly placed over the mouthpiece. Then:

"That was some one who wants this booth, Mrs. Blake. I'll be there inside of fifteen minutes. Good-by."

As Cynthia put the receiver back on the hook, she was puzzled. Her fear about David seemed to have vanished. She began to be her usual cool-headed self. That other voice, so rough and snarling. "Come on, come on, cut it out. We—"

Cynthia raced upstairs to the extension phone beside her bed.

"Pennsylvania-6-3500," she said speaking into the mouth piece again."Hello, hello, is this the Bar association? Is Mr. Blake there this evening—Mr. David Blake? He was to be in conference with—"

"Yes. Mr. Blake is here. He's in room 510. I'll connect you with him if you wish."

"If you please," said Cynthia.

"Mr. Blake, please," said the voice. And then David's voice saying hello.

"Dave is that you?"

"Certainly it's I. "What's up?"

"And are you all right?"

"All right? Of course I'm all right. What's the matter with you? I'm just starting for home."

'O. K" said Cynthia, and hung up the receiver.

"Operator, I want the police," she said, taking down the receiver again.

"I'll connect you," said the operator, Her voice sounded excited.

"Po station, One Hundred and ninth precinct. What is it?" asked a man's voice.

"Officer," said Cynthia. "This is Mrs. David Blake, at 20 Waybridge road, Bayside, Long Island. I have just had a phone call from a stranger who tells me that my husband has had an automobile accident and wants me to come to him in Bellevue hospital. The man said he would be here in fifteen minutes to take me to my husband. I have since located my husband by telephoning and he's perfectly all right. But I thought, if the man comes, I'd like to have the police."

"Humph! A snatch! Well, have some one there inside of three minutes, lady. Don't be scared. Take it easy."

Cynthia hung up the receiver with fingers that trembled. That was that. Now what? She sat tense listening for sounds outside, and finally heard a car coming up the road. Which is it, she wondered, the 'snatcher' or the police? She shivered a little.

Just then the telephone rang again.

"This is Dave again," said her husband's voice. I'm phoning from the Long Island station. Is anything wrong out there? I'm worried."

Suddenly Cynthia heard a commotion outside, and a shot rang out. "'S all right, I dropped him," shouted a voice. "Where's the other one? Did he get away?"

"He won't get far. I blew his front tire, and the other boys are just coming up the road. They'll get him."

"Cynthia!" shouted David. "Is anything the matter? You're acting awfully queer. Why did you all me at the Bar association?"

"Oh, I fell asleep by the fire and had a bad dream," said Cynthia. "Tell you about it when you get home."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on my front steps waiting for something to happen, and some man stopped going passed saying, Hello there, little Smittie.

Meaning me, and I didn't say anything on account of my name not being Smittie, and the man said, What's a matter, isn't that your name?

No, I said, and the man said, O, that's right, I slipped up a little, you're Jonesie.

No I'm not, either, I said, and he said, Well now that's a queer one, because I'm a mind reader and it never takes me more than 2 guesses to tell a person's name, unless maybe it's a long name with a lot of sillables like Hockindinker, it isn't Hockindinker is it?

No. I said, and he said, That's what I thought. I know, it's McGinty, he said.

No it's not, I said, and he said, It must be, you're fooling me, how are you going to prove it's not McGinty?

Because it's Potts, that's how, I said, and he said, By hicky so it is, that's a hard one I admit. Go in and tell your mother I'd like to speak to her, will you, Pottsie? he said.

Wich I did, and ma came to the door and the man said, Good afternoon, Mrs. Potts, my name is Bunnerman.

How do you do? ma said, and he said, Very well, thank you, can I intrist you in a special group plan for 6 leeding magazines?

Yes indeed just as soon as you find the other 2 young men who intristed me in group plans and disappeared for all time to my cost and sorrow and no magazines, you can fool some of the people all of the time, but I'm different, ma said.

And the man went away looking sorry he came ma saying. Now I wonder how he got my name?

Me not saying on account of ma not having asked me personly.

FIND NO SIGN OF LOUIS LEPKE

Provincial Police of District Search for U.S. Gangster Near Kaladar

As Ontario Provincial Police threw a dragnet over the entire province seeking Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, named by the United States authorities as Public Enemy No. 4, Provincial Police from the Belleville Detachment, No. 8, O.P.P., swung into rapid action as reports were rife that Buchalter was said to have been seen in the vicinity of Kaladar and on Provincial Highway No. 7 early last evening.

Sergeant H. C. Thompson and Constable W. K. Smith hastened to Kaladar seeking the possible apprehension of the U.S. man, upon whose head a price tag of $30,000 was placed by the U.S. Federal Police recently. Provincial authorities have not as yet discarded the theory that Buchalter is seeking refuge in Ontario, this report being received from the United States G-Men earlier in the week.

Thomas Dewey, head of the U.S. Federal Police, was contacted from Provincial Police headquarters in Toronto yesterday and a complete description of Buchalter was later given all O.P.P. headquarters. Toronto Inspector Frank Gardner stated that the American is a man 42 years of age, 5 feet 5½ inches tall and weighing about 170 pounds.

Information of such a person should be immediately communicated with the nearest police officer. Sergeant Thompson and Constable Smith found no traces of any person bearing Buchalter's description in or near Kaladar, however.

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP)—Police said here today they thought there was little chance Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, United States criminal, was in Ontario, but expected a flood of tips from citizens hungry for the $30,000 reward placed on Buchalter's capture.

Newspapermen arrived ahead of police yesterday at Barrie as the police made a "surprise" visit to the district after one cottager reported he was suspicious of a neighbor. The clue proved fruitless.

Buchalter, rated No. 4 among United States public enemies, is wanted in New York City. His photograph has been on file for weeks at ports of entry. Police said he would have difficulty in entering Canada. New York police said yesterday they had no reason to believe Buchalter is in Canada.

MURDER CHARGE DROWNING SEQUEL

Tug Watchman Says He Heard Two Men Quarreling and Later a Splash

Vancouver, Aug. 17 (CP)—Nelson Maracle, 38-year-old second engineer of the tugboat Clayburn, faces a murder charge in connection with the drowning early yesterday of Kenneth Cassidy, the tug's first engineer.

William Morris, watchman on another tugboat tied up in Burrard Inlet, Vancouver's harbor, told police he heard two men apparently quarreling about three a.m. yesterday. Later he heard a splash and someone shouted, "I can't swim." Morris went out in a dinghy and hauled Cassidy from the water but he failed to recover consciousness.

Morris told police he had missed his street car downtown and walked back to his tug, arriving about 3 a.m. He was reading in bed, he said, when he heard two men arrive in an automobile and start walking along the wharf.

Watchman's Story

"They passed within a few feet of where I was sitting in my cabin" Morris related. "One man said: 'That was a dirty trick you did on me.'"

Morris said he could hear the men, apparently quarrelling as they walked past.

Then he heard a splash and a cry: "I can't swim."

"Drown, you ——, drown," Morris said the other man cried.

The watchman went to investigate and saw a man threshing about in the chill water of the inlet. He said he threw him a lifebelt and when the tide swept it past reach of the struggling man, Morris jumped into an eight-foot dinghy and rowed out to the spot.

Grasps Man By Hair

Morris said he arrived just as the man sank beneath the surface, the bow of the boat nu[illegible] [illegible] body.

The watchman said he grasped the man's hair and finally managed to haul him into the boat, rowed to shore and called the fire department inhalator crew.

Police reports said Cassidy and a companion had been drinking during the night. They said investigation showed a bruise over the dead man's left eye. No date for an inquest has been set.

Farmers Look Favourably on Co-operative Organiza

By JAMES MONTAGNES
Central Press Canadian Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 17—Canadian farmers continue to expand their self-help or co-operative purchasing and marketing organizations. Statistics show that the trend is annually increasing, and what was once a neighborly chore in the early settlements in the form of barn raisings, beef rings, threshing syndicates and the exchange of labor, has now grown to big business. During 1937, latest year for which the department of Agriculture at Ottawa, has figures, there were 1,217 active farmers' business organizations which did a business amounting to more than $155,000,000.

Farmers' co-operative business organizations occupy an important position in the marketing of Canadian agricultural products. The activities of the larger organizations such as the wheat pools, live stock, and fruit co-operatives have reached a high state of development, and have received world-wide recognition. In addition to these, there are hundreds of comparatively small organizations working effectively to serve local areas. These associations have been organized by farmers to obtain better price terms through increased bargaining power or to provide some service not presently available or to improve some existing service considered inadequate.

By the latest figures there were 435,529 shareholders of the 1,217 co-operative organizations throughout Canada, with a paid-up share capital of more than $9,[illegible]0,000. Total assets and value of the 4,125 places of business of these co-operatives amounted to $120,000,000. The co-operatives dealt in dairy products, fruits and vegetables, grain and seed, livestock, poultry, honey, maple sugar, tobacco, wool, and furs.

Taken Place Rapidly

"In Canada the expansion of co-operative activity has taken place most rapidly and to the greatest degree in the marketing field," states W. F. Chown of the department of agriculture in a review of farmers' business organizations. "This field has offered the greatest opportunity to effect savings and to provide needed services. Collective action has also made possible the pooling of the proceeds received from the sale of agricultural products of the same grade and quality and the return to the farmers of an average price for such products.... Many associations formed primarily for marketing have found it possible to render an additional service to their members by utilizing the buying power already mobilized for the purpose of purchasing supplies needed on the farm.

"For example, fruit marketing associates may buy fertilizer, spray materials, barrels, boxes, flour and feed and general merchandise for their fruit growing members. A number of associations have been formed primarily for the purpose of buying supplies, usually bulk commodities, and some are operating stores carrying a full line of general merchandise. Over half this type operate in the prairie provinces.

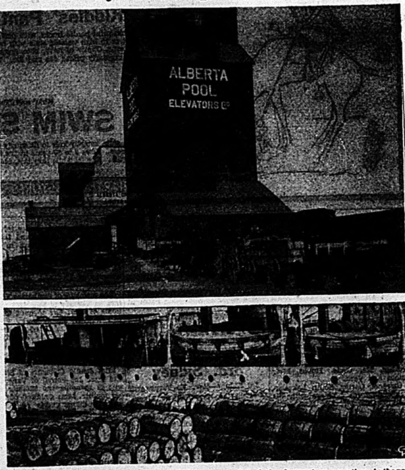
"In order to increase effectiveness, sales agencies have been formed on a regional or Dominion-wide basis. Wholesale societies which consolidate the buying power of the local associations and augment the benefits to be obtained from quantity buying are also operating in most of the provinces.

Embrace Variety of Products

"Fruits, vegetables, grain, seed, poultry, wool and furs are usually graded and otherwise prepared for market before being offered for sale. Elevators stockyards, comm[illegible] and cold storage warehouses and chick hatcheries are owned and operated co-operatively. Butter and cheese are manufactured, chicken and apple products are canned and commercial feeds and spray materials are prepared in co-operative plants. Hogs are processed into bacon and other pork products, and crude oil is refined into gasoline, distillate and other petroleum products."

Main growth of Canadian farmers' co-operative has been in the past 3 years. There is no Dominion co-operative act, only provincial legislatures have enacted laws for the operation of co-operatives. A number of co-operatives operate however, under the Dominion Companies Act. In addition to trading associations there are farmers' mutual fire insurance companies; about 62,000 or 5 per cent of the telephones in Canada are operated by rural co-operative companies; there are rural co-operative credit unions which lend money to member farmers; fishermen have in recent years started co-operatives for canning and marketing fish and buying fish gear; in the small towns and cities there has been a steady growth in consumer co-operatives which are retail stores owned by groups of consumers.

The tendency in Canada is for the increased adoption of the co-operative plan for farmers as well as other groups of citizens. In England and the Scandinavian countries co-operatives are among the biggest business organizations in those countries, and in Canada the farmers' co-operatives are steadily forging to first place as a collective business group in the agricultural industry.



The "Pool" elevators of western Canada TOP, are a symbol of the farmers' co-operatives in the prairie provinces. Co-operatively packed Nova Scotia apples are shown, BOTTOM, being loaded on to a freighter for shipment to Europe.

representatives.

'Effort to Do Something'

"I'm in this fight to the finish", he again assured supporters today. "I'm not in it for any glory or anything else that might be attached to the job, but in a serious effort to try and do something, to try and put into practice some of the things I have been preaching about since accepting the office of Mayor here.

"The country has no time for the old horse and buggy days of politics; the people are fed up and everlasting weary of the vague promises and even vaguer actions of those elected, once they got in. I'm going to win this election if I can impress the people upon the deadly seriousness of things, and when I do things are going to be changed a little", declared the new candidate.

Others nominated who withdrew in favor of Mayor Bone last evening were Herman Morrow, Reeve of Murray Township; ex-Reeve of K. Denyes of Brighton Township; ex-Warden Harry B. Phillips of the United Counties; Mayor Frank F. Long of Campbellford; R. J. Ross, Brighton; ex-Reeve Wm. A. Goodfellow of Brighton and ex-Warden J. Frank George of the United Counties.

Abductor And Boy Thought To Be In Regina

Regina, Aug. 17 (CP)—Reports the suspected aductor of 12-year-old George Connor of Toronto had been seen here and in Winnipeg and Calgary put police of the Prairie Provinces sharply on the lookout today for Arthur Armstrong, 26.

Several Regina residents told police yesterday that they saw Armstrong and the boy within the last three weeks and recognized them from newspaper pictures. The Winnipeg report was made less than two weeks ago by an unidentified milkman who said he picked up a man answering Armstrong's description. The man was alone.

70 PER CENT CUT IN OIL PRODUCTION

Oklahoma City, Aug. 17 (AP)—Shutdown of oil wells in six states, one of the most widespread curtailments of raw materials ever attempted, took approximately 70 per cent of the United States' crude supply from the market today.

The "shut down strike" in Oklahoma, Kansas, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana and New Mexico had its genesis in a series of price cuts by purchasing companies. Affected were 170,833 wells producing 3,356,800 barrels daily.

COOGAN ACCEPTS $126,000

Los Angeles, Aug. 17 (AP)—Jackie Coogan, who estimated he earned $4,000,000 in the days when he was "The Kid" of the early Charlie Chaplin comedies, accepted $126,000 today as his share of what remains.

To his mother, Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein, and his stepfather, Arthur Bernstein, went a similar sum under terms of an agreement approved in Superior Court.

Will Not Discuss Questions With Tientsin Dispute

Some Progress Made in Tokyo on Police Control In Tientsin

Questions of Currency Not Purely Local Issue, Britain's View

London, Aug. 18—(CP)— Great Britain today rejected Japanese demands that economic questions be included in the discussions now going on in Tokyo on the Tientsin dispute between the two powers.

Official circles said the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, had informed the Japanese government of this decision.

Japan was said to have been told that any discussion of economic questions must be referred to all the signatories of the nine-power treaty and other relevant treaties.

(The nine-power treaty was signed Feb. 6, 1922, in Washington by the British Empire, the United States, Belgium, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal. Canada and other units of the British Empire are signatories.

Integrity of China

(The signatories undertook among other things to respect the sovereignty, independence and territorial and administrative integrity of China, to maintain the principle of the open door and to refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge rights of nationals of friendly states.)

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Climate of Lhasa! This is especially interesting as the home of the Grand Lama on the Tibetan Plateau. It is rather mild for its elevation of over 11,000 feet. There the peaches bloom in early April, indicating an early season. June is the warmest month, due to the fact that the latter part of the summer is cloudy; it has an average of 63 degrees with a highest of 83. January is the coldest month, averaging 32 degrees with a lowest of 7. As Lhasa is very high, the air is pure and thin, sunshine is intense and evaporation is rapid. The yearly rainfall is 63 inches, most of which falls between May and September. Irrigation is used extensively.

REAL "CHAIN" LETTER STILL ON ITS WAY AFTER 23 YEARS

Austin, Minn., Aug. 18 (AP)—The family of the Rev. J. A. Schmid, 13 of them, has a chain letter all its own. Twenty-three years ago his sister, Mary, a missionary in China lonesome for family news, started a letter which went from relative to relative, each adding a bit, until it got back to Mary. Now the letter goes from China to California, Oregon, Canada, Montana, Minnesota, South Dakota, Kentucky, and back to China.

352.94 M.P.H. RATE SET TODAY BY JOHN COBB

Racing Car Northbound Covers Measured Mile on Bonneville Salt Flats

WILL RUN SATURDAY

Today's Rate About 4.5 Miles Per Hour Behind Captain Eyston's Record

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 18—(AP)—John Cobb steered his racing car through the measured mile on the snow white salt flats today at a speed announced as 352.94 miles an hour.

The northbound run started at 6:42 a.m. (9 a.m. EDT) from a point approximately six miles south of the measured mile markers.

To observers it appeared as if the English driver cut the motors on his 2,600-horse power automobile before he had completed the full mile.

Timers later explained the effect was given solely by a "dead spot" in the desert atmosphere and that the speed had not been cut by Cobb.

His speed, however, exceeded his own previous high of 350.2 set on this course last September, and was only aout 4.5 miles an hour short of Captain George E. T. Eyston's world land speed record of 357.5.

Cobb cancelled plans for a return run and postponed further assaults on the land speed record at least until tomorrow.

A. A. Pillsbury, of the American Automobile Association, said today's run would not be credited as official. He is chief timer.

WOMAN DROWNS IN TRENT CANAL

Heroic Niece Fails to Save Mrs. Alfred Baker After Fall in Water

Trenton, Ont., (Special)—Despite the heroic efforts of her young daughter, to rescue her after she had slipped and fallen into Trent Canal, two miles north of this town, Mrs. Alfred Baker, resident of rural route No. 2, drowned in eight feet of water between Dams Nos. 4 and 5 late yesterday afternoon.

The body was recovered after a long unsuccessful search by two truckdrivers, Bob MacAulay and Cecil White summoned to the scene of the tragedy. Artificial respiration was applied by L. Johnston employee of nearby powerhouse but all efforts to revive the woman failed. Dr. McMullen pronounced Mrs. Baker dead after thirty minutes of respiration had proved futile.

The fatality occurred after Mrs. Baker who with four girls who had been fishing in the canal, decided to change her sitting position on the canal-bank. Getting up, her feet suddenly slipped beneath her and she plunged into the water.

Dorothy Baker, young daughter of the dead woman, immediately dived into the water in an effort to rescue her mother. She made several attempts to locate the drowning woman but was unsuccessful. Meanwhile her three other companions dashed away for help. They halted the two truckdrivers who immediately left their vehicle and raced to the scene of the tragedy.

At New York, the Right Honorable Stanley Baldwin, the Earl of Bewdley, former prime minister of Great Britain, received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from Nicholas Murray Butler, left, president of Columbia University. The awarding of the degree was made in the rotunda of Low Memorial Library, Columbia University, in connection with the congress on education for democracy.

Campbell Goes 134 M.P.H Fastest Time on Water Ever Made by Man

Coniston, England, Aug. 18—(CP)—The speedboat Bluebird II, with Sir Malcolm Campbell at the wheel, skimmed over Lake Coniston today at 134 miles an hour, the fastest time ever made by man on water.

Officially, however, this was not a new record. The time must be made both ways over the measured mile.

Campbell was forced to stop at the end of the downward journey because of trouble with the Bluebird's water intake.

Discussing his time over the mile, which he covered in 26.7 seconds, Campbell said, "this conclusively proves that the Bluebird's new design is far superior."

This burst of speed was accomplished with the old engine which Sir Henry Seagrave was driving when he was killed in Lake Windermere. It is nine years old. The engine which Campbell will drive for the record probably will go in tomorrow.

Police Sergeant in Control Of Patrolmen in Each Zone

OTHER DUTIES

Toronto, Aug. 18—(CP)— The division of Southern Ontario into three zones for highway policing with a police sergeant in charge of each division will be effected Monday on an experimental basis, Attorney-General Gordon Conant announced last night.

"The purpose is to increase, as far as possible, the actual patrolling of highways and the general effectiveness of the motorcycle patrol," Mr. Conant said.

"I am satisfied the presence of motorcycle officers on the highways is the most effective way of controlling traffic and preventing speeding, careless driving and traffic law violations generally."

Provincial Constable H. W. Howell of Guelph will supervise the central zone, Provincial Constable Douglas Darby of Beamsville the western zone and Provincial Constable John Kay of Smith's Falls the eastern zone.

EXERT INFLUENCE IN DIRECTION OF WORLD PEACE

Suggestion Made by Denton Massey M.P., That Canada Have Active Policy

POLICY MEANS POWER

Geneva Par., Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—Canada's position in the event of a European war probably would be decided by an aggressor nation rather than by the Dominion, Denton Massey, Conservative M.P. for Toronto-Greenwood, said last night in an address to the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics.

It is Caada's constitutional right to determine what course of action she will take in the event Great Britain is drawn into war, Mr. Massey pointed out.

Closer Cooperation in Broadcasts Result of Royal Tour of Canada

New York, Aug. 18—(CP)—A "new cooperation" between the Canadian and British Broadcasting Corporations was announced by Major W. E. Gladstone Murray, general manager of the CBC, on his arrival here yesterday from London.

As a result of the "very favorable publicity" Canada received in the United Kingdom through the royal visit, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will send an increasing number of radio programs "of a national character" to British wireless listeners, Major Murray said.

Major Murray, who arrived aboard Pan America's Dixie Clipper, said the BBBC will reciprocate with a series of programs specially designed for Canadian interest. These programs will start in September.

"This marks the beginning of a new co-operation between Canadian and British roadcastings systems," said Major Murray.

"Since the King and Queen toured the Dominion a new interest in the life, people and panorama of Canada has been awakened in the United Kingdom. We intend to meet this interest with programs dramatizing the life and people of Canada."

The new plan eventually will require construction in Canada of a high-powered short wave station but for a beginning present transmission facilities will be adequate, Major Murray said.

Recruiting talent for new programs will eventually open new opportunity for Canadian entertainers but for a start the CBC will export its established programs, he said.

The Major also had a word of cheer for votaries of the little theatre movement in Canada, announcing plans were already under way for dramatic programs by good amateur acting units.

First Foreign Envoy to Canada to Present Credentials to King George

BRIEF TERM

Post Was Taken Temporarily So As to Have U.S. Minister in Ottawa During Royal Visit

Aboard U.S.S. Lang, Bay of Islands, Nfld., Aug. 18 (AP) —Daniel C. Roper, the first foreign envoy of Canada to present his credentials directly to the King in the Dominion capital, has resigned his post.

President Roosevelt, who appointed the former secretary of commerce as Minister to Canada last Spring, announced he had accepted the resignation before he left Hyde Park for his holiday cruise of Atlantic waters.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had sent Mr. Roper a letter of regret and thanked him for his willingness to take the post temporarily during the visit to Canada of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Regret Felt in Ottawa

Ottawa, Aug. 18 (CP)—General regret is felt in the capital that the stay of Daniel C. Roper as United States Minister to Canada should be so short. He has explained, however, that his appointment was from the first intended to be temporary in order that there would be a United States minister in Ottawa during the visit of the King and Queen.

The former secretary of commerce presented his credentials to King George on the day their Majesties arrived in Ottawa, May 19.

Mr. Roper and his wife took part in many of the ceremonies during the royal visit and he had several long chats with the King and Queen. "I was greatly impressed with the wide knowledge of the aims of democracy which this young couple displayed," Mr. Roper said after one of his chats with them.

Two Million Persons Will Have Seen Dionne Quints By End Of Year

Callander, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—The Dionne quintuplets, now five years and three months old, each year are proving more and more an attraction to tourists. Official estimates today showed that in the past four years 1,500,000 persons have viewed their childish antics in the playground of their nursery home, Dafoe Hospital.

By the end of 1939, the number of visitors to the nursery will have risen to more than 2,000,000, according to estimates of Dr. A. R. Dafoe, personal physician to the quints since their birth May 28, 1934. Keith Munro, business manager for Cecile, Annette, Yvonne, Emilie and Marie, said 500,000 persons each year watch them at play.

"We only keep track of the number of visitors in the summer months," said Munro. "But many view the quints in the spring and fall months. We estimate 500,000 people are viewing the children annually and by the end of this year the number of people probably will run over 2,000,000."

Girl Grabs Child, Grasps Preserver As Boat Upsets

IN CHOPPY WAVES

Man Ashore Sees Struggling Forms in Water and Gives Alarm to Tug Which Effects Rescue in 20 Minutes. Seven Persons Cling to Two Preservers.

Colchester, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—Seven persons including a three-year-old child were rescued from Lake Erie near here yesterday after their motor boat had capsized.

All had been in the water about 20 minutes and were clinging to two life preservers in the choppy lake about 1,200 yards from shore when they were rescued by a fish tug manned by Roy Bowden and Frank Philcox who went to the scene after being notified by Fergus McKillop of Windsor who was the first to notice the struggling forms in the water.

The child, Connie Shepherd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Shepherd of Highland Park, Mich., who also were in the boat and 14-year-old Helen Predham, of Windsor, required artificial respiration for about 20 minutes before they were revived after being brought to shore. The girl was credited with saving the younger child's life. As the boat capsized she grabbed the baby with one hand and a life preserver with the other.

Others in the boat were Mrs. William Predham, mother of Helen; Wilma, another daughter; and Beverly T. Burdick, 15, Windsor.

DIVIDE, PARCEL LARGE ESTATES

Polish Ministers Given Power to Act for Reasons of Security

Warsaw, Aug. 18 (AP) —Through a new presidential decree, announced officially today, the Polish ministers of war and interior were given authority to "divide and parcel" large landed estates along the Polish-German frontier "for reasons of security of state or defence of the frontiers."

This new authority which permits of no exceptions or exemptions, applies to a "belt" of frontier land from three to 20 miles wide along the border. Within this "belt" in Silesia and the Polish corridor provinces of Posmania and Pomorze are located a large number of German-owned estates.

This idea of division of land is not new in Poland. It began in the summer of 1920 with a government promise to the land-hungry Poles that victory over the Bolshevists would see the large estates broken up. This was translated into law in 1920.

There still remain in Silesia, Posmania and Pomorze a large number of landed estates, thinly populated, which are regarded a drawback to frontier defence. In Silesia, German estates have not been parcelled through an agreement with Germany. This agreement now has lapsed. The German-Polish nonaggression pact had a restraining influence against any action against similar estates in Pomorze and Posmania.

ROYAL 'EDITORS' SCORE 'SCOOP'

Nephews of the King describe Gun-Model in their Own Newspaper

London, Aug. 18 (CP)—A lifting of eyebrows over a military article in the homemade newspaper of two nephews of the King subsided today.

Viscount Lascelles, 16, and Hon. Gerald Lascelles, 15, both students at Eton, recently inspected a new model anti-aircraft gun in company with fellow students. During the school vacation they "publish" a newspaper for circulation among 200 tenants of the estate of their father, the Earl of Harewood, and family friends. The newspaper is typewritten on a machine the father contributed three years ago.

It has been notable only for shrewd racing selections made by the Earl who has an extensive stable.

As alert reporters the boys described the anti-aircraft gun in their paper. This caused surprise because the model has been on the War Office "secret" list. Today it was explained at the War Office that the gun involved had been removed from that list and an authorized description may have been obtained by the young publishers.

Their mother, the Princess Royal, is a sister of the King.

Threshing, which had been general throughout the county during the past week or so, is now tapering off from the peak, and according to reports of majority of agriculturalists the harvest this year of grain has been perfectly satisfactory, a production which has been almost that of normal crop years.

CHEESE BOARD HOUR LEFT UNCHANGED

Members of the Belleville Cheese Board after brief discussion last evening again decided by vote of factory representatives and salesmen present that the present hour of regular trading on the board on Thursday evening would remain as it is.

Discussion followed the reading of a letter from the Campbellford Cheese BoBard, in which the suggestion was made that the Belleville Board meet at seven o'clock (Standard time) in future in order that Campbellford Board might be held at 8.30 o'clock.

"What do the salesmen think about it?" asked President Weaver.

"Absolutely not; leave the hour as it is," was the general chorus of salesmen.

"Why not have Belleville Board meet at eight o'clock, and have the Campbellford Board meet at six-forty-five?" suggested President Weaver.

"No, leave the present hour as it is," objected the salesmen.

'Ghost' Takes a Night 'Off' Curious Crowd Disappointed

Picton's Public Spectre No. 1, Laughs Mockingly From Shadows, but All is Peaceful

POLICE CLEAR STREETS

Swarm of Newspapermen Wait for 'Break' That Never Came — Family Sleeps Downstairs

Deep in the shadows that lie over Picton's highly publicized "Spookhouse". Prince Edward County's public spectre No. 1 laughed derisively last night, as massing mortals, quivering with excitement at the prospect of viewing first-hand the midnight matinee idol of the ghost gals, milled about the premises in varying degrees of emotion.

They lurked behind trees. They thronged the sidewalk. Others, a bit timid perhaps, and in no way desirous of meeting personally, the door-rattling moon-eyed local "Hamlet", stayed within the safety of parked automobiles.

With early indications pointing to a complete sellout of the choicest seats, police were called as early as eight o'clock to disperse early arrivals, who milled about the Ackerman house, rendezvous for the past two Thursday nights of the "Boy from Beyond."

Street Jammed

But they reckoned without the insatiable curiosity of the human being. Scarcely had the stern-faced cops caused the first contingent of first-nighters to wend their way homeward, than from highways and byways, from behind tree-trunks, and houses came another curious mob. Again the limbs of the law dashed to the scene where the thoroughfare was now blocked with a milling gesticulating mob of humanity. Again the law stretched its arm with forefinger pointed in the familiar gesture of "Move on, please."

Silence descended on the Ackerman house. Over head a star-studded sky formed a velvety backdrop for the appearance of the leading character in this midnight melodrama.

In the misty darkness, a white face showed from behind a tree. Then another. And another. Dark forms glided to places of vantage near the house. Automobiles, lights dimmed, slid to a stop nearby. It was near the hour of midnight, and time for the ghostly curtain to rise. The overture, a low hum of human voices suppressed with excitement, rose and faded away. The hour had arrived. A tense silence fell over the crowd that again jammed the street to near-capacity.

Cameramen, reporters from practically every weekly and daily in the district, not to mention the metropolitan sheets waited for the "break" that never came.

The time for the "appearance" with its accompanying cacophony of rattling noises, slamming doors and other eerie rataplans, came and passed. People shook their heads. A few of the wise ones, with an "I-told-you-so" look on their faces jeered a bit disdainfully and wended their way home.

Then the limbs of the law made their third entry, and gently but firmly, insisted that the contest was officially declared "off" and told the folks to go home.

Maybe Next Week

But a report, instilled a flicker of hope into imaginative minds. Someone suddenly remembered that a Thursday interspersed the first and second appearances of the spectre and inasmuch as a previous engagement may have been responsible for the non-appearance of the nocturnal apparition, there remains the possibility of a repetition of the performance of the "Boy from Beyond" next week.

Meantime, Mrs. Ackerman and other central figures in this moving drama are a bit disgusted over the whole procedure. The lady did not go to bed last night, but slept on a couch in the living room downstairs, while beside her on chairs reposed Willet Brough a nephew and his fourteen year-old sister, Elda.

"I hope this settles the whole thing," Mrs. Ackerman said, "and that peace has come to stay in this household. It's getting too much for me and I am getting tired of it. The thing has had too much, far too much publicity to suit me," she exclaimed.

"That's all, just ordinary manoeuvres," declared Adjutant Atkinson. "Our men have to take prescribed courses in night flying and this can only be carried on in the darkness over the district. There has been no other significance attached to the flying at night over Belleville."

MILK THIEVES GROW BOLDER

Milk Stolen from Wagons of Two Local Dairies on Front Street at 2 A. M.

Sneak thieves pilfering milk in Belleville are becoming bolder as time progresses. It used to be this type of thieving was confined to the rear of private residences, whenever delivered milk bottles were stolen under the cover of darkness.

Early today, however, milk was stolen directly from the delivery wagons of two local dairies on Front St., while the drivers were making deliveries nearby. P. C. Wright learned of the thefts when he was informed that three men left a local restaurant shortly after 2.00 a. m. today. One of the men entered a nearby automobile, while the remaining two snatched a quart of milk each from two nearby dairy wagons. The two milk-snatchers then ran and boarded a waiting motor car, which speeded away.

Constable Wright is of the opinion he obtained the licence plate number of the fleeing vehicle. A complete check-up is being made by police today.

D. H. Ackerill, V.S. Oldest Veterinary, Graduate of 60 Years

Belleville, August 17th.,

To the Editor, The Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir,—

I noticed in The Globe and Mail a few days ago a Kingston veterinary claims the right to be known as the oldest graduate in Canada, he being 55 years in harness. Please Mr. Editor let the public know that Belleville claims that right because her oldest graduate graduated 60 years ago and is still going strong also he claims to be the youngest graduate having received his diploma when 18 years of age and again while pen in hand let me say the Intelligencer paper has been a daily visitor at our door since its first issue my father having come to Belleville in 1833.

Yours truly,
D. H. Ackerill, V.S.

GENERAL MOTORS HONORS CHAMPION

Ernest Young, Canadian Soap-Box Champ, to be Guest at Toronto Banquet

In recognition of his splendid showing in the World's Championship Soap-Box Derby at Akron, O., last Sunday, where he finished third to the cream of international drivers, Ernest Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Young, Pine St., will be a guest of the General Motors of Canada, Limited, at the banquet of the "Parade of Progress" to be held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on August 25th.

The invitation to the youthful champion of the soap-box speedways was extended by Mr. J. E. Johnson, director of sales of General Motors of Canada, Ltd.

The "Parade of Progress" banquet will be attended by outstanding officials of the General Motors Corporation of both the United States and Canada as well as many prominent Toronto business men. It is being held in conjunction with the General Motors exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The appearance of the youthful driver, who will likely be accompanied by his father to the banquet, marks a signal honor, one that is rarely bestowed on a boy of his age. Officials of the company, however, today voiced their pride in the achievement of the Belleville driver, praise that will be amplified by high-ranking officials of the company at the forthcoming function.

TRENTON

TWO R. R. TRACKS ARE REMOVED, ONE REMAINS

Wigwags Installed at King And Dundas Street Crossings

BATA PLANT BUSY

Trenton, Aug. 17.—(Special) — Following the removal of two tracks from the Dundas St. C.N.R. crossing in downtown Trenton during the past week, workmen yesterday, opened up the crossing to traffic again after having detoured all vehicles via the King Street crossing for the previous few days. There is now only one track at both the King Street and the Dundas St. crossing, and motorists who used to dread the bump at the latter spot now need have no fears for it is beautifully levelled off. Formerly the crossing accommodated three tracks the main line and two sidings; and cars that went over it always knew when the crossing was completed. New cars rolled and bobbed, and drivers of old models set their teeth and waited for the crash. The installation of the two new wigwags at these two crossings proceeds apace; and in a few days these electrically-operated signals will be in operation and the signalmen who have served so faithfully for so many years will be amongst the missing. All except the finishing touches have been applied; and it is now a matter of hours rather than days until the work is done. It will be remembered that some weeks ago when this step was first mooted by the C.N.R., the local council objected strenuously against the installation of mechanical warnings and pointed out that in a score of years and more there has never been a fatal accident with watchmen employed to guard the crossings. However the Railways Commission who inspected the site thought differently, and the wigwags are now in place.

If report may be believed, half the town will be at the Airport today (Friday) to witness the events of the fifth annual sports program.

Mr. Alex Redick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Redick, Front Street, is spending a few days at home with his parents before going to Chatham where he will be employed for the balance of the summer until his return to Queen's University in the autumn. Mr. Redick has been employed this summer by a prominent structural steel company and hopes to receive his engineer's degree in another year.

Officers of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment are invited to be guests of the Commanding Officer and Officers of the R.C.A.F. at their Sports Day dance in the officers' Mess tonight.

A number of local people, including several militia officers, drove from here to Point Petre on Thursday afternoon of this week to witness firing of the anti-aircraft guns there.

Rugby practices at the Airport are already under way an dsome excellent talent is being uncovered, report says, by Coach Bill Rider.

After whipping the Bowmanville nine by a 12-4 score right in their own balliwick on Tuesday evening, members of the Yourex clan, local mushball champs, are not looking forward to any special difficulty in making it two straight when the Bowmanvillians visit here tonight. However they do say that the losers were better than the score would indicate, and those who saw the game have pointed out that the visiting first and third baseman are specially worth watching.

Visiting the Bata plant on Tuesday afternoon of this week, the writer of these lines found things busy, and at the gate dozens of persons waiting either to secure employment or to see some of the officials regarding sale to the firm of building materials and other supplies. The second floor of the plant is being used as an office temporarily, and in it twenty or more employees were busily at work. Around Frankford it was being reported that local youths had been given pieces of paper and patterns of "uppers" of shoes, and on their ability to cut from the sheet the greatest number of uppers with the least waste depended their chances of securing employment. A considerable number of Czech workers and their families have arrived, and already the villagers in Frankford have come to the stage where they scarcely turn their heads at the sound of a strange tongue. According to report building of the first Bata factory and of the model town may begin in six weeks.

3 ZONES

Duties of Sergeants

Duties of the supervising sergeants will be: To ensure officers spend a maximum time on patrol; to minimize the time spent by officers in court; to facilitate the needs of the public in disposition of traffic cases; to report dereliction or delinquency on the part of any officer; to recommend traffic control improvements; to supervise provincial highway constables.

"It is hoped the new arrangements will result in more extensive and effective patrolling," said Mr. Conant. "The plan is more or less in the nature of an experiment and will be discontinued or extended according to the results obtained."

The Attorney General said all traffic offences in each county will be disposed of as far as possible in one court day and the court clerk will notify all motorcycle officers of the cases to be disposed of each day.

Not Applicable to Cities, Towns

He said it was necessary to remember the "Provincial Police patrol only the highways outside the cities and towns which have their own police, so the arrangements now made effective will not apply to cities and towns."

The Provincial Police were not responsible for recent alleged abuses and persecutions in some municipalities which had drawn complaints from the press, Mr. Conant said.

"However, I would urge upon municipalities the desirability of meeting the convenience of the public as far as possible consistent with the adequate enforcement of our traffic laws."

Patrol Zones

The three patrol zones are as follows:

Western—Essex, Kent, Elgin, Lambton, Middlesex, Oxford, Brant, Norfolk, Waterloo, Perth, Huron, Bruce, Grey, Wellington, Wentworth, Haldimand and the parts of counties west of highway No. 6.

Central—Part of Grey, Wellington, Wentworth, Haldimand east of highway No. 6; Welland, Lincoln, Halton, Peel, York, Dufferin, Simcoe, Ontario including highways 7, 35 and 36 in Victoria County.

Eastern—Durham, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Frontenac, Lanark, Leeds, Granville, Carleton, Russell, Prescott, Dundas, Stormont, Glengarry, Peterborough, Hastings, Lennox, Addington and Renfrew, all bounded on the north and west by highways 7, 39 and 17.

The first parcel to be sent air express by the Canadian National Railways via Imperial Airways is seen above being received by George H. Griffin, local agent of the C. N. Express. Mr. George Wishart of the Dominion Entomological Laboratory here is handing the parcel of "bugs" to Mr. Griffin.

U.S. NETTSTERS OUT

Brooklin, Mass., Aug. 18 (AP)—Master minds of United States tennis, shocked by the decisive rout of one of their three possible Davis Cup doubles combinations, by an Australian combination, pinned their hopes today on Frank Parker and Don McNeill, the top-seeded domestic entry in the National doubles tournament at Longwood.

Those players were scheduled to meet Australia's Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman in a semi-final match and attempt to undo some of the damage the latters' Davis Cup teammates inflicted on Gene Mako and Jack Tidball in one of yesterday's quarter finals.

McSpaden Breaks Golf Course Record

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 18 (CP)—Having discovered again that it is different in tournament play than in practice, the men close to Harold "Jug" McSpaden set out in the second round of the Canadian Open golf championship today to whittle the two-stroke lead the "big brown jug" has built on the field.

As if the wind, heavy woods and lightning-fast greens were not enough, tournament officials decided to make the job tougher by replacing the pins in trickier spots.

McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., professional, was one of the four men in the wield of '82 who broke Riverside's par 70 yesterday. Formed on a 32 and 35, McSpaden's 67 brought him home two strokes ahead of Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N.J., Arthur Tulbert of Toronto and Ted Bishop, an unknown Boston amateur.

SLAVS THUMB OCEAN

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—Yugoslavia's Davis Cup tennis players, who almost had to thumb their way across the Atlantic to play in the interzone finals, are ready to face Australia's stars with less than a week's practice on grass courts.

Four Yugolav players, Franjo Puncec, Franjo Kukljevic, Joseph Pallada and Demeter Mitic, and their non-playing captain, Dr. Drago Cop, arrived on the Europa last night. They travelled in tourist class and explained they weren't sure until few days before sailing that they could come at all. The government finally agreed to augment the tennis association's funds to pay their passage.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

HOLIDAYS PASSING

Three quarters of the summer holidays have gone and are numbered with the past. One quarter remains. It will be filled with things of interest and intensified play for school children. The real summer weather has been warm, rather above normal and those who have had vacations by the sea or lake have appreciated their rest from labor during these warm days.

The time of year is coming to the season of reopened schools, the time of fall fairs and the period of shooting and harvest festivals. These are all some time off but not so far that they can be kept out of mind.

THANKSGIVING DAY IN U.S.

Into the midst of the warm season President Roosevelt has started some excitement over the date of Thanksgiving. Nothing he has said or done has so stirred rustling among the people as the announcement that they would eat their turkey a week earlier this year.

In the United States Thanksgiving Day has wandered up and down the calendar. In 1789 President Washington selected the last Thursday in November, but even that did not mean establishment of a national holiday. Then in 1863 President Lincoln set the last Thursday in November, This may have had much to do with the establishment of the ruling date. Now Mr. Roosevelt says his change is a move to help trade. But associations have grown up around the last Thursday in November and it may be hard to break through. Whether he will be moved from his course remains to be seen but he will probably stick to the changed date.

If some may think the U. S. date too late, many Canadians feel the Canadian date too early, at least in these parts, when it is usually before the middle of October. Canada has now no set date and it has to be proclaimed as a holiday. In Eastern Canada many would wish a date somewhat later to break more evenly the long stretch of time between Labor Day and Christmas.

WHY POLES ARE RESOLUTE

Much talk is heard these days of the Danzig question, but the New York Times puts it in this concise way. "For the Poles, the issue is not Danzig, it is Danzig as the Sudentenland all over again, the foothold for a drive for the Corridor, for Upper Silesia, for a repetition of the action that ruthlessly destroyed the Czech Republic. Nor have Britain and France taken their stand in defense of a German city on the Baltic, but for what followed Munich taught them that they must make a stand at the next point of German aggression or surrender not only their place in the world but their world itself, its values, its opportunities, its hard-won liberties."

The ghost of Czecho-Slovakia is what blocks Hitler's path in the form of stern opposition as in Poland, in the strong alliance of Britain and France and in the realization of the world that Germany has been at the old game, and is still at it.

The Times remarks that some believe that it may be that the Germans find that the trick has been outworn and that the force of the world is now against aggression and that this may prompt some new attitude but adds, "This wishful supposing requires a good deal of hard proof however. No rational inhabitant of this planet would choose war if there were any decent alternative, but Hitler has made it impossible to talk peace with him except at the point of a bigger gun."

Today Britain is wary. Yesterday it was said that two classes of regular army reservists have been ordered to hold most of their personal wartime equipment until October 15 and the number it is said may be 100,000 men who have served between seven and fifteen years in the regular army and who undergo one month's training yearly. That is a sample of Britain's wariness. Poland is resolute against any move on Hitler's part.

This is the pass to which the world has come. After Munich and its sequel in the dismemberment and wrenching limb from limb of Czecho-Slovakia by Germany in March last in the name of peace and harmony, no one pays much attention to German words, or would accept German pledges, unless the reform of Germany's spirit is absolutely proven. The aggressor nation of March last, has it changed? Who thinks it has? So far safety has been due to growing force and strength of resistance to the very hint of aggression.

Non - Germans recall Hitler's boasted pledge of a united German world, into which he would bring all Germans but not others. Then they recall the enslaving of the Czechs who are as foreign to Germans as Frenchmen are.

The world might well think of what would have been the situation today if Hitler had not been stopped by Poland, Britain and France. Nothing less stopped Germany, the world believes. So it looks like the continuance of the war of nerves and crises if not of armaments until something forces a new idea upon Germany.

The Bells of Even-time

With lavish hand a-top the hills
The westering sun his red wine spills.
And purple mists begin to climb.
Now faint, now clear, now far away,
Now near—and dear as a new day—
I hear the bells of even-time.

Now twilight—timid ghosts and pale—
Sits 'neath the trees along the trail,
And waits the day's bright, brief decline.
I catch the gleam of night's first star,
Then, thin and sweet, sound from afar
The silver bells of even-time.

I light the lamp to guide you, dear,
Across the hills and to me, here,
Awaiting you with eyes a-shine,—
These hills, this home—and you, my love,
The dearest things 'neath heaven above.
So sing the bells of even-time,
The sweet, wild bells of even-time.
—Mildred R. Batty.—In Montreal Star.

ONCE IN A WHILE A NEWSPAPER IS FORTUNATE in being able to secure a startling bargain for readers, a Good Will gesture as it were, without profit for the publishers in comparison to the work involved. One of these occasions is being taken advantage of by The Ontario Intelligencer in securing for readers the new American Encyclopedia at a fraction of its costs were it marketed in the usual way. In company with various other Canadian newspapers the Ontario Intelligencer secured a supply of these encyclopedias and placed them at the disposal of readers at 59 cents per copy, deluxe binding a little more. There are fifteen volumes and these can be obtained a volume a week using coupons cut from this newspaper. Marketed any other way this encyclopedia would cost more than double the price asked. Many readers have taken advantage of this exceptional opportunity and are becoming owners of an up-to-date encyclopedia, a veritable fountain of information without which no home is complete. For those who have not started to accumulate this encyclopedia there are still copies of Volume 1 available at this office for those who act quickly and start accumulating the set.

EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE, ALL AROUND THE TOWN, describes the automobile race to be staged in Alexandria Bay, the course being the streets of the town, in and out of alleys, round sharp corners, with all the hazards possible thrown in. Street lamp standards, electric light poles and mail boxes will be protected by heavy straw padding, but the drivers will have to protect themselves. Many entries are reported and judging from previous contests of this kind held record time will be hung up. Goofy sports are getting goofier.

HITLER AND MUSSOLINI PLAYING WITH THEIR TOY SOLDIERS have about reached an impasse where they either have to stop talking, disband their armies and create an unsatisfied revolutionary section of the population or dig up a real war for them to play with. Looks like war has the call so the St. Helenas should be got ready for the Hitlers and Mussolinis, imitators of Napoleon. Whom the Gods wish to destroy they first made mad.

WOULD IT BE POSSIBLE THAT THE COLORED LIGHTS in position in the business district be turned on during Fair Week. Most of the visiting folk won't know but what the lights are kept on every night as befits a progressive burg like Belleville, or at least on Saturday nights —especially after passing through other Ontario communities which keep their lamps trimmed and burning every summer night. Belleville merchants relieved the local Hydro of a liability in taking these decorative street lights off Hydro hands at a good price, besides paying for their installation. Why permit this public asset to perish through deterioration. The colored lights are yours —Use Them!

THE GLOOM HOUNDS

Nothing is any good. Modern craftsmanship is punk. They don't know how to make anything properly these days. Young people are going to the dogs. The new music is atrocious. And so on down the line. Our nations of life are abominable. And our prophecies are worse. There's going to be a war. If frost doesn't get the wheat, the bottom will fall out of the international market. The cost of living is going to go up. And, in fact, there's nothing in store but despair, ruin, and wreckage. But don't think that as pessimists we have the corner on the market of pessimism. During the last century, the big guns of those days took their hand at gloomy prophecy. Listen to 'em:—Pitt, in 1800, said; "There is scarcely anything around us but ruin and despair"; Disraeli, in 1849, "In industry, commerce and agriculture there is no hope"; Wellington, in 1851, "I thank God I shall be spared from the consummation of ruin that is gathering round us"; Shaftesbury, in 1868, "Nothing can save the British Empire from shipwreck". And what happened? Why, the world went ahead to encompass the greatest degree of prosperity it had ever known.—Winnipeg Free Press.

PASS THE CARROTS

There is no doubt about it; the diet experts are medding too much with human liberty, and just at a time when we need all of it we can get.

There experts have no tact. Indeed, there must be a streak of sadism in them. They are continually finding out horrible things about food, and there is no end to their pontificating. If you are going to do something strenuous, they declared not long ago, eat a lot of jelly before you do it — jelly! And now comes Miss May Foley, Massachusetts State College nutritionist, a title that you can't very well ignore, to say that before you go for that evening spin in your car you should eat a couple of carrots for safety.

Here is the explanation: Carrots contain vitamin A, which prevents night blindness. "A person whose vision in dim light is impaired, due to lack of vitamin A," says Miss Foley, "can eat a serving of carrots before he goes out driving in the evening and be assured that his vision will be better."

Note the ring of authority. It is typical. Here a whole generation has been brought up on the theory that carrots make the hair curl, and no sooner do they free themselves from this yoke with a hearty iconoclasm than the carrots are thrown right back in their faces with a scientific leer. And, frankly, we think it is unfair to carorts.

We believe carrots are good in their own way, but compulsion and food don't mix. There was something rather appealing in the old-fashioned deceptiveness about fish giving you brain power, onions resistance against colds, and spinach muscular might. There is something cold and objectionable about the modern substitutes that are probably—and that is what really annoys us—true.

It is hard, very hard, to picture the scenes ahead of us if the Foley type of advice is strictly adhered to.

"Give me my carrots, dear. I'm going out or a short spin in the country."—Hamilton Spectator.

TARZAN GROUNDED

The world is less than startled at the news from London that real-life Tarzan—a human child reared by baboons — has been found in South Africa.

The Tarzan myth itself is so familiar as to seem almost truth. And were there not Romulus and Remus, suckled by the wolf; numerous instances of cats rearing puppies and bears protecting lost babies?

Of more interest than the fact itself are the recollections of Lucas, the 12-year-old Tarzan who has been restored to human-kind and taught a human tongue. Says Lucas: "My food consisted mainly of crickets, green mealies and wild honey. I was kicked on the head by an ostrich while robbing its nest and often was stung by bees while robbing hives."

No stealthy, lethal leaps from an overhanging branch to the back of the unsuspecting leopard! No whistling arcs of flight through the forests to warn the friendly elephants of hunters!

Tarzan in the flesh is kicked by the ridiculous ostrich, and stung while robbing hives like any farm boy. One more illusion shot. One more flight of fancy comes down to earth.—New York Post.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Should Patient Be Told His Case is Hopeless?

When a patient with poor hearing, poor eyesight, heart or other chronic disease, has been told by a specialist in these branches that nothing more can be done for him, he may react in one of two ways. He may decide to accept the verdict and go on his way more or less discouraged, or he may decide that the specialist is wrong and consult another specialist or one using another method of healing.

Should he decide on consulting one other than a member of the medical profession, he realizes that the medical specialist has been straightforward in telling him that, in his opinion, nothing could be done for him, but at the same time he is determined that as long as the symptoms are present he is going to try to find some method of obtaining relief.

Should a physician tell his patient that there is nothing more that can be done, and, in cases that must soon end in death, should the patient be told his case is hopeless?

I believe that most physicians will agree that in chronic cases—eyesight, hearing, arthritis—the patient should be told that nothing more can be done so that time and, when necessary, money, may be saved. In serious ailments when life cannot be saved, the family, if not the patient, should be told that the case is hopeless. Hope is perhaps the greatest single factor in bringing a patient through a crisis or in curing a chronic ailment. It should not be taken away while life lasts.

What about "hopeless" cases? Should these patients be told that their case is hopeless?

In Medical World some months ago, Dr. S. Block states: "In the hopeless case, do not tell the patient that nothing can be done for him. The hope that springs eternal in the human breast must never be ruthlessly demolished. The shattering of this hope often causes the person more misery than the original complaint. No matter how intelligent one may be, there is a helpless feeling of impending doom on hearing the fatal pronouncement from some one who is in a position to know."

BUSTLE THREATENS

It is said that the masters of women's fashions have decreed that the sartorial monstrosity known as the bustle will be in vogue this autumn. In fact stores in New York are already advertising the contraption, but timidity is voiced in the announcements. The suggestion is made that the articles offered are modified versions, not too exaggerated.

But fashions operate in a circle and almost everything that was once in style, comes back to a more or less effective revival. Generally, those vogues that were extra outlandish or vulgar do not continue long. The strange thing is that some extreme fashions are resisted for a while, people declaring that they never will accept them. The next thing is that they are generally adopted and have a season of popularity.

The bustle had its days in the nineties and fashion leaders competed to produce grotesque effects. The skirts worn in those days were long and wide. Corsets contracted women's waists to wasp-like proportions. If a lady dressed in that getup were to appear suddenly in our midst today, we would all laugh uproariously, but if fashion carries out its threat to revive this fantastic gear, women will adopt it and think it a great contributor to beauty.

There is no doubt that many of the freak changes in women's fashions are part of the racket imposed by dictators of styles in Paris, London and New York, who must find a device that will compel the feminine world to spend still more money for clothes. That is one of the worst despotisms known in the world, but peculiarly, the women have made only a feeble resistance or even protest. They seem to welcome the most grotesque changes. — Sarnia Canadian Observer.

TREASON IN EATING

The recent Nazi view that overeating is a form of high treason recalls the fact that in England not so many years ago overeating, if not high treason, was legally a crime. Until July, 1856, it was technically unlawful for a man to have more than two courses at dinner and supper although upon specifically festive occasions he might be permitted three. This statute of Edward III's sumptuary laws was not repealed until 1856.

In England severe sumptuary laws were enacted in the reigns of Edward III, Edward IV and Henry VIII. For long a man dared not eat what he fancied. The poorer classes for instance, were forbidden to eat certain foods and wheaten bread. That was reserved for "their betters" —the poor being permitted to eat only coarse bread made from peasemeal and other unattractive substances.—Manchester Guardian.

CARELESS CYCLISTS

The campaign sponsored by the City of Montreal against imprudent cyclists should receive the public's entire support. Countless accidents occur each year and thousands of children are often made crippled for life. Similar campaigns have been operated by other Canadian and American cities and have resulted in most encouraging results. Excluding the careless motorist, a number of accidents take place even when most careful and slow-driving motorists are at the wheel. This proves beyond the least doubt that cyclists have become too audacious. — Le Petit Journal (Montreal).

Some Things that Win Elections

It's this sticky summer heat that's got old John J. Lewis as it does all furbearing animals. Normally John Lewis is a shrewd labor politician and he wouldn't ordinarily deliver over to Vice-President Garner the solid poker-playing, whisky-drinking support he did during his heat wave before the House Labor Committee. He's made old Cactus Jack a regular political glamor boy.

As a people we have a strong Puritan strain. Still we do go for a fellow who has a glint in his eye. Now if Mr. Lewis had said that Mr. Garner was a cheese-paring, teetotaling, psalm-singing, Puritanical old man he would have put him in the same class as Governor Dickinson, of Michigan, and would have made Mr. Garner look like a public joke. John took the wrong stance.

There are many tried and effective ways of putting the Indian sign on somebody you don't like in politics.

Frank Kent tells of the incident down on the eastern shore of Maryland when in a political meeting the speaker said of his opponent: "He is so low that Hercules, using an Archimedian lever, couldn't raise him to the level of total depravity."

Secretary Ickes once took out after former Governor Talmadge of Georgia by describing him as a "bubonic plague carrying a rat".

Years ago a young Southerner, wishing to be elected to Congress, smeared his opponent neatly by describing the menu of the hotel at which the incumbent lived while in Washington. Holding up the menu card before his audience of hillbillies, the candidate asked them to consider the extravagance of their Congressman spending the taxpayer's money by ordering eggs Benedictine—two eggs for 85 cents. And he asked them if they knew what Benedictine was. Benedictine was liquor. Yes, folks, liquor, made by Roman Catholic monks. So he got the job on the religious issue.

A newspaper woman started the gag that hounded a demagogic Senator in my early days here. After listening to the Senator for an hour, she said, "at last I'm in favor of birth control, and in that Senator's case, it ought to be retroactive."

Thus there are ways and ways of doing the job.

But for John Lewis to make Mr. Garner a poker-playing, whisky-drinking hero—why he's only bringing trade to the Vice-President's door. It is like the way Governor Dickinson has come to the rescue of the New York World's Fair by telling the folks back home what a sinful place New York is, with a brink to go over in every block. — Raymond Clapper in New York World-Telegram.

Hail The Soap Box Derbyites

By this time not very many people are in danger of mistaking the nature of a Soap Box Derby. Half a dozen years ago the name would have suggested an oratorical endurance contest between representatives of rival ideologies. But it was the sixth annual Soap Box Derby that was run off at Akron on Sunday. The public has no difficulty in recalling that long before adult Americans learned to stand on soap boxes and tell the world the American small boy built wagons out of soap boxes. They were often called Irish Mail or Dixie Flier and were used commercially to carry the family groceries and laundry and for pleasure, including speed contests, no doubt.

The genius of a people which organizes national marble championships and spinning top championships and water-melon-eating championships and freckles championships was not likely to overlook the real potentialities of the soap box. It is believed that 100,000 boys between 10 and 15 years participated in the local elimination trials having their climax at Akron. Down a specially constructed 1,100-foot concrete slope last Sunday the winner raced his home-made speed wagon in 28.4 seconds to a $2,000 college scholarship. There were other prizes in abundance.

The object of the soap-box competition is to arouse interest in design and to provide an incentive for constructive work and painstaking mechanical skill. No gravity-powered car, which in the vulgar is a soap-box vehicle, may cost more than $10, have special bearings, weigh more than 150 pounds or involve in its construction any process, such as welding, which goes beyond the boys' ordinary capacity. Each must be actually designed and built by the contestant. He may have boy helpers in his own age group but no adult help beyond advice.

That he can do a good job of it is shown by the fact that the little racers attain speeds about thirty miles an hour and often show striking originality of design in streamlining, methods to assure perfect wheel alignment, and the like.—New York Times.

Motoring In The Pre-War Days

Those who did not drive a car that long ago may feel better if they read what we pre-war motorists had to face.

To start the car we did not step on a button. We got out and cranked. We always got dirt on our hands. We were lucky if we did not skin our knuckles or get a nasty blow on the arm if the engine backfired—as it sometimes did. We blew our tires up to high pressure—usually 60 pounds—with a hand pump. There was no free air. In Bracebridge, when I started to drive, there was not a public garage or even a gasoline pump. If your car needed repairs, you did them yourself—if the job was too tough you got the blacksmith. If he was puzzled, you called in Bill Simmons, the only man who knew much about cars. Big, kindly Bill Simmons, superintendent of the town's public utilities. Many the hour he spent diagnosing the ills of cars. No one ever paid him—he would have been insulted if offered any reward.

If we wanted gasoline we drove to a hardware store and a clerk carried it out in a can. He brought along a funnel with a chamois in it and poured the gasoline through it into the tank of the car. If we had a flat tire—and a drive without a flat was barely the rule rather than the exception—we pried off the clincher tire, barking our knuckles whenever the tire iron slipped. We patched the tire by the roadside while sweat ran in our eyes and mosquitoes enjoyed a banquet on all exposed portions of our anatomy. Often we got stuck on steep hills, especially stony or sandy ones. The passengers pushed while the driver did his best with low gear. Our chariots had an abiding thirst. We carried a pail and replenished the radiator at frequent intervals. When darkness fell we fished through our pockets for matches and got out and lit the coal oil side-lights and tail light. We turned the little wheel at the top of the acetylene generator on a running board; the stink of carbide rose to our nostrils. Then we lit the gas headlights.

We started up again. Just when the road was extra rough the headlights went almost out—likely as not, completely out. Water in the headlight tubes. We disconnected the tubes, put one stinking end in our mouth and blew the water out—then connected the gas works up again. Roads were generally bad—a midsummer thunderstorm would change a bare clay road into grease without much delay. If it rained we laboriously put up the top and arranged the side curtains. We had no windshield wiper to aid our vision. Whenever we met a horse we were pleasantly surprised if the steed did not strike a pose like the lion rampant on the Scottish flag. If the driver of the animal was a lady or an elderly gentleman we usually had to stop the engine and lead the skittish beast past the auto. When we blew the horn we really blew—by pressing a rubber bulb on the steering column. The sound of the horn was low and mellow—too low to be heard by the driver of any noisy wagon we happened to overtake.

All but the hardiest of us put the car on the blocks on Thanksgiving Day, which was always in October. Only the bravest took the car out again before Victoria Day. But we had our compensations. Motorists sometimes came home behind a team of horses but the steeds were not hitched to a hearse.—Redmond Thomas, K.C., in Bracebridge Gazette.

Fashion Flashes

WE NOTED several black silk dinner suits on a coolish evening last week. One smart model is of black satin with peplum jacket sporting an enormous bustle bow.

Quite a lot of black is seen at smart resorts at night. A beauty is of black ninon with allover encrustation of black Chantilly lace posed over a pink satin foundation.

You will see lots of berets round town this autumn. A smart model in mossgreen felt has an ornament of black velvet wings and a gold clip. The body of the beret is very high and flared.

Rest easy in a nightie of red pin dotted white silk with the sash drawn through high-placed loops to form a low V neckline.

Coming back with a bang is black satin for day and evening. A daytime dress with fairly full skirt is topped by a fitted jacket with narrow double chevron stripes of mauve.

All indications point to a brown Fall season. A flattering ensemble is of mink, the 30-inch tuxedo front coat having much back fullness. An oblong pillow muff matches.

DELECTABLE COOL DRINKS FOR HOT DAYS

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

IF YOU'VE just about exhausted your repertoire of delectable, cooling long drinks, you will find use for some new recipes. A long drink can be delicate and still have loads of personality, if you know how to fix it. Here is a batch of iced perfection in the form of swell formulas.

Cold and Filling

Coffee Eggnog is a very special kind of eggnog—cold and filling and just right for lunch. To make it, beat two egg whites until stiff; add one-fourth cup sugar, one-half cup fresh double-strength black coffee, three cups milk and one teaspoon vanilla. Shake in covered glass jar and pour over ice in tall glasses. Top with whipped cream and dust with cinnamon.

General Harrison Eggnog comes next, made with one egg, cider, one tablespoon sugar, ice, nutmeg. For each portion mi the egg, sugar, cracked ice and cider. Shake well and serve in tall glasses with a grating of nutmeg.

Here's a Tempter

Spiced Violet is the name of this next tempter. It is concocted with the aid of one cup blueberry juice (drained from canned blueberries), one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one and one-half cups unsweetened pineapple juice, juice of two lemons, one-half cup sugar syrup. Combine all items thoroughly. Pour into glass one-fourth full cracked ice. Garnish with sprig of fresh mint. Serves four.

Spiced Grape Juice, good and healthful, requires ten cloves, one stick cinnamon, ten allspice berries and two quarts grape juice. Add spices to grape juice and heat slowly for ten minutes. Strain and cool. Pour over cracked ice and serve in tall glasses with fresh mint garnish. Serves ten.

Tea-Flavered Fizz

Spiced Chilled Fizz is made with two teaspoons tea, four cups boiling water, one-half teaspoon each powdered cloves and powdered cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, one cup orange juice, one-fourth cup lemon juice, one-third cup granulated sugar. Put tea in pot. Add water and spices. Cover for 10 minutes, drain. Cool and add the rest of the ingredients. Chill. Serve in glasses which have been half filled with chopped ice. Garnish with fresh mint leaves.

U.S. ENVOY ROPER

Negotiation of Agreement

Since the departure of the royal party Mr. Roper has thrown himself with characteristic energy into the work of the United States legation. He played an important part in negotiating the agreement between the United States and Canada covering common aviation problems of the two countries. It is likely he will sign the agreement on behalf of the United States before he leaves Ottawa, probably within two or three days.

J. F. Simmons, counsellor of the U. S. Legation, who was charge d'affaires during the interval between the retirement of Norman Armour as minister and the appointment of Mr. Roper, will probably be again in charge of the legation until Mr. Roper's successor is named.

Good Relations

Development of good relations between United States and Canada has been a labor of love for Mr. Roper. "I am convinced," he told The Canadian Press, "that the development of these friendly relations means much more than just the effect on the two countries, important as that is. Most important is the example this relationship sets for the world."

It's a Risky Business CHANGING HAIR COLOR

By HELEN FOLLETT

SOME WOMEN love to play with hair dyes. They are never satisfied with the color of their halos; do not realize that in the beauty business the very toughest job of all is to change the color of the hair. Much experience is necessary, after months of training.

Messing with Chemicals

The amateur will select a coloring agent at random, seldom taking the trouble to find out if it is the one to fulfill her needs. The effect is disappointing. She buys another product and applies it. The result may be devastating. She is messing with chemicals, and chemicals are inclined to fight. A word to the wise if your home efforts aren't exactly what you expected, go to a specialist, tell him what you have used. It may be necessary to apply a dye remover or a bleach before a new color coat can be put on.

When henna was the rage there were some terrible-looking heads in circulation. Pure henna is a harmless herb, can do no damage to the hair shafts. But it must be applied evenly the timing must be so long and no longer. It doesn't sound reasonable that the novice will get the exact shade she wants, or that the hair will not be streaked.

Touch-Up is Difficult

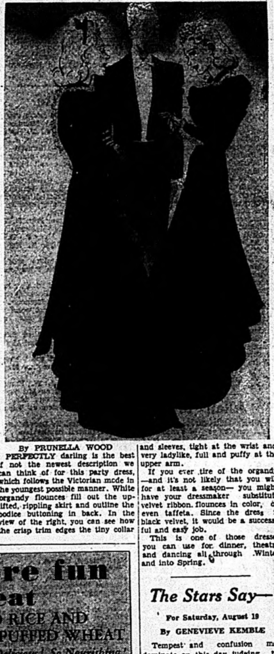
When the henna pack is applied to pepper and salt tresses, the dark hair will come out auburn, the white hair a lighter color. Better the dark and white, by far. The professional knows how to avoid such an unhappy state of affairs. Also, he will be able to deal with the touch-up which is even a more difficult job.

FLORENCE GEORGE wears her hair in its natural color

When a baby is weaned the breasts should be massaged lightly and gently with cocoa butter so they will be restored to normal contours. Cold applications will harden the tissues. Dip a small towel in cold water, apply, cover with a dry towel let it remain on until the flesh is warm and steaming.

When the breasts have never developed normally, it is difficult to increase measurement. The best means is gentle massage with cocoa butter or lanoline and vigorous arm swinging exercises. Fold the fingers in the palms of the hands, stand erect, chest high; swing the hands high and far backward, pulling hard on the fibres of the upper portion of the torso.

The Young Victorian



By PRUNELLA WOOD

PERFECTLY darling is the best if not the newest description we can think of for this party dress, which follows the Victorian mode in the youngest possible manner. White organdy flounces fill out the uplifted, rippling skirt and outline the bodice buttoning in back. In the view of the right, you can see how the crisp trim edges the tiny collar and sleeves, tight at the wrist and very ladylike, full and puffy at the upper arm.

If you ever tire of the organdy —and it's not likely that you will for at least a season— you might have your dressmaker substitute velvet ribbon flounces in color, or even taffeta. Since the dress is black velvet, it would be a successful and easy job.

This is one of those dresses you can use for dinner, theatre and dancing all through Winter and into Spring.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, August 19

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

Tempest and confusion may dominate on this day judging by conflicting planetary auspices. Although there may be stubborn obstacles, postponements or a major disappointment, yet in private life there are to be corresponding compensations. There will be need to suppress all manner of wild, tumultuous and impetuous urges, since excesses, passion and violent emotional indulgences might prove disastrous. Romance, adventure, social and domestic affairs seem to the fore. Elders are ready to cooperate.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which there may be contradictory adventures, with frustrations, delays and repressions, yet at the same time tumultuous and thrilling experiences, probably in courtship, romance or matrimony. To reap due climaxes of joy and success, circumspection, prudence and amiability are enjoined. Elders and superiors may aid and abet.

A child born on this day will be energetic, reckless, indulgent and passionate, although not lacking in stability of character or wanting refinement or social graces. Early discipline might control over-exuberances of "flaming youth."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Taming of a Shrew

Everybody pities the victim of a nagging wife. Poor man, they say, with no peace in his home, no freedom to do what he pleases, no escape from lifelong slavery to a foolish woman's restless bitter tongue. And if a man is peaceable by nature, with a dislike for quarrels and no inclination to throw plates in the direction of his wife's head, there is practically no way—or so you will hear it said, in which he can defend himself.

Canary Phillips, a wealthy farmer of Coldwater, Michigan, thought otherwise.

Mr. Phillips, in spite of his many fertile, grain-bearing acres, and the profit these netted him, was not a happy man. He had married the wrong woman. His wife nagged him.

At the close of a day's work in the fields, could he stretch himself on the sofa with a pipe? Far from it. Pipe-smoke was bad for the curtains, pipe ashes messed up the carpets, and smoking was a filthy habit anyway. Indeed, there wasn't a single innocent habit of Mr. Phillips' that his wife didn't find fault with.

Besides, he didn't always feel like going to prayer meeting. But however tired he might be, his wife gave him no peace until he "hitched up" and took her there. Nor did he always feel disposed to welcome his wife's uncongenial relatives for long visits. But this, too, he did under the most disagreeable compulsion.

The farmer therefore decided that it was only fair if his wife's life should be cramped as his had been. She was a good deal younger than he and she loved money. He'd see to it, he decided, that at his death she should inherit but a pittance. Thus, from beyond the grave he'd get even.

Ignoring banks, lawyers, wills and all that, the determied man little by little converted his riches into gold. This coin, by ingenious devices he hid. At his death in 1904 not only his suddenly impoverished widow but all his friends and neighbours were completely baffled. The prosperous farmer had left practically nothing. What in the world had become of the thousands that he had so comfortably amassed?

Thirty-five passed, and nobody knew the answer. Meanwhile the widow Phillips became the mildest, meekest woman for miles around.

The other day Laddie Kregger, present owner of the Phillips farm, plowed up a stovepipe containing $200 in gold coin. On the heels of this discovery, the three small sons of the farm's manager, found $1880 in gold, in a farmyard drain tile, and William Frankhauser, the manager's attorney, digging under the farmhouse porch, came on a metal cylindre, holding $1120 in gold.

The hunt is still on.

And remembernig all the local legends as to the hardships that Farmer Phillips once suffered, those of Coldwater's present-day husbands whose home lives are not of an entirely soothing character, look at each other with a new hope in their eyes. It's exhilarating, they think, to hear of even one man who retaliated.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Gift for Your Hostess

Giving a gift to our hostess is a most natural way for us to make a bow of appreciation of her hospitality. Some people like to take a gift with them, for the hostess or the household, when they go a-visiting. Some people like to send it with the bread-and-butter letter. Other people like to take some thoughtful little gift with them when they go, and send a more consequential gift after the visit.

The gift that we take with us is usually a book that is being currently discussed, or a group of current magazines, a box of candy or other sweets, cartons of various kinds of cigarettes, a gift-box of delicacies, some item for sports, a new and intriguing game, a box of small jars of various kinds of jellies and jams, a box of various kinds of hors d'oeuvres. And when there are children in the family there should be a simple gift for each child, or one adapted to the group of children, a new book, an alluring game, toys, a scarf or handkerchiefs.

The post-visit gift is usually a more important one. However it needn't be, for the nature of the gift depends on your circumstances and the circumstances of your visit. The most exquisite wish to have in mind in choosing this gift is that it should bring happiness to the home that has brought such happiness to you, something that will wear the monogram of your spirit. Wise guests keep their eyes open, while they are visiting, to determine a gift that will be "just the thing" to make the hostess and the household happy.

A man I know sometimes sends his hostess a subscription to a magazine, for all-year-round remembrance. While he is a guest he finds out, by discreet observation, what magazine she would appreciate having. A woman I know sometimes sends a guest book, with the name of the house or the street address stamped on the front.

Today the world of gadgets, decorative, useful, offers us a limitless choice of appropriate gifts. And usually it's a pretty easy thing to find one that exactly adapts itself to a need of the household.

The world of charmingly packaged cosmetics is another friendly one for our choice of a gift to the hostess; packages containing various beauty aids; generous-size bottles of bath salts; eau de Cologne; powders, soaps, lotions, perfumes.

And other suggestions are a flower vase; a glass or pottery candy jar; a desk accessory; a breakfast, luncheon, tea, bridge-table set; a decorative box; a painted tray or refreshment set for the porch; a thermos bottle or other picnic accessory; a bridge set; a magazine rack; any item of silver, china, crystal, linen, an accessory for a favorite family sport or game. Some people send a specialty of their city or community.

An important gift to your hostess doesn't mean an expensive gift. Its importance is derived from the fact that it is carefully chosen; that it has a delightfully personal touch; and that it has the grace of appropriateness to the hostess and to the household.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Children Readily Subject to Impetigo

Judging from the number of letters I received from mothers, impetigo must be a very prevalent disease. And since I have received lately a lot of requests for advice on this disease I think it might be a good time to discuss it.

Impetigo is extremely contagious, and it effects children more than adults because the skin is much more sensitive. However, adults do contract it, make no mistake about that, and women seem more susceptible than men for the same reason that children are more likely to have it—more sensitive skin.

It appears on a child when he has been in contact with someone who has the disease, or has touched articles on which some infected person has left secretion from his diseased skin. It appears in the form of a red spot at first, often reseumbling a mild burn or a cold sore.

The first infection generally appears on the face. A blister forms over the red area. This fills up with colorless fluid, again resembling the blister from a mild burn. Later this blister breaks, spreading this fluid over the face, and this fluid is one of the most infectious substances I know. If you come in contact with this fluid you will be almost sure to contract the disease, or if you handle some object on which some of this fluid has been deposited, infection is very probable.

Impetigo is the bane of hospitals because it is so infectious that it can't be kept out. Not long ago I was visiting a large children's hospital and the chief of staff was feeling very badly because impetigo had gotten into the institution and infected a number of patients. I made him feel better, though. I said to him: "I don't know how you could expect to be from impetigo with all your patients and visitors. Why, we can't keep it out of our nursery up in Callander although there are only five little girls there".

What I told him was quite true. We had a nasty dose of impetigo not long ago, and I don't think you could find a more sanitary, cleaner institution anywhere. We have very few visitors at the nursery, too, but one of them must have brought the infection in, and the first thing we knew all five had it.

Well, did we have a time. It was a month and a half before we had it all cleared up. They carried the scars for months though.

With the Quints, as with most children, the disease first appeared on the face, about the folds in the nose. The child scratches this sore, and then his hand carries the infection to other parts of the body he touches. So within a few days spots will appear on the legs and arms. It seems to favor the uncovered portion of the body, probably because these are the parts scratched directly by the child's infected hands.

Occasionally the disease is complicated by the presence of cracks and fissures in the skin. These are extremely difficult to clear up, for they retain the infection long after it has been cleared up on the other parts of the body.

Field Crops Are Discussed At Farmers' Meeting

Picton, Aug. 18. — A field crop meeting was held at the farm of Holmes Matthie on the Bloomfield road Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Experimental Farms Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Ontario Department of Agriculture. There was a good attendance of farmers who viewed with interest the various experiments being carried on at this farm, and also listened to various outstanding speakers explain the work.

This farm is one of those known as an illustration station and though privately owned and operated is under government supervision with reports made weekly.

D. S. Blair, fruit expert, gave some interesting facts concerning these stations. Records revealed that on 98 farms operating as stations, the average income of the farms was $1540 annually. Of this, 49 per cent came from cattle and dairy products, with poultry second in importance. The speaker referred to the fact that there was room for an increase in the rasing of hogs. Though Canada has a quota of two and a half million hogs on the British market, only six hundred thousand hogs have been exported.

F. J. Webster, agricultural representative for Prince Edward County, said that though prices for dairy produce was low, it was still the chief income of the farm. He noted that much less livestock was being raised in this area and from observations had come to the conclusion that proper feeding of cattle had a great deal to do with milk production.

Experiments with orchards was described by D. S. Blair, fruit exporter, and F. S. Brown, extension horticulturist.

Earl Mghton, B.S.A., of the Department of Botany, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, who is stationed at Picton, and in charge of tomato experiment plots, reported on the results of use of various fertilizers. He said that he has sixteen new varieties of tomatoes which were being tested for disease resistance, early ripening, yield and quality of the fruit.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthie served refreshments to speakers and guests.

Playoffs in the Picton Softball League have commenced. On Wednesday evening the Bloomfield Tigers and the Picton Brotherhood of Railway Clerks played at the Collegiate campus with the Tigers winning, 15-3. At Bloomfield, Picton Dominion Store and Bloomfield Royals played to 9-9 tie in a six inning game. This will be replayed and the winner will meet the winner of the Bloomfield-Tigers and B. of R.C. in the finals.

The deputation which went to Toronto to interview the Department of Municipal Affairs regarding a plan to spend $60,000 on local streets, with the federal government providing half the cost of labor, accomplished little. They were referred to the Federal government and in case they grant assistance, the Department will have to approve of the plan. The town council is meeting Friday evening to discuss the matter and if a by-law is passed, a deputation will go to Ottawa to interview the Federal Government. Should assistance be given the council will possibly let the taxpayers decide the matter.

Mrs. A. E. Calnan entertained at tea Thursday afternoon. Mrs. R. Davison presided at the tea table and the assistants were Mrs. Guy Johnson, Mrs. L. B. Calnan. Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Wm. Hamilton of Guelph, Mrs. S. J. Boldrick of Dennison, Texas, Mrs. Wm. Harvie of Midland, Mrs. D. N. Morden of Perth, Mrs. A. Howell of Winnipeg.

Dr. and Mrs. Mark Goodwin of Peterboro and Mr. and Mrs. William Goodwin of Utica, N.Y., were called to town Thursday owing to the passing of Mrs. William Hill of Athol Township, mother of Dr. Goodwin and Mr. W. Goodwin. Mrs. Goodwin had been ill some time but had been better and her death was a shock to relatives and friends. The funeral is being held in the Church of St. Gregory the Great tomorrow.

It was the first time he had ever hooked a 'lunge and it was a great disappointment to lose it.

Reds Stage Hectic Comeback To Beat Cubs 7-6 in Overtime As Cards Keep Pace With Win

Cubs See 6-1 Lead Whittled Down as Reds Show Much "Baseball Heart."

GIANTS LOSE

Yankees Beat Senators and Grove Pitches Red Sox to Victory Over A's

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

The team that wins the National League pennant year in and year out is the team that has the most "heart."

Besides having all the physical prowess that appears necessary, this year's Cincinnati club certainly has a champion's heart.

Backed to the wall last night, the Reds gallantly groped their way to a 7-6,10-inning victory over Chicago Cubs and reassured their followers that they are not going to duplicate the collapse of Pittsburgh Pirates last year.

The pressure was on the Reds. They had lost the series opener to the Cubs. St. Louis Cardinals had beaten the Pirates 4-2 during the day. Hulking Hank Leiber hit a home run with two on in the first inning and at the end of three frames the Cubs held a 6-1 lead.

Reds Tie Score

Then Cincinnati's heart started pumping. The Reds hewed the count down to a 6-6 tie in the ninth on Ernie Lombardi's double and Wally Berger's single. In the 10th Eddie Joost tripled and scored on a Dick West single after the Cubs had purposely filled the bases.

The win gave the Reds a record seven victories in their last 11 games—a pace good enough to win if maintained.

The Cardinals' conquest of Pittsburg was, in contrast, an easy effort. Besides being St. Louis' 16th victory in 18 games, it was Pittsburgh's ninth straight setback.

Dodgers Win

In the day's only other National League affair Brooklyn Dodgers crushed New York Giants, 5-1, on a five-hit pitching performance by rookie Hugh Casey. Mel Ott hit his 24th homer.

The Yankees, who probably will be Cincinnati's world series opponent if the Reds get in, followed the standard pattern in beating the Washington Senators, 9-8, in a 10-inning contest.

After the Nationals knotted the score in the eighth, the Yankees won out in the 10th when Frank Crosetti tripled, the bases were purposely loaded, and Buddy Rosar lofted a sacrifice fly. Joe DiMaggio hit his 18th home run with two on and batted in two other runs to help the Yanks sweep the series.

Browns Back Indians

St. Louis Browns came from behind in the eighth and then defeated Cleveland Indians, 6-5, in the 10th when Chet Laabs doubled Geo. McQuinn home from second.

Old Lefty Grove became the American League's undisputed pitching leader by guiding the Boston Red Sox to a 7-1 triumph over Philadelphia Athletics for his 13th victory of the season compared with two defeats.

Chicago White Sox overcame the four-hit pitching of Freddie Hutchinson and Paul Trout to beat Detroit Tigers, 2-1.

Kitchener Pucksters Leave For England

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 19 (CP)—Buddy Huber, Eddie Wilhelm and Ken Pfaff, members of last year's Kitchener junior Ontario Hockey Association team, today left for New York to sail tomorrow for Liverpool, Eng. They will play hockey during the coming season in the English National League.

Huber will play for Wembley and the other two for Earlscourt. Next month Mike Cziura and Auggie Herchenratter, members of last year's junior club, will sail for England and Joe Nelmes of the seniors may leave to play on the other side also.

Whitey Kowalski, who learned his hockey here and played last year with Hershey in the United States Eastern Amateur League, also will leave in September for the old country, to join one of the Harringay teams.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Chet Laabs, Browns: Doubled home winning run in tenth inning against Indians and also sent team's first run across with a two-bagger.

Joe DiMaggio, Yankees: Hit 18th homer with two on and drove in two other runs in beating Senators.

Lefty Grove, Red Sox: Scattered 10 hits with great effectiveness to beat Athletics 7-1 for his 13th victory.

Curt Davis, Cardinals: Held Pirates to six hits and singled in a run himself.

LIKE HEAVY SCORES

Glasgow, Aug. 18 (CP Cable) — Directors of Scottish soccer clubs are tickled over the glut of goals in opening matches last Saturday. Crowds like heavy scoring and the 44 goals chalked up in inaugural first division matches are expected to lead to bumper gates when the teams go into the second week of the campaign at the week end.

Alex Venters, hard-shooting Ranger forward who led the league with 34 goals last season, got off to a good start with a pair in the Light Blues 5-1 victory over St. Mirren but he took second place to J. Burke of Albion Rovers. The Coatbridge star scored 12 last year and held individual marksmen with three.

Ambers Sacrifices Speed, But Develops Punch for Armstrong

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—The question of whether Henry Armstrong's hands are stronger than Lou Ambers' arms is one of the most important to be settled in the Yankee stadium next Tuesday night when these two great little fighters meet in a 15-round battle for the lightweight title.

Since Henry lifted the crown from Lou just a year ago, he has had more and more trouble with his brittle bones. Ambers, meanwhile, has gone about trying to develop the knockout punch he didn't have last summer. He handed out quite a bit of punishment to hurricane Hank that August night, but it was Armstrong who won the decision and title by a pretty good margin.

But if all the reports circulating these days can be believed, Armstrong's hands are in such shape now he's likely to have to put Lou away in a couple of rounds or else try to get along as best he can against a tough rival without being able to land any really harmful punches.

Ambers, on the other hand, has devoted most of a year to trying to hit harder—hard enough to flatten Henry if he connects. He may have had to sacrifice some speed to gain power, but he has stopped such tough men as Baby Arizmendi, Frankie Wallace, Paul Junior and Honey Mellody. In that respect, he's likely to be a better Ambers than the one Henry beat.

LEAFS TURN ON JERSEY CITY FOR DUAL VICTORY

Toronto Whips Little Giants 1-0 and 3-0 in Double-Header

CUTS LEAD

Berly and Fisher are Winning Toronto Moundsmen

(By The Associated Press)

The Jersey City Giants no doubt have heard about the worm that turns, and like everybody else thought it couldn't happen to them. But it has turned and inflicted a bite that really hurt.

Through the International League season, the Little Giants lost few opportunities to kick Toronto Maple Leafs around. They had won 11 out of 16 games from the Leafs. But they suffered a double shutout last night, 1-0 and 3-0. That reduced their hold on first place to 2 1-2 games over Rochester's Red Wings, who checked Newark's winning streak after six straight with a 7-5 triumph, and three games over Syracuse.

John Berly, making his first start of the season for Toronto, blanked Jersey City with one hit in the opener last night, winning in the eighth inning when.. Mickey DeJonghe's bunt scored Bill Schuster on a squeeze play. Then Carl Fischer set the Giants down a second time with six blows and rookie Tony Sabol drove in all three Toronto runs.

Syracuse Wins

Syracuse kept well in the running for a shot at the lead when lefty Ted Kleinhans pitched the Chiefs to a 4-1 victory over Buffalo Bisons in the series opener. Ted gave only five hits and whiffed nine for his sixth win of the season and the Chiefs got to Clay Smith for five hits and three runs after seven scoreless innings.

In the remaining game, Montreal Royals also performed the turning-worm act when htey walloped Baltimore, 9-6, to end a five-game losing streak. Paced by Maurice Van Robays, who belted a triple and three singles and drove in three runs, the Royals collected 17 hits off three Oriole pitchers.

Before Tuesday night's Red Sox and Athletic game, one of the Philly scribes banged out a pre-game lead as follows: "Cronin is making a serious bid for this game....He is starting Wilson and sending eight other pitchers to the bull pen."

English Driver Hopes To Shatter Land Speed Record

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 18 (AP)—Man's assault on the world's automobile speed record of 357.5 miles per hour— now held by Captain George E. T. Eystone of England—was resumed on the hard packed dry salt beds of western Utah today.

John Cobb of London wheeled his streamlined car from its pit for an initial test run.

A glance at the slick machine, "Railton Red Lion," designed by Reid Railton, British manufacturer, showed how perfectly it was built for speed.

A year ago Railton said the 3 1-2 ton racer constructed of aluminum alloy was designed to travel 350 miles per hour, which then was better than the world's record.

Cobb piloted the 2,500 horsepower car, driven by two 12-cylinder (Napier Lion) engines, to a new mark of 350.2 M.P.H., justifying Railton's predictions, although Captain Eyston put the record up to the present figure 24 hours later in his "Thunderbolt."

Now Railton declares Cobb's machine, shipped back to England last winter to enable engineers to increase the engine rating to 2,600 horsepower, is capable of at least 360 M.P.H.

Between the Lines

Just how fast does a pitched ball, a hockey puck or other humanly-delivered missiles travel through space has quite frequently been the basis of repeated arguments and discussions around the sports table. Questions have been asked concerning the speed with which various big league pitchers throw a baseball, but they never have been successfully answered, outside of a few tests made by the Bureau of Shandards at Washington, D.C. Today, however, we find that Rex. D. McDill, an Amercian electronics engineer, had built a pitching speed meter which was recently tested by the Cleveland Indians to determine just how fast a pitcher can throw a baseball. Ultimately Mr. McDill intends to market his invention to amusement parks, etc., where the public may test their pitching arms. Whether the machine can be used to test the speed of a hockey puck in flight is not known as yet, but doubtless it will be tried on the Cleveland Barons next winter.

The speed meter device operates partly on photo-electric and other ingenious circuits, setting up a span through which the ball flies, clocking the interval, translating the interval into feet per second and showing on a plastic dial the feet per second of the flight.

The instrument proper is about eight feet long, four feet wide and six feet high. Throwers do not see the instrument itself, which will be carried in a specially designed trailer. When in operation, the trailer's rear end opens and presents a blue-canvas sponge rubber target, nine feet across and seven feet high. The target has a two-foot square hole in the middle and a six-foot plastic-faced scale standing upright next to the hole, the whole fringed with a net. When a ball lands in the hole, a light shows on the scale and a bell rings.

In a test at Cleveland, recently, Jimmy Foxx, Jim Tabor and Roger Cramer of the Red Sox threw balls recorded by the device at 122 feet a second, while the best that Ben Chapman, Julius Solters and Jim Shilling of the Indians could do was 119 feet a second. Pitchers were not included in the contest, but unofficially, Bob Feller of Cleveland threw three balls into the meter from a distance of 30 feet, with his best mark recorded at 119 feet. Pitcher Johnny Humphreys, a teammate, registered 127 feet.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, one of the greatest ball players to ever draw on a pair of spiked shoes, was born and raised in Georgia, thus came his nickname—"the Georgia Peach." However, Cobb has now deserted his native Dixieland and has taken up permanent residence in Menlo Park, Cal. "It was too unbearably hot in Georgia for us. Why we ran electric fans in every room in the house for 53 consecutive nights two summers ago," Cobb was recently quoted as saying, much to the disgust of his fellow-Georgians. Investments in a well know soft drink years ago, plus his baseball earnings boosted Cobb's holdings to well over the $1,000,000 mark. He got his start in baseball in the old Sally League.

Coach Al Laut, of the Air Force, agreed to play a possible third game in the Belleville-Flyers' intermediate O.B.A. play-off series in Belleville. Last night the Quinte League moguls met and arranged the play-offs between the Flyers and Belleville, which commences here on Tuesday next and the Picton-Napanee round, which opens at Napanee on Monday. The former series is a best two-in-three while the latter is a three-in-five play-off. Belleville and the Air Force have been rather evenly matched all season, which should assure the patrons of baseball a good series.

Do you remember when Joe Louis skyrocketted back into the circle of world heavyweight challengers when he flattened the old Boston sailor, Jack Sharkey, in three rounds at New York three years ago tonight. A year later Detroit's brown battler reached the top when he defeated champion James J. Braddock at Chicago, June 22, 1937.

Like father like son—has quite often been quoted in the field of sportsdom, but yesterday the latest report on such an incident was announced, when the Rome 'Colonels' of the Can-Am. league, sold outfielder Billy Southworth, Jr., to the Toronto Maple Leafs. Young Southworth is a son of Manager Billy Southworth of the Rochester Red Wings, and former St. Louis Cardinal fielding star.

The stage is all set for tonight's big All-Star benefit softball game between the league champion Shell "Oilers" and a squad of the best players selected from the ranks of the remaining four clubs in the league. After the shellacking Point Anne gave Deseronto on Wednesday night, in all probability "Ding" Luffman will be added to the All-Stars' hurling staff, along with Connie Harris, Jim Hunter and Steve Hook. Johnnie Mawden will ascend the hilltop for the champs and don't forget "it's a benefit game" and give liberally.

The day of wonders is not over yet. After playing mediocre ball on their present road trip the Toronto Maple Leafs stepped into Jersey City and handed the league leading Little Giants a double defeat yesterday and blanked the former Skeeters on both occasions. It was surely a red letter day for Tony Lazzeri and company. In the American League the Yankees looked anything but like world's champions as they downed the Senators 9-8 in overtime. Joe Krakauskas started on the mound for the Nationals, but was removed for a pinch-hitter and therefore does not get credit for the day's loss. In a nocturnal game at Cincinnati the Reds proved they still have plenty of "baseball heart" as they gallantly beat the rampaging Cubs 7-6 in extra inning. The win gives the Redlegs seven victories in the last 11 starts, which is tough to beat. Of course the Cards are still to be reckoned in second place as they kept pace by beating the Pirates for their 16th win in 18 games. At least this National League race is keeping up the interest, even if the Reds enjoy a 6 1-2 game lead.

Sport Spice — The St. Catharines Athletics, 1938 Mann Cup champions and top-ranking lacrosse team in the country, are going great guns again....The Orillia Terriers are still to be reckoned with, as they kept in the hunt with a 17-10 win over Hamilton....John Cobb, English speed driver, hopes to attain at least 360 m.p.h. in his "Railton Red Lion" racer on the Booneville Salt Flats today, which is really getting over the terra firma....Football news in England is sharing war headlines today as the English leagues are scheduled to open one week from tomorrow, providing, however, Herr Hitler doesn't introduce a more horrible game....Bowmanville won the first game of the Lake Shore finals....And here we leave for this evening's all-star benefit softball game to which we hope the fans are most favourable.

The R.C.A.F. will soon be augmented by 28 Westland Lysander planes, the first of which was recently tested by Pilot Leigh Capreol, left, at Malton Airport, Toronto. The planes are being built by the National Steel Car Company and are designed to assist ground troops in the time of war as well as to carry a load of bombs. The first of the 28 planes to roll off the finish line is shown above, just before undergoing its initial tests by Pilot Capreol.

EXERT INFLUENCE

"But I am completely convinced that it is only the form of our participation in such a conflict which would be the matter under debate, and that declaration of neutrality would be as futile as unfortunate, for it would not be ourselves who would decide our neutrality but the aggressor nation" he said.

Mr. Massey, declaring Great Britain's foreign policy to be a policy of peace, said Great Britain has felt "that in the interests of peace it can no longer postpone the assumption of definite commitments."

Canadian Contribution

"I suggest that we in Canada may well consider whether in the interests of peace a similar contribution ought not to be made," Mr. Massey continued. "The trouble with no commitments is that it deprives one of the power of exerting one's influence in the direction of peace.

"It is no use thinking that the conclusion of commercial or other business treaties will in itself accomplish anything in the field of foreign affairs. Something more is required than mere willingness to be friends within the limit of existing tariff structures. Something more positive may bee needed if anything is to be accomplished.

"This country is not devoid of influence if it has the determination to exercise it. That such influence might well become decisive, no one can with certainty deny."

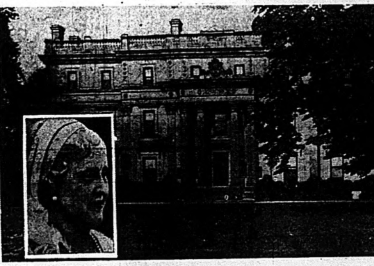
Most Influential of Dominions

Canada's policy then should be an "active policy" Mr. Massey contended, and Canada should be "the most influential of the Dominions."

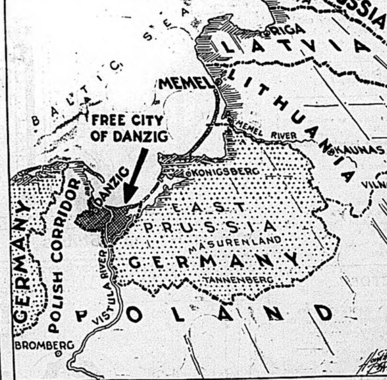
G. Raymond Booth, Secretary of the Canadian National Committee on Refugees, suggested in an address to the Institute that a non-partisan and representative board be appointed by the Dominion Government to invite 100,000 refugees to Canada within the next 12 months.

"Politically and economically, Canada is geared to a population of at least twice its present size," Mr. Booth said.

An influx of refugees would be "new business" to the Dominion, he asserted.



A view of the front of the beautiful mansion on the Vanderbilt estate at Hyde Park, near the ancestral estate of President Roosevelt, which may soon become another "Heaven-on-the-Hudson" for Father Divine and his "angels". The Negro leader of thousands of his race who believe he is God, is negotiating the purchase of the estate for a reputed $500,000. Father Divine wrote to President Roosevelt to ask if the president had any objection to the proposed purchase and was informed that it is the privilege of any citizen of the United States to buy property wherever or whenever he can. Mrs. Margaret Van Alen, present owner of the estate, may refuse to sell it to Father Divine according to reports.



The eyes of the world are now turned on Danzig, long a source of controversy between Poland and Germany. Having his demands for the return of Danzig and a corridor across the Polish corridor to East Prussia rejected, Chancellor Hitler is now reported to have changed these demands to include the entire Polish corridor and the Teschen area as well. Fears are felt that some Nazi action to seize Danzig is being contemplated anew by Germany despite England and France's military guarantees to Poland. Feverish diplomatic activity is reported to be now taking place in all the European chancellories as the Danzig questions rapidly nears a solution. Whether that solution will be a peaceful one or not still remains to be seen.

IN A BIG WAY

HELEN WORDEN

Flossie Dell is to provide the next star for the Broadway firmament. Jimmy Boyle's stubby fingers tapped the typewriter keps in jerky tempo. "Hey! you louse!" he shouted to Bill Gates(movie editor, a couple of desks up the line. "Did you ever pick a winner?"

"Softly, Mr. Boyle, softly! Your language is hardly that of a gentleman. You were saying—?"

"I've picked a winner!"

"What!"

"A winner! Flossie Dell!

"Who?"

"Flossie Dell. The blues singer at the Hollycrest."

"You poor sap!"

"I said the blues singer at the Hollycrest."

"Sorry. I heard you the first time. ...She's nothing to write home about."

"Listen to me!" Jimmy Boyle's husky voice deepened. "I'm telling you, Bill. That's a girl what's a girl."

"You're crazy! She's punk on looks. She can't sing and she's a nobody. Tell me another bed-time story."

Jimmie told it next day in his column. And just in case she might miss it, he read the column to Miss Dell that night at the Hollycrest.

She yawned a little. "It's very nice of you, I'm sure, Mr. Boyle to say such swell things about me!" Jumping up—"Gee! There's my cue!"

He waited till she finished singing. "Come on, baby," he begged. "Sit down and we'll drink to big movie contracts for little girls."

"It doesn't look well, Mr. Boyle," Flossie objected. "And besides I have to think of my figure." She stared at Jimmie's two hundred pounds. "You should think of yours."

The next noon Jimmie passed up corned beef and cabbage at O'Rourke's.

"Training for a screen test?" asked Bill.

"What's the big idea, Boyle?" the managing editor demanded when that day's column came out. "Turning press agent for a d—d night club singer?"

"She doesn't need one, Boss. She's marvelous! Have you seen her?"

"No! And I don't want to see you around here, if you plug her any more."

"Not a bad column you had in today's paper, Boyle." Tommy Leonard, Hollycrest's master of ceremonies, said that night. He patted Jimmie on the back. "Now that you've spoken of it, I can see possibilities in the girl myself."

At the end of a week Jimmie had lost fifteen pounds. "Do you see any difference, Flossie?"

"No. I don't." She shrugged her shoaulders, then snuggling up close to Jimmie, "I might, if you wrote more about me. You're the only fellow that has the right slant."

It was three o'clock in the morning when Jimmie finished his column.

"The beautiful and talented Flossie Dell, scintillating blues singer of the Hollycrest, continues to draw record crowds," was his lead.

When the first edition came up the managing editor sent for Jimmie.

"Write a new lead for the next edition, Boyle!" he roared. "And stop at the cashier's desk for your pay the next time you write up Flossie Dell. I'm giving you one more chance. After that, you're fired!"

In the evening Jim was waiting outside the Hollycrest when Flossie came to work.

"Seen this?" He handed her a clipping of his first edition column.

"No". She held it up near a street light. The lamp that shone on Jim's column brought out the cheap prettiness of her blond hair and red dress.

"Gosh, Kid! I'm nuts about you!" Jim put his arms about her, "Let's give the old marriage game a chance. How does a license for two at the municipal building tomorrow strike you?"

She slipped away from him. "When I fall," her voice was taunting. "It's going to be for a real guy!"

"Meaning anyone in particular?"

"Yes."

"Who?"

"Tommy Leonard. I'm going to marry him!"

The red that Jimmie saw wasn't Flossie's dress. "You poor simp!" he shouted. "You don't know a real guy when you see one!" He caught Flossie by the shoulders, shaking her thin obstinate little body until her breath came in gasps. "I'm a real guy! Do you hear that?" He was sobbing. "I'm a real guy!"

Jim's desk was covered with torn bits of paper the next morning. Paper that he continued tearing into threads, sitting, slumped down in his chair. Paper that had been stories of Flossie Dell.

Sweeping the litter to the floor. Jim reached in his desk for a photograph. It was a picture of Flossie. With a swift gesture he ripped it half.

"Say, Boyle." The managing editor called. "I was wrong about Flossie Dell. She really is a comer. Write a column on her in a big way!"

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was looking at the headlines in pop's newspaper at breakfist this morning on account of having got a hold of it first, saying to pop, My goodness Willyum, the Japanese have dropped another bomb on another British ship.

Think nohting of it, they'll apologize for the mistake and wont even send in a bill for the wasted bomb, pop said. The Japs always were noted as being naturally polite little people, and in these days of undeclared wars their politeness comes in very handy, because of course even an undeclared war gets a little ruff sometimes in the general excitement. Our football players could add a lot of polish to the game if they'd only inject a little gallantry into the rules for next season. For instants cant you see the difference between having your face stepped on with a sincere, Awfully sorry old chap, and just having your face stepped on in silent take it or leave it spirit? he said.

Neither way appeals to me, thanks, ma said, and pop said, Frenhmen have politeness in their blood, too. A French soldier wouldn't dream of taking a stab at you withouet murmuring pleasantly, Pardon my bayonet, wich is surely much more agreeable than hearing an impolite voice barking, Get off my bayonet, I need it to furnish my living room, pop said.

The whole thing should be stopped, ma said, and pop said, I believe you're right, but meanwhile if we must have wars let us observe the forms and graces of good manners. I understand that a certain commander in chief is going to order a little abestos tag attached ta every bomb, bearing the message, This hurts us more than it does you, and we are sure you will make a graceful spdash.

And he took back his paper and folded it up and left for his office.

Toronto, Aug. 17—(CP)— Gerald Lowe, 12, said today he didn't know whether it was "fear or luck" that prompted him to lie flat on his stomach on the road as a large ice truck passed over him last night. When the truck stopped, the boy crawled unscathed from under it. His home-made "scooter" was struck by the truck and smashed.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 18—(AP)—Light selling, blamed principally on further European "war crisis" fears, cut stock prices down a few more notches in today's market.

An early attempt to rally the list met with scant response and, when motors and aircrafts began to give way, the rest of the list followed. Declines ran to a point or so for leaders near the fourth hour, with a handful of issues down 2 to 3.

Among softer spots in the share list most of the time were Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Goodyear, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Western Union, Westinghouse, Air Reduction, General Electric, Allied Chemical and Philip Morris.

Steels, rails, utilities, coppers and oils were, on the whole, fairly resistant.

Marked down a little among Canadian shares were McIntyre Porcupine, C.P.R. and—in the bond market—Dominions 4s. Dome moved against the trend with a small gain.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 18—(CP)— A sprinkling of new 1939 lows—chiefly in the western oil and gold groups—dotted the Toronto stock exchange board today as the market suddenly dropped lower at midsession. Volume picked up after a slow opening and sales approximated 390,000 at the end. Indices fell in all groups.

Noranda, off a full point at the opening, descended further in later trade. The high-priced golds sold off fractions but juniors showed wide losses. Base-metal shares, firm in early dealings, turned weak. Losses also predominated the industrial section.

The senior oils were irregularly lower.

Home Oil and Calgary and Edmonton boarded losses of 10 points or more in the western oil group.

Sales at noon totalled 161,000 and an hour later jumped nearly 100,000.

News of the Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 18—Butter and cheese continued to drift downward in price yesterday on the Toronto open produce market, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Eggs remained steady in fair trading.

The butter market was quiet and easier, and although receipts were again light, demand was spotty and decidedly limited. Sellers found it difficult to interest buyers in their offerings. First-grade creamery solids slipped to a range of 21c to 21 1-4c, and retailers' prices on No. 1 creamery prints took a corresponding drop. Sales of Western butter were made at 21 1-2c lb.

Eggs were steadier in undertone, although no change in prices occurred. Receipts were ample for buyers' requirements and were kept moving without difficulty. Trading was fair, with good eggs receiving most of the demand.

Montreal Eggs Firm

Montreal, Aug. 18 (CP)—Eggs were little firmer on top grades in quiet trading on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Cheese and Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter held steady, but creamery butter prints and solids eased a bit. Quebec No. 1 potatoes were unchanged, while Quebec No. 2 dipped about 10 cents.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-4-22 3-4 cents a pound, and solids for 21 3-4-22 1-4 cents. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21 1-4c-21 3-8c. Receipts: Nil.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 10 3-4c. Quebec white was quoted at 10 1-4c and colored at 10 3-8c. Receipts: 4,036 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 27 1-2-28c a dozen for A-large, 26 1-2c for A-medium, 21c for A-pullets, 19c-20c for B-large, 15c for C. Receipts: 897 cases, including 504 export.

TYPHOID OUTBREAK STARTS PROBE

Woman Is Isolated at Hamilton for Investigation as Possible Typhoid Carrier

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 18 (CP) — City health officials wondered today if they had on their hands the case of another "Typhoid Mary" Mallon.

Under investigation in the possibility that she may be a typhoid carrier and responsible for the illnesses of several employees of a Hamilton factory was a woman who previously worked in the factory cafeteria. Dr. James Roberts, medical officer of health for the city, refused to comment on the fact the woman had been isolated.

Of eight persons taken ill recently a the factory, six have been discovered to be suffering from the first cases of typhoid reported here in many years. A seventh is believed to have typhoid, while the eighth is suffering from another ailment.

At various times Ontario health officials have been forced to place under close safeguards persons who have been diagnosed as typhoid carriers. Three Toronto carriers are watched closely in their homes and allowed to touch no food.

Mary Mallon, who was proved responsible for 54 cases of typhoid before her death last year, was the most famous of typhoid carriers. "Typhoid Mary," an Irish cook, spent most of her life in New York and in later years was under close confinement, allowing scientists to use her as a human guinea pig.

WILL NOT DISCUSS

Here was no statement as to whether the British government might have in mind a general conference of these signatory powers.

A government spokesman said considerable progress had been made in the Tokyo talks toward Anglo-Japanese agreement on police control in Tientsin—one of the differences which led to the Japanese blockade of the British and French concessions.

Chinese Currency

Since then, the official explanation related, the Japanese have demanded that Britain prohibit the use of Chinese national currency in the Tientsin concession and further that Britain should hand over Chinese silver reserves in the concession amounting to about 4,000,000 Canadian dollars.

"Britain has reached a conclusion that not only is it impossible to regard these questions as purely local issues," the spokesman said, "but they must be regarded as issues which vitally affect the interests of other powers.

"Therefore no useful results can be attained by pursuing these matters on a purely Anglo-Japanese basis.

"In other words, if there are to be further discussions of these matters arrangements must be made to take into account the views of other powers. These questions cannot be excluded from any final discussions, but all parties to the nine-power and other relevant treaties must be given an opportunity to express their views.

"This decision was reached entirely by ourselves. Other parties to the nine-power treaty are now being informed."

POLICE COURT

"Make it six instead," interrupted an old offender who was convicted of a third offence intoxication charge in today's local police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., after the accused had been sentenced to three months in the common jail.

"Are you sure you know what you are asking for?" enquired Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C. of the accused, who showed distinct results of excess drinking. The accused nodded his head in acknowledgement and returned to the cell block unaccompanied.

Three charges of minor violations of the Traffic Laws found written pleas of guilty accepted when the fines were enclosed.

The day's court was given over to a subsequent Juvenile Court, when seven local lads were arraigned before His Worship on charges of theft. Three were charged with the stealing of a battery from the Trudeau Motor Sales lot, while the remainder were facing charges of breaking and entering Pauley's drug store and stealing articles therefrom. The parents of the children had been requested to appear on their behalf and when two of the lads arrived in court without their parents, His Worship enlarged the entire proceedings until September 8th., but added a word of warning to the miscreants regarding their good behaviour during the period of enlargement.

A non-support charge, that was also laid over, concluded the proceedings.

Chained Son to Bed For Month to Keep Him Out of Garden

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 18—(AP)—A 63-year-old farmer began a 10-day jail sentence today on a charge of chaining a son, 22, to a bed for a month "to keep him out of the garden."

Police said Daniel Day also explained he confined the young man in his bedroom in an effort to prevent him from being taken to a state institution where the father had been a patient and where his mother had died. Police said the son, Roy, was mentally unstable.

Brought into court on a charge of assault and battery, Day said he chained Roy "to keep him out of the garden—he would trample it down."

Andrews said the men had been drinking. Martinez fell asleep on a sofa and was burned when the couch caught fire from a cigarette. Hazzard placed Martinez in a bathtub and turned on tre hot bathtub and turned on the hot Richard W. Grimes, assistant medical examiner, said Martinez died of burns caused by scalding.

O. Ellis was hurled to the pavement and sustained a minor abrasion of the left knee. Fortunately the machine was equipped with crash guards which absorbed the bulk of impact and saved the officer from more serious injury.

T. O. Ellis was proceeding south on Front Street, when a motor car driven by G. M. Beatty, Latta, emerged from out of the Kresge parking lot gangway into the centre of the street and directly in front of the oncoming motorcycle. Mr. Beatty later assured the officer he could not see proceeding traffic owing to the parked automobiles north of the gangway.

Sherriff, Toronto, one mile east of Marysville, shortly after 1.00 a.m. today. No injuries were sustained, although the left sides of both vehicles were damaged considerably.

WOULD WIPE OUT SCOURGE OF BLINDNESS IN INDIA

London, Aug. 18 (CP)—Action to wipe the scourge of blindness from India is demanded by the National Institute of the Blind, in reporting that 5,000,000 persons there are either totally blind or have seriously impaired vision.

"There is no country in the world where blindness is so widespread or so little is being done to prevent it," says Sir Michael O'Dwyer, the Indian administrator, in a foreword to the Relor, "Blindness in India."

It took comely Helen Brown, 20, of Toronto, six weeks, 40 pencils and miles of adding machine tape to count 945,843 words in 37 plays, 5 poems and 154 sonnets while preparing Shakespeare's complete works for use as copy in the Canadian National Exhibition's non-stop International Typewriting Marathon at Toronto, August 25 to September 9th.

Immorality in Camp Of Bund Charged

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—Nineteen-year-old Helen Vooros told a Congressional committee today there was "immorality" in a German-American Bund camp on Long Island, N.Y., and that she quit the Bund because "the leaders wouldn't let me alone."

"They planned to attack me," the former Bund youth leader said. "The immorality of the entire movement appalled you so—?" Representative Joe Starnes (Dem.-Alabama) put in, starting a question.

"It disgusted me," she said, cutting Starnes off.

Miss Vooros made the allegations of immorality in telling about camp Siegfried on Long Island. She said the girls' and boys' sections of the camp were only 30 feet apart.

"And that caused quite a bit of trouble," she added.

Asked by Starnes whether Theodore Dinkelacker, whom she was identified as leader of the Bund's Youth Movement at the time, had done anything to stop "immorality," she said:

"He did not consider it immoral. "Later I found out that it was 'noble'."

KINSMEN RETURN FROM "FARAWAY FIELDS"

Speaking in growing terms of the splendid hospitality accorded them in the United States by officials of the World Champion Soap-Box Derby, in which Ernie Young, Belleville's entry finished third on Sunday, Cleo B. Colling, John Bean, John Ashline, and Jack Allin, members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club arrived home yesterday from Akron, Ohio.

The now famous sports classic proved as colorful as in former years, with over one hundred thousand people watching the youth of the world vieing for fame and fortune, the Kinsmen said. The Canadians were afforded a wonderful reception, and made to feel "at home" by the Akron people.

Other Kinsmen to arrive home from "faraway pastures" this week were President William Hurst and Kinsmen Don Thomas official delegates of the local club to the Kinsmen National Convention held this year at Saint John, N.B. The convention was a decided success, they state with representatives of clubs from all parts of the Dominion being present.

Finding the child in the nick of time, she breathed into its lungs until it revived.

"I don't know how long I breathed in her mouth," she said. "I just breathed and breathed and said prayers in between until Beverly began to come to."

"The GLASS SLIPPER"

by MIGNON G. EBERHART

"No," said Andy. "You've not been neglecting Brule. It's just that I think it's best for you to be seen at the opera as if nothing had happened."

"As if——" Again Rue turned abruptly toward him. "What on earth do you mean? What has happened? Brule——"

"Oh, Brule's all right. Nothing has happened. It was just a chance expression. Don't pay any attention to what I say."

Incoherence was not one of Andy Crittenden's traits. He had as a rule wit and decision. But he was also obstinate.

It meant now that whatever he had to say he found difficult and that he would take his own good time about saying it. Into the stream of traffic along Michigan with the lighted store windows looking bright and cold. There were few pedestrians, and those they saw were hurrying, bent against the savage wind.

The car drew up at last before the entrance to the Civic Opera. An attendant opened the car door. The cold wind struck against her silk-clad ankles and thin little silver sandals. Andy paused to speak to Kendal. A newsboy was near, shouting his wares above the din of motors and cars and the shouted orders of the mounted policemen. Andy turned, saw the newsboy and lingered to buy a paper and, in the cold and wind and under the great lights, to glance quickly and anxiously along the headlines. He frowned and threw the paper down and led her into the warm, bright confusion of the lobby.

No one else was in the box that night, and Rue was glad. The overture had begun.

"Everyone is here," said Andy. "Hello—there's Alicia." There was a note of surprise in his voice which Rue was aware of even as she turned to follow his look.

"Over there," he said. "With the Streeters."

"Oh, I see. How lovely she is."

Alicia Pelham was lovely; Rue thought she was the loveliest woman she had ever seen, so utterly beautiful that it was actually difficult to talk to her—you were so transfixed with admiration. Alicia was probably in her late thirties and certainly more beautiful than she had been at any time, for her beauty was the kind that richens and glows with maturity. Her black hair was shot with unashamed gray, triumphant because of her small, unlined and classically beautiful face. Her eyes were deep, brilliant gray like jewels, except that only an emerald approached their brilliancy and hardness and an emerald is green. She was tall and white-skinned ,with jet-black eyelashes which accented and never veiled the brilliancy of her eyes. Her face was pointed and small; her lips deeply crimson over incredily white and perfect teeth. She smiled seldom and faintly; yet she was a brilliant conversationalist.

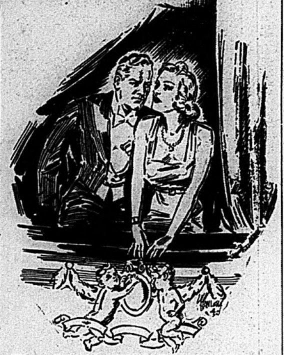
She had been for years Crystal's best friend. She had no money in later year, and Crystal had calmly supplied her with a sum which met Alicia's living expenses, and Alicia as calmly had accepted it, as well as a sustantial legacy at the time of Crystals death. They had been schoolmates; they had gone to debut parties together; Alicia had been Crystal's bridesmaid at her wedding, but Alicia had never married. Not, Rue knew, for lack of offers. Alicia Pelham could have had almost any man she wanted by lifting one of her slender, long white fingers.

She had never married; she lived in her own small, perfectly furnished apartment; she had many friends; she went constantly; her name was almost never out of the society columns. Somehow she managed, with no visible source of income, to clothe herself beautifully.

Always an intimate of the Hatterick household, she had at last become engaged to Steven Hendrie. The engagement had lasted for two years. Perhaps, after all those years, Alicia was simply and comprehensibly loath to give up her own manner of life. Certainly Steven was a man any woman would have been proud to marry. Rue's heart warmed at the thought of Steven.

CHAPTER FOUR

Rue looked at Andy. He was still frowning at Alicia. And he looked, she realized suddenly, terribly worried. In the shadow of the motor she had not perceived that. Now, in the light, she saw the tenseness of his mouth, the small sharp line between his eyebrows that, in the old days had meant he was frightened about a patient. Something quick and cold and uneasy clutched at her. All this talk in the car, then, had not been just talk. There really was something troublesome that he knew and wanted to tell her. She had been wrong to permit herself to be confused or annoyed. She said suddenly reverting unconsciously to her old manner of address:



"They say Crystal was murdered ," said Andy close to Rue's ear.

"Doctor Crittenden——"

She had not called him that since her marriage.

He turned quickly.

"Andy, I mean. I—there is something wrong. I didn't understand. You must tell me."

He hesitated and glanced over his shoulder at the pink curtains over the door leading into the box.

"All right," he said. "If you must have it. No one can hear; it's as good a place as any. Something pretty awful has happened. I—I don't know how to tell you. I've been trying to find some way. I——"

Waves of music crashed around them. Rue put her hands on the railing of the box. He said unexpectedly:

"It's about Crystal."

"Crystal?"

"Yes. It's——Lord, Rue, I hate to tell you this. But you've got to know. You see, they've been inquiring. The police came to see me. Because I was her doctor, you see. I was the attendant physician."

"I don't understand you."

Rue gripped the railing with gloved, numb hands. What monstrous thing was he trying to tell her? She heard him say, clear and close to her ear:

"They say Crystal was murdered. And you see, you were her nurse. And you married Brule."

It was sheer luck, though Rue was quite unconscious of it, that the lights were lowered just then. Vaguely she knew that Andy had taken her hand; had moved his chair closer to her, was trying to tell her more, was warning her, was saying low and urgently:

"Rue, be careful. Don't say anything. What a fool I am! I oughtn't to have told you here. Rue, Rue——"

"I was with her when she died." Her own words were dragged from some enormous, dizzying cavern.

"Look here. We've made an appearance here. The house is dark. No one will notice. Let's go. Come——"

They were outside the box. They were walking swiftly along the heavily carpeted floors. Here was the elevator. The attendant looked at them curiously. Andy said tersely, as if his voice were a wire stretched tight:

"There's a drugstore somewhere near, isn't there?"

The boy said yes, and gestured.

They reached the drug store, bright and shining and smelling of food. It was warm there; too warm. She was sitting at a small, white-topped table.

Andy must have given an order, for all at once there was a white, steaming cup at her hand.

"It's black coffee," said Andy. "Maybe you ought to have brandy. But I—you've got to listen. Drink it."

The cup shook in her hand and spilled.

The hot liquid all but burned her tongue.

"Better?" said Andy.

"You've got to listen, Rue. You've got to do as I tell you."

"When——" whispered Rue stiffly and stopped.

"You mean when did I hear it? Tonight. Just after the office closed. The police—two detectives—came to me."

She had to moisten her lips.

"Does Brule know?"

Andy looked away from her; he took a long time about drinking something in a glass. He said then:

"Yes, he knows. He—couldn't come himself. He—Rue, listen. You don't realize what it's going to be. You see, I think—please, Rue, don't look like that."

In a split second of terrifying prescience she knew what he was going to say.

"You——"

"I think they are right. I think she was murdered." He said it almost defiantly.

Yes, he was mad,. He'd been Crystal's doctor. He'd signed the death certificate. Someone's—her own—cup clattered loudly against the table.

"And," said Andy with paralyzing unexpectedness, "I want you to come away with me. Away from Chicago, I mean. Now. It's the only way." He leaned across the table, the lean angle of his jaw sharp against the bright orange of an advertising placard behind him. He said urgently: "You're in danger, Rue. It's worse than anything you ever dreamed of. You must come with me."

"With....you...." said Rue's voice again out of a vast distance.

And Andy said curtly, as if he were angry:

"With me. Now. You see, I love you."

CHAPTER FIVE

"It's true. You've got to believe it, Rue. There isn't time for—for talk. Will you come?"

"But——"

She couldn't believe him when he said he loved her, either; it was as unexpected, as nightmarishly fantastic just then, as the other incredible things he had said. It was as if it all blurred together, dreadfully confusing her.

"I've got it planned," Andy continued. "We'll go back to the house and get some clothes for you; there'll be time. Then we'll take a midnight train north. Canada, I suppose...."

"I've got it planned," Andy continued. "We'll go back to the house and get some clothes for you; there'll be time. Then we'll take a midnight train north— Canada, I suppose...."

She simply couldn't sit there quietly and listen to so mad and fantastic a plan.

"Andy, don't. This—this isn't possible: I'm not going with you. I've done nothing. Crystal wasn't murdered. I was her nurse. I know——"

"I was her doctor," said Andy.

"But you said nothing. You didn't notify the police: you didn't question. You signed the certificate; you didn't even seem surprised. You—you accepted it: If you knew it was murder——"

"I didn't know then," said Andy. "I do know now."

"How do you know? You can't know. And if she was——" Her throat closed.

Andy looked ashen.

"I can't tell you, Rue. Isn't it enough to convince you of my sincerity when I tell you that I'm giving up everything I've worked to make secure? My profession, all my connections. I'll give it up gladly to take you away."

"You can't do that. And anyway, I am not going with you. What right have you to suppose—"

"To suppose you would go away with me? No right. Except that I love you, whether you believe me or not, and I want to save you. That's all."

"But you must tell me. Tell me everything you know. I've got to know."

"You've got to believe me, Rue," he repeated. "I can't tell you everything—there's so little I know. But .... Very well you'll understand better if I—begin at the beginning. You see, when Crystal died she had been for two weeks actually on the mend; you knew that."

"Yes. I didn't expect her death just then. But it seemed so natural. There was nothing—Andy, how could she have been murdered? There was no way. There were no symptoms of anything. She—was it poison?"

"So the police say. It had to be that."

"Do you mean they've found poison?"

"No. They have to get Brule's consent to make an exhumation. But he'll have to give it. Otherwise it would look bad for him. After all, he inherited most of Crystal's property. But it probably was poison. There were no symptoms. I remember when you called me that night and said she was worse, I couldn't believe it; she'd seemed so well. And I got there just after she died. You said she'd gone into a coma; you said that over the telephone. I remember that. And I told you to call Brule, and the deuce with professional ethics about a doctor's attending his own family, didn't I?"

"Yes. And I called Brule. But we couldn't do anything. She died without returning to consciousness at all. It was about eleven o'clock. I thought she was in a natural sleep until I took her pulse for my chart. She was dead when you arrived. She died naturally; she couldn't have been—murdered," whispered Rue all at once ,as if it was a word she could not speak aloud.

"I thought it was natural then," said Andy.

"If you think she was murdered you must know who did it. Who——" Again a wave of complete disbelief came over her. She said: "It isn't true! It can't be!"

"It is, Rue. I'm as sure of it as——Listen. Tonight when the police came they said—it's a crazy thing, Rue; they said they'd been getting letters; letters urging them to look into the matter of Crystal's death—and the manner of it. Letters that said she'd been murdered. So they looked up the records and found I was the attending physician and had signed the death certificate. And they came to question me. They'd already talked to other people, too; had inquired into the circumstances of Crystal's life—her relations with her family, everything.

"Well, the main point of evidence was that one of the servants had told them that she was definitely better and that everyone was surprised when she took so sudden a turn for the worse and died. I was surprised when she died that night; but Brule—Brule wasn't. Naturally I reproached myself; I didn't know where or how I'd made a mistake, but I reproached myself bitterly for not handling the case right. My patient died, and she was Brule's wife. And Brule's been—so much to me."

So was Brule's wife, thought Rue.

"I was—horribly upset. You remember that."

"Yes, I remember. I remember that you and Brule talked of it. And that Brule reassured you."

"Yes, he did, didn't he? He said she'd never been strong; had never had much resistance."

"Why do you think she was murdered?"

"Because—because that accounts for it, Rue. Poison. That accounts for her death. As nothing else ever did."

"You were not satisfied then that her death was what Brule said it was."

"No," admitted Andy.

"I accused myself of everything; I told myself that I had let myself be swayed by Brule's diagnosis when I ought to have sought further myself. Oh, don't misunderstand me: I'm not trying to alibi myself; I'm not blaming Brule. And God knows I didn't suspect murder ....I've always let Brule influence me; he's done so much for me. I owe him loyalty."

"I am Brule's wife," said Rue. "I can't go away with you, Andy—and even if this is true, if Crystal was murdered, I still can't go. I didn't murder her."

CHAPTER SIX

"Listen, Rue." Andy was white and tense. He said rapidly: "You are Brule's wife and you may think I'm failing in loyalty when I tell you I love you and when I ask you to go away with me. But there are greater loyalties than those of friendship and of obligation. And as for this—Crystal's murder—oh, lord, Rue, don't you understand? You were alone with her when she went into that coma; you said then, as you said just now, that you thought it was a natural sleep; that you only discovered it was not when you went to take her pulse for the ten o'clock chart note. You were alone with her; she was all right better when I saw her at six and when the day nurse left at seven. Brule said he came in about nine and you told him she was asleep. At something after ten you called him, and she died shortly after. You had been alone with her all that time; she would have taken anything you might chosen to give her, thinking it was medicine. And then you see, in the eyes of the police you had a motive. You married Brule."

"I gave her nothing. I didn't——"

"I know you didn't Rue. I believe you; if—if I had seen you do it with my own eyes I'd still believe you. But that's the situation."

"I must go home. I must see Brule. Where is he?"

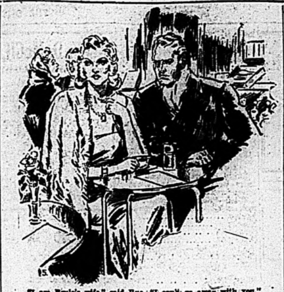
A shadow like a veil dropped into Andy's eyes.

"I'm not sure. I think he'll be home late."

"Why didn't he come to tell me?"

"Because — there were things Brule had to do."

The door of the drugstore opened sharply, and a cold blast of air swept in upon them. A man lounged toward the soda fountain and gave them a quick, oddly observant look which seemed to take in every detail. Andy said quietly: "Come. I told Kendal to call for us in about half an hour. He'll be at the door soon."



"I am Brule's wife," said Rue. "I can't go away with you."

Did the man leaning on his elbow there at the soda fountain actually turn to observe Rue covertly as she passed? Or did she only imagine it?

They went into the night-lighted, cold street with the wind seizing viciously upon them.

"Was that a—detective?" The wind snatched her words and hurled them eerily into the shadows, but Andy heard.

"No. Why should he be a detective?" But it was too quick a denial, she knew she had voiced his own thought.

The wind hurled her blue-and-silver train around her ankles. She grasped the soft furs closer about her throat. Andy, holding his hat against the onslaught of the wind, said something unintelligible but with a surprised note that caught Rue's ears.

"What——"

"Nothing. I thought it was Alicia Pelham. There ahead, getting into a motor."

She followed his look. Half a block ahead a car had stopped just before the lighted entrance to the opera proper; she had the barest glimpse of a woman's trailing skirts as she got into the car; the attendant closed the door; the shadows from the tall pillars obscured the little scene, but as the car swept away from the curb Rue said:

"It's Brule——" and stopped.

Andy did not reply. Rue added quickly: "It looked like Brule's coupe. It couldn't be, of course. I'm going home, Andy."

He was looking up and down the street, with its slanting subway entrance.

"Kendall ought to be here soon. Ah, there he is now."

The limousine paused quietly beside them. Andy opened the door and gave the attendant a tip.

The door closed behind them and the car moved off slowly. Andy said: "You're shivering. You are trembling," and took her suddenly in his arms.

His warm cheek was against her cold one. He said against her mouth, "I love you. Rue, Rue...." and kissed her.

Kissed her long and hard and drew away to look into her face through the dark and then kissed her again.

When Brule kissed her he did it swiftly, formally, when others were watching and he had to—a mere brush against her cheek.

Brule. She moved to escape Andy's arms and he held her.

"Nothing matters now, Rue, but you. Don't think of Brule. Think of yourself. I love you so,, dear. You—you were married to Brule so suddenly, no one knew. I didn't know anything of it until he told me—and then it was too late; it was the day before your marriage. What could I do?.... You must have known I loved you, Rue."

Unwillingly, irresistibly, she replied.

"No...."

"Back in the days when you were at the hospital—remember? I used to watch for you when I went along the halls and sat at the chart desk. Among all the white uniforms and white caps I always knew the little square set of your shoulders; the smooth knot of gold hair under your perky little cap. I used to make excuses to talk to you; I would complain a little of this or that—and hope the other nurses would leave so I could talk to you alone. I—I didn't know for a long time that I was in love with you. Not till just before Crystal's illness. You must go with me, Rue. At once. There's no other way."

She felt all at once quite cool and collected; frightened, conscious of catastrophe, but conscious also of the need to gird herself to meet it. She said:

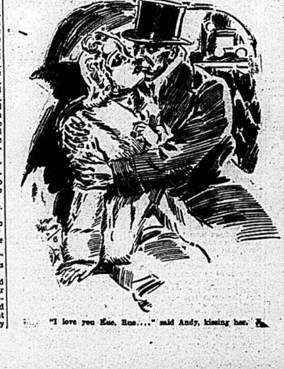
"That would be running away. Leaving Brule when he needs me."

"Brule!" cried Andy. "Rue, you don't understand—"

"We can't leave, Andy. I understand that. It would be mad. It would be—would be like a confession of guilt."

Andy was at last beaten down, sullen, silent.

(To be continued)



"I love you Rue, Rue...." said Andy, kissing her.

DEMOCRACIES WATCH MOVES IN MID-EUROPE

141.74 M.P.H. Record on Water Made by Campbell

Sir Malcolm's Bluebird II Hits Top Speed of 142.85 on First Trip and 140.52 Miles on Return Trip of Measured Mile

LAKE GLASSY SMOOTH

Proof of Speed in Type of Hull Used Important as it Ensures Greater Safety for High Speed Work, Campbell Says

Coniston, England, Aug. 19 (CP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell shattered all existing speed records on water when he roared over Lake Coniston today in an average time of 141.74 miles an hour for two trips along the measured mile.

Bluebird II, with the engine which the late Sir Henry Seagrave used seven years ago, hit its top speed on the south run when Campbell was clocked at 142.85. He came back in 140.62.

When Bluebird went past the last buoy, Sir Malcolm tore off his goggles and pushed up his thumb to show he felt the record had been broken.

Campbell had everything in his favor. The late was glassy smooth. By the time they carried him out to the waiting Bluebird the mist had risen. He warmed up his motor for about a minute, gave her the gun and came up the lake to glory.

Later Sir Malcolm said:

"There is no question of the importance and value of the lessons learned from the use of this hull. It ensures greater safety for high speed work, and I am certain that the design can be included for flying boat hulls.

"I shall do no more trials here. We have found out everything we want to know about this design. The 'plane three step hull' has proven an absolute success."

Commander Peter Du Cane, who built the hull, said the boat had lived up to all expectations, and that he agreed with Sir Malcolm they were on the fringe of a new era of speed on the water.

Icing on airplanes! When the air temperature is 36 degrees or less and moisture is present ice may form on propeller blades, wing and tail surfaces, and even in the carburetor. Ice is kept out of the carburetor by heat. To keep the propeller from icing the Army Air Corps use an ingenious device which slings an anti-icing fluid on the blades, thus preventing ice forming. The wings are equipped with rubber "shoes" at the critical places. These shoes are provided with cells which are inflated progressively, breaking up the ice coating which are then blown away.

Sir Malcolm Campbell, famous international speedboat driver whose "Bluebird II" flashed to a new world's record of 147.75 miles per hous yesterday, at Coniston Lake, England.

AFTER SPEED RECORD

John Cobb, noted British racer, has ready his 2,6000 horsepower Railton, for an assault on the 357.7 miles-per-hour record for the measured mile at Bonneville Salt Flats. Last year Cobb covered the distance at a speed of 350.2 miles-per-hour in the same car. Yesterday he went 352.94 m.p.h. but the run was not official. The record is 357.7 m.p.h. held by Captain Eyston.

SUN SPOT CYCLE GRADUALLY ENDING; GREATEST SINCE 1870

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 19 (AP)—The curtain gradually is lowering on the greatest sun spot show since 1870.

The current 11-year cycle presented some of the largest spot groups ever observed, easily seen without the aid of a telescope. Twenty-five or more exceeded an area of $1,1774,000,0,0 square miles each.

For the first time short wave wireless fadeouts were linked directly to eruptions occurring near sun spots. These fadeouts ranged from 15 minutes to half an hour.

Telegraph and telephone service was disrupted at intervals by magnetic storms on the earth caused by solar spots, and aurora borealis displays were seen as far south as the Mexican border.

Ships' compasses behaved erratically at times.

AUTO PRODUCTION IN CANADA RISES

Ottawa, Aug. 19—(CP)—Automobile production in Canada in July totalled 9,135 units compared with 9,007 in July, 1938, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. Exports amounted to 6,720 against 4,893.

S.A. High-Council May Debate Command by General or Cabinet

London, Aug. 19—(CP)— The Salvation Army High Council, meeting at its Clapton headquarters to elect a Supreme Command to succeed General Evangeline Booth, adjourned again yesterday without ballotting.

The sessions will continue today and next week until a final vote is taken

It was decided that members may question nominees for the Generalship before names are put on the ballot. This decision, it was believed, would lead to a close debate between those favoring continuation of the Army's present system of command by a general and the alternative "democratic" rule by a cabinet with a general at its head.

CURB MUNICIPAL SCHOOL BOARD OUTLAYS URGED

Acting Premier Marry Nixon Would Give Councils Power over Expenditures

CRITICIZES SALARIES

Many Boards Run Wild in Construction of Costly Buildings, He Says

Toronto, Aug. 19 (CP)—The voice of acting Premier Harry Nixon was added today to that of Premier Mitchell Hepburn in the Ontario Government's attitude on the curbing of municipal school board expenditures.

Last month Premier Hepburn told a group of Ontario mayors that the government had been considering "for some time" the matter of allowing councils to have greater control over school board expenditures.

In an interview last night, Mr. Nixon concluded a criticism of Toronto Board of Education expenditures with the statement:

"It is time that municipal councils, who are held responsible for the tax rate by the public—and are certainly tax conscious today as never before—should have some measure of control over the ordinary expenditures."

Attacks "Overpaid" Staff.

Mr. Nixon declared that many members of the Toronto Board of Education staff are overpaid. He criticized the board's policy of "fixed annual increases in salaries".

"If Toronto taxpayers are satisfied, they should not continue to hold the council nor the government responsible for their high tax rate," Mr. Nixon said.

The acting premier, who is also acting Minister of Education during Mr. Hepburn's absence from the city suggested that an audit be taken of the disbursements of school caretakers who might surprise us by the amount of the emoluments they retain for themselves."

"Boards Run Into"

"Until recently there was no check or control on the capital expenditures of school boards and many ran wild in the construction of costly buildings with great assembly halls, gymnasiums, swimming pools and retiring rooms for the teachers," Mr. Nixon went on.

"This government gave the municipal board powers of veto and the result has been most satisfactory. There is no demand to have that legislation repealed.

"School trustees have been too enthusiastic and too optimistic in phases of education in which they were specialists and intensely interested, and too generous with the taxpayers' money."

700 Army Trucks Carry Troops To Camp in Kent

London, Aug. 19 (CP) — The largest transportation manoeuvre in Britain's peacetime history was in full swing today as 700 army motorized units trundled down Eastern England carrying troops from Colchester and Norwich to a camp in Kent.

The operation, which began yesterday and will end this afternoon, was part of the 4th. Division's exercises opened with the preliminary concentration of forces in the Warley area. The manoeuvre was designed largely to give officers and men experience in the handling of mechanized columns.

Pope Implores Almighty To Prevent Outbreak Of New Resort to Arms

Pleads With Statesmen to Try to Settle Their Quarrels and Avert Further War

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Aug. 19 (AP)—Pope Pius asked today that statesmen of the world try to settle their quarrels and avert further war.

Those who heard the Pope speak in Italian to a group of Italian pilgrims quoted him as saying he had "not abandoned hope that the rulers, conscious of their responsibility, wanted to spare the peoples such a serious disaster."

His hearers said the Pope advised "prudence and reserve" while awaiting development of events.

Pope Pius appealed to God to prevent the outbreak of a new war and to statesmen not to take the "serious responsibility of making appeal to force."

After a reference to the late Pope's offer of his life to God a year ago the Pope pledged himself to continue efforts toward achieving lasting peace.

Prayer to Stop War

He implored the Almighty "in his infinite goodness and compassion for the human race" to stop war "wherever it rages."

The Pontiff warned statesmen against the "grave responsibility of resorting to arms to solve their disputes. He said he would not abandon hope that "moderation and justice will prevent a conflict which, according to all forecasts, would surpass those of the past in destructiveness and moral and material ruin."

After blessing the pilgrims, the Pontiff said:

"By this blessing, we wish, in the present circumstances, and above all else, to implore peace, peace for Italy, peace for Europe, peace for the world.

"Our immediate predecessor, Pius XI, whose venerable image lives again before our eyes at this time along with the image of Pius X, made about a year ago a paternal gesture to God which stirred the world: An offer of his life.

Efforts Towards Peace

"In this present hour, in which anxiety and anguish are renewed, we ourselves—from the first day of our pontificate— attempted everything in our power to remove the dangers of war and to cooperate towards consolidation of a solid peace based on justice and safeguarding the honor of peoples.

"We even left aside—as far as was possible and as much as the duties of our apostolic ministry permitted—other tasks and other preoccupations burdening our spirit.

"We imposed on ourselves a prudent reserve in order not to make more difficult, or impossible, effort to maintain peace, conscious of what we are and all that we had and have to do in this sphere in the interests of the Catholic church and all humanity.

EIRE'S DIPLOMAT REACHES CANADA

J. J. Hearn, High Commissioner, Here to Build up Trade with Eire

Montreal, Aug. 19 (CP)—John J. Hearne, a smiling Irish diplomat who is Eire's first high commissioner to Canada, landed here Friday eager to perpetuate the good relations between the two countries and particularly to promote increased trade.

With him aboard the liner Duchess of Bedford came his wife and three tow-headed sons all under five who signalled their arrival in the Dominion by nearly breaking up a press conference with their boyish enthusiasm.

De Valera May Come.

Mr. Hearne told ship reporters that Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire possible will visit Canada this fall.

"If the Prime Minister comes out to the United States as is planned he will come to Canada as will."

Mr Hearne told ship reporters one of his main intentions during his stay in Canada is to endeavor to increase the flow of goods between the Dominion and Eire.

"We would like to see greater trade," he said. "It will be part of my work to look into the matter. We trade woollens and like goods for your grain, lumber and newsprint and possibly this can be increased."

MILLBROOK RESIDENT GETS EIGHT MONTHS

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 19—(CP) — Harry Freelove of Millbrook, charged with a serious offence was sentenced to eight months in the reformatory by Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell today.

STRUCK BY CAR DIES INSTANTLY

Wm. Loft, 72, of Tyendinaga, Victim of Fatal Accident 2 Miles West of City

Struck by an automobile when said to have been attempting to cross Highway No. 2 two miles west of the city, a man later identified as William Loft, 72, Tyendinaga resident, was instantly killed late yesterday afternoon.

Coroner Dr. G. S. Cronk ordered an inquest today after investigating the circumstances.

The car driven by A. Haslett, Ypsilanti, Michigan, was proceeding westerly when Loft, according to information given police by T. H. Chalmers, an eyewitness of the tragedy, came out of the lane of William Vassau, farmer, residing along the highway near the scene of the accident.

The deceased, Chalmers stated, looked westerly along the highway, hesitated while an eastbound car passed him, then advanced to the centre of the highway. He half-ran the remainder of the distance and was struck by the oncoming Haslett car.

The impact of the collision threw Loft on the radiator and bumper of the car which carried him a distance of 108 feet along the highway. He was dead when Chalmers and Vassau reached his side.

Haslett, elderly driver of the car, who was accompanied by his wife, stated to police that he saw Loft come out of the Vassau driveway, hesitate, as the eastbound car passed him, then half-run directly in front of his car. "I could do nothing to help myself," he told police, visibly affected. "He ran directly in the path of my car."

The radiator grill was dented, while the left headlight of the car was smashed.

At the inquest held this morning to enquire into the death of William Loft, 72-year-old Indian, of the Tyendinaga Reserve who was killed two miles west of the city last evening, the driver of the car, A. Hazlett of Ypsilanti, Mich., was absolved of all blame.

It was found, after evidence had been heard that the deceased had stepped directly in front of the machine owned by Hazlett and that the accident was unavoidable.

Evidence of two witnesses, A. T. Chambers and William Vasseau, residents of Trent Road indicated that the man had attempted to cross the highway after the passage of one car, and had not noticed the second one approaching from the west. The victim died instantly after the impact.

W. Rupert Davies Visits in Rome, Hears Pontiff's Appeal

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Aug. 19—(CP)—W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston, Ont., Whig-Standard and President of The Canadian Press was in the audience which heard Pope Pius XII make an appeal today for peace.

BRITAIN EYES BALKAN REGION AS DANGER SPOT

German Military Move in Slovakia Anticipated in London

OF STRATEGIC VALUE

Prime Minister Chamberlain Meets 'Inner Cabinet' on Tuesday to Talk on Issues

London, Aug. 19—(CP)— Great Britain eyed the Balkans carefully as a growing danger spot today while holding firmly to an attitude of calm resolve in the face of grave European developments.

Government circles were said to have expected the announced German "military possession of Slovakia" as a natural strategic move.

The country, which become a "protected state" after the partition of Czecho-Slovakia, yesterday provided the Reich with greater freedom to use it as a "jumping-off" place by ratifying a military agreement with Germany.

Tacticians pointed out that Germany, by having troops based in Slovakia on Hungary's northern border, could exert greater pressure on Budapest for co-operation in event of war.

It also was pointed out here that German military forces in Slovakia would strengthen Germany's southeastern flank automatically in case of war against Poland.

Situation in Hungary

The Balkan situation, it was said, will be prominently before the meeting Prime Minister Chamberlain plans with his "inner cabinet" here Tuesday.

Britain was represented as deeply interested in the Hungarian situation, both in the light of the Slovakia development and the consultations of Foreign Minister Count Csaky of Hungary with Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Germany and later with Italy's Foreign Minister Count Ciano and Premier Mussolini.

Meanwhile, big German purchases of copper and rubber were reported on London markets, sending prices upward.

Copper rose 18 shillings nine pence (about $4.38) to 44 pounds 8 shillings nine pence. Rubber mounted 3-16 pence to 8 3-4 pence (about 17 cents) a pound.

It was said Germany had bought more than 10,000 tons of copper and 17,000 tons of rubber in London this month for delivery in late August or early September.

BRITISH POLICEMAN WOUNDED AT SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Aug. 19—(AP)— A British policeman armed with a sub-machine-gun tonikht killed two members of a Japan-controlled Chinese police squad and wounded six others before he dropped from a bullet in his back in a fight on the international settlement border.

Police said the policeman was not seriously wounded. He was W. L. Kinloch of Scotland, a Sergeant of the settlement police. He came to Shanghai in 1938 and once was a member of the Scots Guards.

According to settlement police, Kinloch, on patrol duty along the settlement border roadway adjacent to Japan-controlled territory, was searching a pedestrian when he was shot in the back by the Chinese. It was then that he opened fire with the machine gun.

After the incident, both the settlement and Japan-controlled police concentrated forces along the settlement border and both sides protested alleged violations of their jurisdiction.

Peace for Present, Says Beaverbrook Says Danzig Should Not Cause War

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 19—(CP) —Danzig should not be the cause of war, Lord Beaverbrook said last night in an interview. The Canadian-born British publisher arrived here by plane from Digby, N. S.

"While the present international situation is difficult to define as I have been away so long and there are many evidences of preparation for war in Europe, I think peace will abide for the present," Lord Beaverbrook said.

"Danzig is an issue capable of solution and I am convinced that the Prime Minister of Great Britain will find a way to dispose of the differences that otherwise would lead to destruction."

If a settlement did result in surrender of Danzig to Germany it would not be "in any respect comparable to the incidents leading up to the disposal of Czecho-Slovakia."

"Danzig is a German city, with a German population and customs. Also it has no strategic value."

Lord Beaverbrook remarked that his neighbor in Surrey, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Prime Minister of Canada, is "splendidly regarded in England," if he decided to take part in public life there he would receive an enthusiastic reception, he said.

"In the event that war should eventually materialize, Mr. Bennett will be called on to take an active part in the affairs of the nation. He will have no choice."

French Concerned Over Occupation Of Slovakia

Government 'Is Taking Necessary Measures for to Meet Any Eventuality—Britain and France Resolved to Block Any Attempt at Blow of Force

ACTIVITIES IN DANZIG

News Agencies Carry Stories of Troop Concentrations in East Prussia and Shipments of Armaments from Hamburg Daily

Paris, Aug. 19—(AP)—Concern was felt in official circles here today over reports of German military preparations.

Informed quarters said the government "from now on is taking the necessary measures to meet any eventuality." Newspaper and official information stressed British and French resolution to oppose "any attempt at a blow of force under whatever form it may appear."

Dispatches from several news agencies told of German calls to reservists, troop concentrations in East Prussia and requisitions of trucks, automobiles and materials.

German armament shipments were said also to be leaving Hamburg almost daily for East Prussia.

Danzig Nazis, these reports said, were erecting barbed wire to complete military reparations in that city.

Anti-Polish Agitation

Berlin, Aug. 19—(AP)—Inspired statements here alleged today the Polish government had completely lost control of its affairs— the same accusation that was hurled a year ago at Czecho-Slovakia as the Sudeten crisis approached.

Diplomats saw in the increasing Nazi animosity toward Poland and apparent swift building of Germany's back fences in southeastern Europe the possibility that the moment was ripening now for a decisive turn in the Danzig issue.

The Nazi press, continuing its anti-Polish campaign, rejected any idea of a conference to settle the quarrel with Poland over the return to Germany of the Free City and Pomorze, the so-called Polish Corridor.

Pontoon Bridge 'a Symbol'

Berlin newspapers hailed as a "grand achievement of German technicians in Danzig" the new pontoon bridge which was to be anchored across the Vistula River today. Nazi commentators said the bridge, to link the Free City and German East Prussia, demonstrates Danzig's "vivid connection with the rhythm of life and work of the Reich remains untouched by the drawing of unnatural borders."

This came up on the heels of a parade of 1,500 "Saheimwehr" (home defence) men in Danzig last night with trucks and field pieces.

Nazi district leader Albert Forster told them to be proud of their weapons, which he called "the most modern of their kind in the world."

Commander Joachim Goetze replied: "We do not want to parade. We want to fight. We want to fight for that which is sacred to us—for German blood and the homeland."

Autumn Manoeuvres

It was reported also that the German first army corps would begin its autumn manoeuvres before Aug. 27, the date set for Fuehrer Hitler's address to veterans of the battle of Tannenberg on the hist-

DOZEN DROPS OF WATER HEAT ROOM

Detroit, Aug. 19 (CP)—A dozen drops of water is all that's needed to heat a room, according to Glenn Watson of Detroit, provided you employ Watson's latest invention. Motivated by electricity the invention employs the ancient water wheel principle and a new departure in heating units. Coffee can be made in 30 seconds and a steak grilled in 80 seconds, the inventor claims. The heater turns a film of water into steam as soon as it touches the heating surface. The steam is condensed on contact with the walls of the heating chamber and returns to its its source.

He was exhausted when he reached the forbay of the Welland pumping station and rescued by officials of the waterworks department.

Spending seven years in the public schools of Northern Ontario, he was the first principal to officiate at Tamworth Continuation school. He attended Hamilton Technical Institute for a period of twelve and one half years attending night classes conducted at that institution by the University of Toronto.

Letters to the Editor

PROTESTS NUISANNCES OF CARS

Foxboro, Aug. 17, 1939.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir: May I, through the medium of your valuable paper, draw to the attention of the provincial traffic police a crying abuse on this county highway? On visiting today a very critical heart case, resident on above highway, I found my patient much upset through the absolutely unnecessary and thoughtless noisiness of motorists last night. From 10 o'clock to after 12, cars were literally racing, with shrieking horns through our village street which is part of said highway. This road is so narrow that much of it is marked by the 'solid line', the rest by an interrupted line, but that seems never to deter these midnight motorists from passing each other at racing speed at all times.

Personally I was myself kept awake from 10:30 till after 12 by this same malicious turmoil and can vouch for its extent. Can nothing be done to abate this nuisance? If the interrupted line were made 'solid' and the law in that regard rigidly enforced, I believe it would solve the problem.

One does not wish to be a crank but there have been two accidents along here already this summer and there will certainly be a fatal one soon unless something drastic is done.

May I, in the name of the sick and for the sake of our children who play along this narrow road, plead that the authorities take action "at once"? Thanking you for your assistance,

I am, yours sincerely,
P. V. Helliwell, B.A., M.D.

MRS. C. FORESTELL, 82 YEARS OLD, MARKS BIRTHDAY

Relatives Felicitate Marmora Lady on Anniversary of Natal Day

Marmora, Aug. 19 (Special)—At the home of her son George in Marmora on Friday, Mrs. Catherine Forestell quietly observed the eighty-second anniversary of her birth. This grand old lady is still in excellent health and apart from an operation which she had some years ago, has never had to call upon the medical profession for assistance.

With the exception of a slight deafness all her faculties are well preserved. She still walks with a firm step and has an excellent memory. Her chief hobby is reading. Her main interests are in the church to which she belongs—she is a devoted member of the Sacred Heart congregation—and in the affairs of the village. She is a daughter of the late Mr and Mrs. Daniel O'Donnell, who came to Canada from Ireland and lived in turn at Picton and Madoc Township. Mrs. Forestell was born in the Prince Edward County town. She was married to Samuel Forestell who died twenty-nine years ago. The ten children of Mrs. Forestell are: Lewis, Guelph; Mrs. T. Comerford, Sudbury; George, Marmora; Mrs. James Cornell, Kirkland Lake; William, Marmora; Mrs. Kenneth Crutchfield, Edmonton; John, Edmonton; Mrs. R. Huffman, Belleville; Daniel, Coniston; and Charles, Syracuse, N.Y. Mrs. Forestell has 47 grandchildren and 24 great grandchildren. She has two brothers, John O'Donnell, Stirling, and James O'Donnell, Campbellford.

At the birthday supper held at the home of her son George the following children were present: George, William, John and Daniel and Mrs. Crutchfield, besides one brother John and other immediate relatives. Added to the congratulations received from the members of her family are the felicitations of a wide host of friends.

COURTESY BY POLICE TO WIN FRIENDS

Detroit, Aug. 19 (CP)—Detroit policemen and citizens alike are convinced Police Commissioner Henrich Pickert has become an expert on how to win friends while arresting people. In a pamphlet issued in an attempt to swing public opinion to a more favorable outlook on law enforcement officers, Commissioner Pickert advcated more courtesy all round. Officers were advised to treat applicants for drivers' licences more kindly, not to take traffic violations as personal affronts and to telephone persons who have reported lost articles and assure them their case has not been forgotten.

CAR RUNS INTO HOUSE ON HIGHWAY

Flint, Mich., Aug. 19 (CP)—Joe George, 56, received severe chest injuries when his automobile encountered a house on the highway near here. The one-storey house, being moved by William Phethers, was on rollers and pulled by a truck. According to Phethers the building, which filled the roadway was lighted by lanterns and two men were on the job.

BRICKLAYING STARTS SHORTLY AT HOSPITAL

Splendid Progress is Being Made on New Wing of This Institution

Busy hammers are ringing this week on the construction of one of the most modern institutions within the province, the new wing of the Belleville General Hospital.

Favorable weather conditions since the commencement of the work some weeks ago has resulted in rapid headway being made by builders, so excellent that bricklayers are expected to commence the first work on walls of the institution at the first of next week.

"We have been making splendid progress, and the local contractors have been carrying out their work speedily and efficiently. At present we are somewhat ahead of schedule, and we hope to have the building finished in record time," stated Mr. James Govan, architect, Toronto, a member of the firm supervising construction.

This week the greater portion of the foundation work on the new structure which is reaching upward on the west and southern side of the old building has been completed. Nearly all concrete has been poured in the sturdy forms, and preparations are going ahead for work on the upper stories.

A large force of local workmen is being given employment by the firm.

Fleming Family Observes Annual Family Reunion

One Hundred Sixty Members of Famous Family Enjoy Outing at Oak Lake

SPORTS PROGRAM

Featured by that genial camaraderie and good fellowship that is a heritage handed down to them by their famous forebears, upwards of one hundred and sixty members of the 'Fleming Clan' descendants of one of the proudest families of Hastings County observed the fourth annual gathering of the family at Searles Beach, Oak Lake this week.

From the far-flung sections of the county and province they came, bound together by a strong bond of blood friendship that has held them together from the time their famous ancestors first hewed an existence out of the living wilderness that was Hastings County. With them in the spirit, if not in the flesh, but mindful of the kinship that exists among them, were relatives from across the continent who sent their regrets by telegram and letter.

It was one of those family affairs that brooked no strangeness of feeling. Everyone entered into the joyous spirit of the occasion from the toddling tots to the grey-haired sires. There was fun for everyone. Sports, that enlivened the afternoon's proceedings attracted the attention of the younger member while the 'oldsters applauded the efforts of their offspring, or sat in small knots and groups and reminisced of the "good old days."

But before the general fun began, the serious note that is part of all such functions was struck when President D. L. Fleming, Belleville, gave a brief address of welcome. A report was read by the secretary, Miss Bessie Fleming in which was read the names of those who had passed on and sympathy to those unable to attend through illness. Letters of regret at being unable to be present were read from C. A. and Miss Helen Fleming, Owen Sound; Mrs. Belle and Perry Symms, Toronto; Mrs. J. A. Jocelyn, Edmonton; Mrs. Wm. Hubbell, Smith's Falls; R. A. Downey, Saskatoon and the Rev. and Mrs. David Wren, Stratford.

Following the treasurer's report read by James Haggerty, and which showed a substantial credit balance, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year. Hon. Pres., C. A. Fleming, Owen Sound; President, Harry Rollins, Belleville; 1st Vice, Volney Richardson, Stirling; 2nd Vice, Ray Grant, Belleville; Treasurer, James Haggerty, Belleville; Secretary, Bessie Fleming, Ivanhoe and Historians, Annie Fleming, Belleville, Mrs. John Clements, Ivanhoe.

Short addresses were given by Messrs Kenneth Wright, Toronto, Roy Grant, Belleville; Volney Richardson, Stirling and S. B. Rollins, Tweed.

Appreciation of the efforts of Mr. Searles to make the picnic a success was voiced by the president who announced that prizes had been donated by Annie Fleming, Belleville; Mrs. M. Girwood, Perth, R. A. Downey, Saskatoon; Kenneth Wright, Toronto; Dr. Dennison, Fort William; Mrs. Hubbell, Smith's Falls; Annie Fleming, Ivanhoe and Roy Grant, Belleville.

Following a delicious repast a splendid sports program was run off in which a large number of entries participated. The prize-winners:

Five Daughters Follow 'Dads' Footsteps

Burlington, Ont., Aug. 19 (CP)—Frank Sheppard who has been a tinsmith here for thirty years has no boys in his family to follow father's trade but Sheppard doesn't care because five of his six daughters are going into the business in a big way.

The real experts are Edna, 21, Lezetta, 22, Doris, 23, and Mildred, 25. Sixteen-year-old Vivian also is showing interest in the work. Ruby, 14, is still at school but also does a little tinsmithing in her spare moments.

"I figure it's wonderful training for the girls," Mr. Sheppard said. "They meet the public, solve all sorts of problems and have a good time in the bargain. As they got older, of course, they graduate to something else—although none of them is married yet. Lezetta is at Bible College in Toronto right now."

At one time Mr. Sheppard had 20 men working for him but he claims better work is done now by himself and the girls. "A family concern is the best consern," he said.

Byplays In Daily Living Observed Along Main Street

When cooler weather comes, the tempo of life in the city changes. Byplays on daily living were observed along the main sections:

On Front Street, a busy car driver piloting his machine through the lower end traffic, reading a morning paper in snatches as he travelled, one hand on wheel. A bawling calf whirling past the four corners of Front and Bridge Streets, peering through the smudged glass of an old type sedan. Three curious little boys engaged in digging a shiny brass object embedded in the asphalt of the main street. The curious shielding eyes against the glare of a morning sun to watch painters at work on a swinging platform in front of the city hall. Sturdy-limbed youngsters, bathing suits on shoulders, tanned to a sepia brown en route to the bathing pool on the park, collie dog with lolling tongue trailing in the rear. Grain sacks piled on the walk, and a truckload of peaches from Niagara parked at the curb and sparrows picking at the ripe fruit through the cotton mesh covering of the baskets. Tourists with bandanna handkerchiefs on head strolling leisurely through the lower section; men in shorts with abbreviated shirt tails flapping in the breeze. Yachting caps and white slacks and sailors carrying parcels. The fleet, or part of it is in.

Small boys begging a chew of tobacco, and a string of sunfish and perch carried by a juvenile fisherman. Rubber soled sneakers now smooth the barefoot boy's path over stones and stubble. Office windows in the upper stories along Front Street swinging in the breeze, and from within the busy clacking of typewriter keys. Fresh caught fish on ice, and the small truck leaving little lakes of water on the soft pavement. Two of the city's fathers engaged in a sidewalk discussion of business and on a used car lot a youthful buyer peering under the hood. Binder twine under arm, a hurried shopper strides along with a new hoe over the other shoulder. From the open door of a hardware store, the odor of oils and putty.

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY PRAISED BY ENVOY OF U.S.

Mr. Roper Says Efforts of President in This Regard Will be Historic

MUTUAL FEELING

Striking Events Witnessed in Past 3 Months Include Royal Visit to Canada and to the U. S.

Ottawa, Aug. 19 (CP)—When the history of these times are recorded the efforts of President Roosevelt to develop a good neighbor policy among nations and the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Can-out conspicuously "in the develop-ada and the United States will stand ment of understanding among our peoples," Daniel C. Roper said in a statement. The statement followed the announcement by President Roosevelt that Mr. Roper had resigned as United States Minister to Canada.

The statement said:

"I have completed the period of service contemplated when I became United States Minister to Canada last May and have resigned effective Aug. 20.

Grateful to President.

"Mrs. Roper and I are most grateful to President Roosevelt for the opportunity thus afforded us to become more intimately acquainted with Canada and its splendid people. At no time have we felt that we were in a foreign country but at all times we have felt at home, among a people of similar ideals and purposes in life to ours in the United States.

"There is every evidence that the peoples of the two countries are determined to solve their mutual problems through conferences, seeking understanding of each other's responsibilities and determined to be helpful to each other in finding the constructive way for each people to live securely and happily.

"It has been our good fortune during the three months of our sojourn in Ottawa to witness striking events in the development of human relationships. It is my opinion that when the history of these times is recorded that two events in the development of understanding among our peoples will stand out conspicuously, namely, (1) the efforts of President Roosevelt to develop the good neighbor policy among nations, and (2) the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States in 1939."

R.C.A.F. Band At Victoria Park Tuesday Evening

Lovers of music are in for an exceptional treat in Victoria Park on Tuesday night, when the band of the Royal Air Force under the baton of Flight-Sergeant Tommy Cooper will be the guest of Lieut. Fred Jobson and the Belleville Municipal Band. This splendid organization, which is some sixty pieces strong has the permission of Wing-Commander McEwan, officer commanding the Trenton base, to give residents of the city and district a musical treat.

Under the expert leadership of Flight Sergeant Cooper, the "Flyer" musicians have risen gradually during the past few years from an obscure station band to one of the finest military organizations in eastern Canada. They have given two 'command' performances before Their Majesties, the King and Queen, and in the forthcoming contests at the Canadian National Exhibition are expected to finish well up in front.

Featured in Tuesday night's program will be Flight Sergt. Horton and his electric guitar, as well as the "Flyers" orchestra. Outstanding in the band selections will be the overture to "Othello" the selection that will be played by the band in their search for honors at the C.N.E.

All-in-all it looks like a gala musical evening, and will no doubt be attended by thousands of music-lovers of the city. Lieut. Fred Jobson will act as master of ceremonies.

Skidding into the car ahead of him during a midget automobile race in Miami, Fla., Larry Varrier crashed through a fence and ended up as you see him here. However, when the car was lifted, Varrier was found in one piece and not decapitated, as it had appeared. Examination showed he had escaped with nothing worse than a few bruises.

Special Attractions Engaged for Fair

Splendid Attractions Engaged for Belleville Fair — Many and Varied — Top Notchers from Stage and Circus Will Entertain Patrons of Belleville Fair— Finest Program Yet Arranged and Well Balanced

The Fair Board this year, in wishing to commemorate the visit of their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, to Canada, have really outdone themselves in procuring a splendid group of attractions, most of whom hail from many parts of the empire. They have again contracted with the Canadian Vaudeville Exchange of Toronto to furnish and produce their grandstand performance, which they have aptly named "Revue Royale". Some of the outstanding features in this show are as follows:

THE ROYALE BALLET — Ten young and beautiful dancing girls, two of whom are from Scotland, one from England, and seven native born Canadians. They execute several very intricate and elaborate dance numbers, all of which are gorgeously costumed.

FIFI—Canada's own famous clown is one of the comedy highlights of the performance. He is really a whole show in himself.

THE AVALON TROUPE — With their double tight-wire act, which originated several years ago in South Africa, and which has since played all over the world, present one of the fastest and flashiest tight-wire acts in the business.

SIEGRIST TROUPE—Uphold the high standard of the well known Ringling-Barnum Siegrist acts. This group has rapidly gained in popularity with their unique Flying Trapee routines. Rosalie Siegrist is the youngest member, but she has accomplished many difficult tricks. They present a new routine of sensational mid-air somersaults into the hands of the swinging catcher. Really a breath-taking display of aerial acrobatics.

THE ROMANOFFS — Sensational acrobatic and teeterboard act from the steppes of old Russia. Having been featured with some of the world's largest circuses for the last few years. They bring a fast and thrilling novelty that really leaves the audience breathless at their daring.

MERRILL BROS. and SISTER—Known as the world's premier equilibrists, they offer an acrobatic balancing act, cleverly presented and beautifully dressed.

LOS GITANOS—Sensational lofty perch pole gymnasts, stars of the sawdust ring, in a thrilling and daring aerial gymnastic display.

This is but a few of the many stellar attractions to be seen at Belleville Fair this year. The whole show is embellished with elaborate and colorful scenic and lighting effects, and all in all it will be a performance long to be remembered!

PUERTO RICO

Belleville, August 16th, 1939.

The Editor Ontario Intelligencer,

Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir:—

In your issue of August 15th, an article appeared on the front page, under the headline, "No Depression In Puerto Rico."

This information was furnished by Bud Hill, previously a resident of Toronto and who has been a resident in Puerto Rico for about one year.

Regarding Mr. Hill's description of the natural beauty of the island too much cannot be said about it, which has to be seen to fully appreciate it, and the mild climate is (I think after a residence of over 30 years) unequalled.

The statement regarding our economic condition being sound, that the natives form 65 per cent of the population and that the men work approximately two months of the year, during the sugar cane cutting season, is not quite correct.

The population is 90 per cent Puerto Rico born and the balance of 10 per cent is made up of U.S Continental Americans and of other nationalities.

Approximately 40 per cent of the P. R. born make up the peon class whose daily wages are during the sugar cane harvesting season from $1.25 to $1.50 and who have been working during the 1939 sugar cane crop for a period of four months.

From a recently published book, "The Sugar Economy of Puerto Rico"—by Dr. Arthur D. Gayer, of Columbia University; Dr. Paul T. Homan of Cornell University and Mr. Earle K. James, an experienced economist, I quote the following as a brief discussion on the reliability of the principal crops of Puerto Rico:

"Sugar—In contrast to the total decline in exports, sugar exports have continued at a remarkable steady level in value, except for 1928-1929 a hurricane year. The years 1931 and 1932 show no decline, and 1933 (another hurricane year) one of only 9 per cent. Although between 1928 and 1932 the export price of sugar fell no less than 33 per cent, this decline was offset by an equal increase in the volume of sugar exported, from 606,538 to 912,000 short tons. Indeed, year by year sugar exports increased in volume sufficiently to offset price declines, until A. A. A. (Agricultural Adjustment Act) quota went into force.

Example—The sugar cane crop actually raised and standing in the fields, ready for cutting in January 1939 would have represented a yield of one million two hundred thousand tons of raw sugar, whereas the quota as allotted by the Department of Agriculture at Washington represented 836,000 tons of this product. This represented a sad picture to the planters, who were left with 3,640,000 tons of sugar cane in the fields, for cutting during the 1940 crop. To produce the latter tonnage, represents an actual cost to the planters of $26,720,000.

"Other Commodities—In this respect, tobacco, coffee and fruits present a spectacular contrast.

"Values of exports of tobacco rapidly and steadily declined yearly from $21,000,000 in 1927 to $4,000,000 in 1933. Between those two dates, prices and amounts exported, unlike sugar, both declined, the former by 49 per cent, the latter by 58 per cent. Coffee presents a similar, but even worse picture. Between 1926 and 1933 value of exports declined from $7,071,000 to $125,000. Prices did not fall much, but the quantity dwindled to a neglible amount. (Which is due to the destruction of our coffee plantations by the hurricane in 1928.)

"Among fruits, pineapples and grapefruit constitute the bulk of exports in value. Pineapple exports declined 30 per cent in volume between 1927 and 1933 and grapefruit exports 77 per cent over the same period."

Puerto Rico is densely populated, about 500 people per square mile and has a total population of 1,800,000.

The foregoing illustrates that the economic structure of the island requires serious consideration and that the present low quota of raw sugar requires a substantial increase to bring back prosperity, which we were enjoying several years ago.

Another erroneous report was made by Mr. Hill, that the native children up to ten years of age dispense with the formality of wearing clothing. On rare occasions mothers will permit their infants up to about eighteen months of age to play around their premises in the nude, but the youngsters above that age have a great deal of civic pride and are all dressing in accordance with their parents financial circumstances.

I submit the facts brought forth in this article with the only objective that the readers of Mr. Budd Hill's statement may not be misled in the efforts as made by the various commercial and civic organizations to better our social and economic conditions.

DEMOCRACY

The spiritual rather than the material foundations of democracy were stressed the other evening in New York City where Earl Baldwin, the former prime minister of Great Britain, spoke, his speech being broadcast. He pointed to the enemies of democracy from without and within. "Ideas are on the wing," he said, "they may be a greater peril than the sword." He referred to Bolshevism, Nazism and Fascism, which "are so loaded with dynamite that they may blow systems founded on a rock into fragments". While no one could say what effect these will have on the future of the world, he pointed out that they could not exist "within the same boundaries as what you and I understand as democracy, which is a recognition of the dignity of man and of his individuality and that dignity and individuality are his as a child of God. Here is the unbridgeable gulf between the democracy and the -isms that are for the time being in charge of so large a part of Europe."

Earl Baldwin pointed out that Bolshevism saw that Christianity was its greatest foe and made it the object of its bitterest attack. In the extreme Nazi teaching the same tendency is seen.

But he held the view that the worst from Communism was over, and he sees little likelihood of Nazism getting a foothold in England.

The statesman brought a message that "we cannot make our own countries safe for democracy by letting things slide, nor can we educate our peoples by holding up our hands in horror at the actions of totalitarian states. . . . As the lights are quenched in one country after another, there is hope in the world so long as our lamps are trimmed and their rays may be seen penetrating the gloom. What a responsibility rests upon us? . . . Whether there be war in Europe or not, war settles nothing, it unchains evil passions for the years to come, violent as the passions that begat the war itself. But the struggle for the soul of man will go on whether there be war or not. . . . We have to show the world that we have ideals, no less than the rulers of the totalitarian states; that our ideals are harder of accomplishment because they are far higher; they involve the co-operation of men of their own free will endeavoring to work with God Himself in the raising of mankind."

This address was one typical of the fine sterling characteristics of a leading figure in the public life of English speaking peoples. It was a message for all democracies and even the world.

ALASKA FOR DEVELOPMENT

The famous Canadian explorer, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, who comes of the Viking race and whom Canadians hold in highest regard, stated the other day in New York the problem of developing Alaska was "chiefly a psychological one since we no longer are frontier-minded". It is his belief that it would make a good home in general for people of any nationality and could easily be developed to a point where it could stand comparison with Scandinavia.

The explorer in commenting on the suggestion of the transfer of European refugees to Alaska, stated that the resources of the country could be easily developed. He suggested that if it were easy for the Finns to make a profit on newsprint they export to America after paying duty it would be easier for Alaskans to do so, for it is nearer to the United States and they would not have to pay duty. He suggested that some American papers, particularly those on the west coast, if they are willing to invest should invest in an Alaskan enterprise. He believes Alaska has as many resources as Scandinavia and could support as large a population.

This gives Canadians much to think about in the great far hinterland which to Canadians means Yukon and the Territories. It will be remembered that his Majesty King George spoke during his visit to Canada of the pioneering spirit and the part it played in Canadian life.

Alaska, Yukon, and the North West Territories, are vast areas to the north. Slowly the North West Territories have been diminishing as other Canadian provinces extend their frontiers northward.

It is interesting to note that Alaska was first explored by a Dane, Vitus Bering in the employ of Russia in 1740. The first settlement was made on Kadiak Island in 1784 and fifteen years later with the formation of the Russian-American Fur Company a vigorous trade and missionary policy was adopted in the region, but the climate led to serious financial losses and Russia ceded the territory to the United States for $7,200,000.

"Democracy is the inherent quality which makes man something higher than beast, which lifts his heart to the stars and carries his soul onward and upward."—Eduard Benes.

"To avoid war it is not necessary to ignore other nations of the world. We can be friendly to all."—Robert W. Taft.

"When business is good with the post office it indicates an upswing in general business conditions."—James A. Farley.

"One may live as a conqueror, a king, or a magistrate; but he must die a man. The bed of death brings every human being to his pure individuality."—Daniel Webster.

"God writes the gospel not in the Bible alone, but on trees, and flowers, and clouds, and stars."—Luther.

"The wise man endeavours to shine in himself; the fool to outshine others."—Addison.

"KEEP SMILING! LOVE FROM MUMMY, DAD." Read a wireless from Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor, of Glasgow, Scotland, to their son, Robert, aged seven, a captured stowaway on the Cunard liner Andania. Robert was born in Montreal, and went to Glasgow with his parents early this year. He walked aboard the Andania at Greenock last Saturday and hid in a lifeboat to be discovered forty-eight hours later. When Robert reaches Quebec he will find a postcard sent by air mail by his father telling him that all is forgiven and there will be no trip to the woodshed with Pop for him when he returns. Robert holds the record as the youngest ocean stowaway.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION MAKE HOSS RACES? according to David Harum, that lovable old country banker, who loved a fast horse and hid a warm heart under a glacial exterior. The intrusion of the motor car has robbed some folks of a hull lot of fun, including the village hotelkeeper who always kept a slick roadster and liked a brush with his neighbor the banker, merchant or mill owner, with or without a side bet. Speeding in the winter with light cutters was lots of fun, and many a meeting in the hotel back parlor discussed the qualities of local horse flesh over steaming beakers of toddy. Recent trotting meet at Goshen, N.Y., where Peter Astra flashed as a new star in the trotting firmament, aroused New York Times editor to look back a few years and ruminate on "feuds". Sez he: "Feuds, often of long standing, were settled, not with squirrel rifle and knife, but in match races down a straight stretch of dirty road to the spinning high wheels of buggies. Even the tight-lipped New England deacons were not above a private brush on the long road to church. In its train the development of harness racing brought the evolution of a magnificent breed of horses, fleet, spirited and with wonderful stamina. Happily, in the machine age, they still carry on and bring, as they come down to the wire, lean necks, stretched nostrils flaring, and clean legs moving in beautiful harmony, a music of pounding hoofs which can stir the blood as few other sounds in the world of sport." But the greatest thrill of all was the old three to the mile grass-grown track at the old fair grounds where we knew the horses, the owners, the drivers and the pompous (once a year) officials in the judge's stand, their annual day in the limelight of publicity and authority, besides everybody taking in the race.

"ABIDE WITH ME, FAST FALLS THE EVENTIDE, THE DARKNESS DEEPENS, LORD WITH ME ABIDE." As this beautiful hymn was softly and reverently sung Death delivered his summons in the pulpit and the aged pastor, 77, bade farewell to the congregation and to life as his soul returned to God who gave it. Dev. Dr. Walter Walker while filling a pulpit engagement at Elgin, Illinois, heard the call and just before he collapsed, asked the congregation to sing his favorite hymn, "Abide With Me". Such is the faith which knows no fear, in life, or in death.

DEXTER FELLOWES, GREATEST OF ALL CIRCUS PUBLICITY MEN, is buried in the cemetery at New Britain, Connecticut. Dexter, one of the grandest fellows in public life while he lived and held in pleasant memory now that he has crossed the Great Divide, will have his grave marked in fitting manner by the members of the Circus Saints and Sinners, an organization of which he was very fond. On the second anniversary of his death, next November, a monument will be erected in New Britain cemetery to mark the grave of the man who made The Greatest Show on Earth greater than the billboards proclaimed it. The monument will be seven feet high and four feet wide, and designed to show a large bust of Dexter Fellowes and a performing elephant as a symbol of his profession and an ever-present reminder of Dexter's love for elephants.

An American woman on a brief visit to England found herself somewhat hustled by the number and variety of her engagements.

One day in particular she found troublesome, for she had to go first to a funeral service and then to a garden party.

She solved the dress problem by wearing smart but sober clothes and taking in a hat box a flowered hat which, during the service, she placed in the vestry.

Her sense of quiet pleasure at this successful solution of the problem was somewhat marred, however, when the coffin was brought into the church. For reposing in the centre of the wreaths on the coffin was her flowered hat!

Jan Bata, Czecho Refugee

March 16, 1939, Jan Bata, ruler of an industrial empire and loyal supporter of a 19-year-old republic in Central Europe, became Jan Bata, refugee, abandoning the capital of his empire at Zlin and fleeing the father-land he loved. On March 16, 1939, a brief dispatch from Rumania wrote the opening words of a new chapter in the greatest drama of shoemaking history.

The story of Bata began some 300 years ago at the same time Thomas Beard and Philip Kirtland were laying, in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, the first foundations of an American shoe industry. A Bohemian shoemaker toiled patiently at his craft in the little village which is now Zlin, fashioning footwear for his patrons and gossiping, no doubt, about an English shoemaker who had ventured to a new land peopled with savages.

By 1876 the American shoe industry had passed through successive stages of development, had become partially mechanized through the introduction of the pegging machine, the rolling machine, the Howe sewing machine, the McKay sewing machie and others of lesser importance. Lynn, Brockton and Haverhill were centres of shoe manufacture, and scarcely a town in Massachusetts did not boast a shoe factory.

In Bohemia, a descendant of that early shoemaker of Zlin labored patiently, discussed the folly of wild Americans who hoped to make shoes by machinery, worried over the difficulty of providing bread and shelter for his family, and spoke bitterly but guardedly of the persecution of the Czechs by the Hapsburgs, and of a day when a nation begun in the fifth century should be separated from the rule of powerful Austria-Hungary.

In that year 1876 a son, Thomas, was born to the village shoemaker of Zlin and a new chapter in the greatest drama of shoemaking history was begun. It was this son who was lated to study the "folly" of American shoe-makers, introduce mass production methods to European industry, and build the great modern Bata shoe empire.

The history of that empire is the biography of two brothers who descended from a long line of village shoemakers. It is an integral part of the story of a people who gained and lost their national independence. It forms a chapter in the international trade of the world, and includes one of the bitterest tariff fights ever engaged in by American industrialists and statesmen.

The future of the Bata shoe empire is purely speculative at this writing. To understand the probabilities and the possibilities of that future, one must first consider the men and events that will shape its development.

Thomas Bata was born in poverty, peddled his father's shoes from door to door at Zlin, and dreamed daringly. His father died when he was a youth and, with a brother and sister, Thomas founded a shoe factory to replace his father's shop. Because they were ignorant of the fundamentals of business management, the new factory was bankrupt in a short time. It was a bitter blow to the ambitious youth, but here, still in his teens, he displayed forcefully the unswerving ambition and boldness which characterized his whole life.

He succeeded in securing extensions of credit, studied accounting and business management and within a few months had restored the little shop to solid ground.

In 1904 he went to America with several other shoemakers of Zlin and, securing jobs in various factories, obtained first-hand knowledge of American methods. He returned to Zlin, installed German machinery in his factory, and at the outbreak of the world war was producing 6,000 pairs of shoes a day. Most of the output was sold to dealers in Vienna and other Central European cities.

In 1914 Thomas Bata saw his dream of empire once again interrupted. The Austrian government commandeered the factory, and Thomas Bata fled the country, opening a small factory in Lynn, Mass., where he was feted and honored.

The close of the war and the collapse of the Austria-Hungary brought chaos, and years of reconstruction. In control of the Zlin factory once more, Thomas Bata managed to maintain production through this trying period. He steadily enlarged the facilities of the plant, and succeeded in establishing an industry which was in time to serve as a model of industral efficiency. The newly-formed republic of Czechoslovakia was strongly supported by Thomas Bata, and he, in turn, received many favors from its government.

This cobbler's son built his empire and ruled it with an iron hand, invaded the footwear markets of the world with success, extended his influence into a dozen countries, and wanted always to be known as "only a shoemaker".

Seven years ago, Thomas Bata was killed when his airplane crashed near Zlin within sight of his plant.

Then, as today, speculation was rife in the shoe markets of America. Who would replace Thomas Bata? Would the empire collapse without his genius? Would the American shoe industry profit by its fall?

A step-brother, Jan, succeeded to the throne of the shoemaking empire. A strapping six footer, keen, aggressive, and with much of the daring enterprise of Thomas, Jan Bata governed well. The empire did not collapse, even under the pressure of a world wide depression. Manufacturing activities were expanded. New plants were built in other countries. World markets were aggressively cultivated. The empire grew stronger.

All this time, the forces of Nazism and Fascism were also growing stronger in Europe. Jan Bata was a dictator in the Bata shoe empire, but he hated political dictatorships and saw in them a future of chaos for Europe and a threat to the existence of the little republic of Czechoslovakia. He reportedly contributed millions to the national defence fund and worked untiringly to gain the friendship of the world for his country.

Last August the German subsidiary of the Bata Shoe Company was taken over by German interests and Jan Bata was ousted from its supervisor board. The German company's home was changed to Ota, which originates from the Silesian town of Ottmuth, where the company had its headquarters. This was a comparatively minor loss to Bata, but it was prophetic of other losses.

In March 1938 Adolf Hitler marched into Austria and the Swastika flew in Vienna. A major part of the Bata company's funds were said to be deposited in Vienna, but it was revealed that Jan Bata had astutely transferred the wealth of his empire into Holland.

After the annexation of Austria, Hitler declared: "Germany wants only peace. She does not want to add to the sorrow of other nations." It is reported that Jan Bata urged the leaders of his government to strengthen the defenses of Czechoslovakia, warning that the surge of Nazi power would make its way across the Czech borders.

October 1, 1938, Nazi troops occupied the rich Sudetenland and gained control of the highly developed textile, glassware, chemical and glove industries of Czechoslovakia. With this conquest came the new promise: "After the Sudeten question is settled that is the end of Germany's territorial claims in Europe." And once more Jan Bata is said to have been closeted with his government in momentous meetings.

The Bata empire escaped disaster when the Sudetenland was taken, because its factories were in unaffected Bohemia. But the confusion, uncertainty, and anxiety in Central Europe hampered its operations. Exports to America fell off appreciably, but were made up in part by exports from the Bata plant in the Netherlands.

Early in March, the absorption of Czechoslovakia was complete; its president "trustfully laid the fate of the Czech people and country into the hands of the Fuehrer of the German Reich."

March 16 the less trustful Jan Bata, refugee, arived in Bucharest.

On March 166, 1939, the 19-year-old republic of Central Europe passed into the hands of the German Reich, and with it went the capital of the Bata empire; the main plant at Zlin.

This is the background of an industrial empire whose very existence was almost inseparably linked with the political existence of Bohemia.

It is not safe to jump hastily at any conclusions as to the fate of this shoe empire, however, for it must be remembered that its foundations were laid when Zlin was ruled by the Hapsburgs; it fell at the outbreak of the World War, and was rebuilt and made greater when Czechoslovakia was born. Its strength lay only partially in the strength of Czechoslovakia, and primarily in the strength of Thomas and Jan Bata. Such men may be defeated, but never conquered. They may retreat, but they never capitulate.

One thing is certain. There is no room in Zlin today for Jan Bata who helped to make Zlin prosperous. His hatred of Nazism and Fascism and his support of Czechoslovakian defense are too well known for him to be received well by the Hitler regime. But there are other nations where his political views and his industrial genius would be welcomed.

The Bata company operated shoe factories, tanneries, paper mills, stocking factories, machinery shops, and other auxiliary works and employed altogether about 40,000 workers. The principal factories were in Czechoslovakia, but others were scattered in some dozen countries in Europe, Asia and Africa.

Whenever Jan Bata attempts to rebuild the empire he will be faced with competition from the vast industry which he built at Zlin. Shoes from Zlin will continue to compete with those made in other countries for a share of the world market, and if Jan Bata sets upon a program to restore the Bata empire, these shoes from Zlin will be his greatest competition.

There has been much minimizing of the probable acceptance of Zlin shoes made under Nazi control. Most of this minimizing is inspired by wishful thinking or an ignorance of fact, or both. Germany desperately needs foreign money and raw materials and must have world trade to secure these. It is true that shoes from Zlin would receive scant welcome in some American cities today if they bore a "Made in Germany" label. But the important American market now consumes a relatively small part of the Bata output. And Germany has already established barter and subsidy policies which have opened the doors of many profitable world markets. It can forget America and can still probably sell the entire output of the Zlin factories without too much effort. But Jan Bata cannot rebuilt his empire unless he can retain his markets.

Jan Bata has many friends and business acquaintances in the United States. He was a close friend of former Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago who was assassinated several years ago. He lived for some time in Lynn and was president of the Bata Shoe and Leather Company, Inc., which, after the World War, operated an experimental factory in that city. In 1937 he visited a number of American shoe centres in the course of a world tour. There are many reasons why Bata may regard favorably the prospect of locating a main plant in the United States.

Within the last fortnight Jan Bata has been reportedly invited to establish plants in Lynn, Brockton, Maryland, St. Louis and Chicago. Those close to Bata affairs believe that Maryland or Lynn would receive first preference in the possible selection of a location for a United States factory, the former because he already owns an undeveloped site where he could lay the foundations for a new empire in the familiar Bata manner; the latter because he is familiar with the city and the ability of its workers.—Condensed by Readers' Digest.

PROSPEROUS CALLANDER

The North Bay Nugget reports that Callander is enjoying a prosperous season. For July 23,748 motor cars were registered at the quintuplets' nursery, compared with 20,200 in the corresponding month of last year, and the number of visitors increased from 71,172 to 72,208. August is doing even better, and figures for the early days of the month were "far in excess" of the corresponding dates a year ago.

The Nugget notes with special satcentage" of the visitors were from centage' 'of the visitors were form the older parts of Ontario, and with pleasure the additional fact that these visitors from within the province "have been greatly impressed by the beauty and recreational facilities of the North."

The famous quintuplets cannot indefinitely go through their paces for the edification of the curious. A time must be coming, and speedily, when their best interests will demand more privacy and fewer public appearances.—Ottawa Journal.

GOLF IN GALLUSES

While on the subject of golf I might mention the pleasant tale I heard about Lord Lothian, the new British Ambassador to the United States.

Lunching with friends one Sunday afternoon at one of our swankiest country clubs, the noble Briton was asked if he cared to play golf. He replied that he would be delighted to. Whereupon, to the dismay of his host and the derision, later, of the caddies, he shed his coat, exposing a brilliant pair of "braces" (suspenders, we call 'em), and announced that he was ready.

The galluses were enough to attract attention but the eminent peer did not even change his bowler—or derby, as this type of hat is known to us.

Everybody was very polite, of course; and the caddies did their snickering behind their hands. But amusement changed quickly to awe as the eminent Briton got down to work. With no visible effort, he managed to amble around in 76.—Chicago Daily News.

SUMMER CLOTHING

Men in the small towns have, for the most part, solved the summer clothes problem by wearing and discarding accordingly to the common sense that we refuse to apply. They probably pity us of the cities for our submission to conventions that we openly deride. If they also scorn us they keep it to themselves, as well they should, for they are vulnerable. It is notorious, as William Allen White has pointed out, that when they go to town they dress up, which means they put on our uniform.

That we have to some extent modified that uniform by decreasing its weight was reflected a year ago in a relatively increased sale of summer suitings and it is to be even more clearly reflected next year in their increased prices. It can hardly be said we are on our way because we have moved a little, but we have moved a little, we have started.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FRESH APPLE PIE

Scientists who have just announced that you can't have apple pie and vitamins, too, failed in the abstraction of their science to reckon with the ingenuity and appetities of apple pie eaters in the country over.

That apple pie retains only twenty per cent. of the C vitamin contained in the original apples is no deterrent to pie eaters. Any vitamin eater who likes his pie will merely eat five times as much.

Leftovers also get a punch in the refrigerator—or whatever may be the most vulnerable spot for leftovers—from the scientists who contend that by the time apple pie has reached the midnight snack state its vitamin content is down to ten per cent. But who has ever heard of any self-respecting apple pie, at all worthy of the name, reaching the midnight snack status?

Despite the official nature of the research, skeptics may be pardoned for doubting the merit of the conclusions. Ignored completely is the question of how early a pie baker must get up the produce a good apple pie for breakfast and the scientists are strangely silent on how many pies they consumed during the inquiry.

Possibly they were so busy enjoying the first pies they forgot to count the vitamins, and later so full of pie they couldn't.—Sarnia Observer.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Treatment For a Falling Heart

A professional man, active not only in his work but in other fields, was suddenly stricken with a "heart attack", coronary thrombosis, in which a small clot of blood blocked the passage of blood to nourish the heart tissues themselves. His physician put him to bed in a half sitting position for six weeks; he was not even allowed bathroom privileges. After the first week in bed, the physician explained what had happened and that after the part had healed and the clot had been absorbed, he would be well enough to get up and about and might live as long as if his heart had not been attacked. His heart would not be as strong but it would be strong enough to carry him a number of years if he followed directions carefully. This attack was a blessing in disguise as it was a warning to cut down on his own work and to cut out all other activities. The reserve strength or power of his heart, which for so many years had enabled him to do so much mental and physical work, was now considerably less than before and he could not draw on this power to the same extent as before. However there was still power to do the ordinary or necessary things in life.

This, then, is the common sense yet scientific method of treating the various types of heart disease which cause the heart to "fail"—the "complete" rest at the time the attack of heart failure occurs and the "partial" rest for the balance of the patient's life. Partial rest does not require bed rest most of the 24 hours but does require 8 or 9 hours at night, with perhaps a half hour or hour lying down once or twice a day.

Light exercise in the form of walking and even swimming (if patient likes swimming) and a few holes of non-competitive golf on a level course, not only help the circulation of the blood, aid digestion, and removal of wastes from the body, but helps to keep the spirits bright and free from dread.

It is not suggested that patients with heart disease should follow the above suggestions because each case is a law unto itself and must follow the regulations necessary to preserve the heart reserve. The thought is that complete rest, then partial rest with exercise, now preserves life for many years in those with a failing heart.

Five Thousand People Attend Brilliant Air Force Display

Trenton Base of R.C.A.F. is Scene of Spectacular Air Exhibition — Various Types of Machines Attract Thousands — Distinguished Visitors Arrive by Plane — P. O. John Stephenson Romps Away with Individual Aggregate in Thrilling Sports Exhibition — Dance Climaxes Day's Events

Trenton, Aug. 19 (Special)—Before an estimated crowd of nearly five thousand people the crack athletes of Trenton's huge air base, the largest R.C.A.F. station in Canada, yesterday competed for individual and group honors as the airmen presented the fifth annual R.C.A.F. sports day. Without exaggeration it may be said that the occasion far surpassed anything yet attempted, and though the displays provided in previous years have been magnificent the program presented yesterday was undoubtedly "tops". Wing Commander C. M. McEwen, M.C., D.F.C., and all his officers and personnel have every reason to be proud of the showing made by the group; and none but favorable comments are to be heard. Many parties came from many miles to attend, and none were disappointed. Friends and relatives of officers and airmen came early and stayed late, and found the day a truly memorable one.

Perhaps the first indication of the increased magnitude of the day's programme was the fact that events began at 10 o'clock in the forenoon rather than after lunch as always previously. Quite a crowd assembled even for the morning events; and the favorites in the various events were roundly cheered as they made their efforts.

Planes On Review.

On the aerodrome planes of various types were lined up awaiting inspection, and cards hanging from motors gave the names of the planes, types of motors, horsepower, speed, and use of each. Included were Fleets, Wapitis, Sharks, Siskins, Norsemen, Fairchilds, Oxford light bombers, and three of the new Harvard trainers. Crowds gathered around these, and airmen on duty were kept busy checking up on the too adventuresome.

Certainly one of the highlights of the afternoon's program was the flying demonstration put on by some of Canada's crack airmen. First the glistening Oxford air-speed bombers took the air, a formation of three, led by Squadron Leader W. I. Riddell and with Flight Lieutenants D. M. Smith and D. S. Blaine. These showed how the big planes fly in formation and thrilled the crowd several times as they roared low over the ground in power dives. Next three Atlas army cooperation planes went aloft, the pilots Squadron Leader W. D. Van Vliet, Flying Officer R. M. McKay and Flying Officer R. F. Douglas, and these swooped low to pick up messages from the ground crew. Perhaps the most thrilling event was the presentation of individual aerobatics by Flight Lieutenant D. M. Edwards in a Harvard trainer, and this new plane was certainly shown to advantage. From a Fairchild cabin plane a dummy with parachute attached was dropped and crowds had a chance to see how parachute descents are made.

During the afternoon there were a number of visitors. First, in from Ottawa came the R.C.A.F. Gruman amphibian bearing (reportedly) Air Commodore L. M. Breadner. Two civilian planes also landed, and later a formation of three army pursuit planes from the 110th Squadron in Toronto made an appearance and after circling several times in beautiful formation landed with the others. From Camp Borden an Oxford bomber came, and the aerodrome was well filled with planes of all types.

Keen Competition.

Keenest interest was maintained in the competition all day long. Not only did individuals seek to amass points, but the interschool competition was very keen. For most of the day Advanced Training Wing led by a healthy margin, but when in the later afternoon it became apparent that Wireless School might edge them out the wireless boys went wild and their victory in the obstacle race, the last event of the day, was all that they needed to put them in front by a margin of six points. So the day ended with the various schools grouped as follows: Wireless School 41 points, Advanced Training Wing 36 points, Workshops 22 points Equipment Training School 20 points, Station Headquarters 19 points, Technical Training School 11 points, No. 2 Army Cooperation Squadron 7 points, Air Armament School 3 points.

P. O. Stephenson Stars.

Pilot Officer John Stephenson literally romped away from all contestants in the individual aggregate, taking a total of 25 points with the nearest runner-up scoring only 11. Stephenson coasted home first in the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard dash, and came second in the shot-put, the discus throw, the javelin throw ,the hammer throw, and the 120-yard low hurdles.

RAILWAYMEN

The executive of the numerically smaller Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and firemen will be called on to take a similar decision over rejection by the companies of its comprehensive demands for a general improvement of working standards.

The two groups are negotiating separately but it is believed the decision of one will receive support from the other. Many of the men hold dual membership cards.

Compromise Sought

A nation busy on war preparedness is hoping for further negotiations and a compromise.

The railway dispute has been in progress since 1931 when comprehensive claims for general improvements were advanced. Two arbitration boards—the railway staff national tribunal and the industrial court—heard arguments and passed recommendations which favored the companies.

Six months ago the national tribunal held that general improvement in wages "cannot properly be recommended at a time when traffic receipts and, still more, net earnings have fallen so greatly," but added the opinion "that a strong case has been presented for making an increase upon the lowest wages the first claim as soon as the financial position makes any substantial concession possible."

Raise Wages to 15,000

Two weeks ago the companies, at an annual cost of £100,000 ($468,000) raised the minimum rates from 41 to 45 shillings, affecting 15,000 employees.

The N. U. R., unsatisfied, dropped all its claims except that for a minimum wage of 50 shillings and argued that whereas revenues of the companies which were £29,000,000 last year were estimated to reach £33,000,000 this year, surely £2,000,000 could be found to grant its lone demand.

The companies retorted that while their traffic receipts showed a marked increase over last year when hundreds of millions of capitol went without dividends and total dividends on all railways represented only 3.3 per cent on capital, they were still in no position to meet employees' demands unless they made further drafts upon their "sorely tired shareholders."

Press Support Divided

Press support is divided.

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said that "any attempt to paralyze rail transport at a moment when industry is engaged in an intensive effort to provide armaments needed for safety would destroy every prospect of public sympathy."

The Evening Standard (Ind.) said:

"Public sympathy sides with the railwaymen's claims. The railways have shared to some extent in the general returning prosperity although admittedly the increased figure is considerably smaller than the total sum which the railway unions are asking be devoted in improved wages.

"The public however takes its stand on two points. First, it demands there shall be no risk of a strike. Second, it feels that something above the present 45-shilling minimum would not be exhorbitant as a square deal wage."

Railway Literature

The railways themselves flooded the public with "square deal" literature last winter. Their campaign brought promise of legislation to enable them to compete on more favorable terms with road transport and also brought them a slight increase in passenger fares.

One of the leading figures in the dispute is John Marchbank, 56-year-old Scotsman who formerly was a freight train conductor and now is general secretary of the N.U.R. It was largely on his advice that the union sold its holdings of railway shares a few years ago. Since then he has been a constant advocate of nationalization of the "big four" lines—the London Midland and Scottish, London and North Eastern, Great Western, and Southern.

If a strike decision were taken, or if further negotiations broke down, he would be ready to call on the wealthy union's £2,500,000 bank account to finance its action.

URGES REFORM

The result is, she continued, that members are afraid to take a stand on questions for fear of offending one section or another of the people.

Representing Groups

Each city, for example, should be a multi-member constituency and voters should mark their ballots for any one of a number of candidates, Miss Macphail submitted. By that system, she contended, each member likely would represent a definite economic group.

"The whole system which we have in Canada is a little democratic, but not very much, and it is a marvel that it hangs together at all," the speaker said.

"All you have to do is sit in the House of Commons once and see how surprising it is that they ever get anything done. It is cumbersome, heavy and lumbers along, killing the enthusiasm of any member who ever had any ideas or ambitions to help run the country as it should be done."

The party system, "financed from secret sources," destroyed "real democracy" in Canada, Miss Macphail said. The two major parties "are financed by the very same source and therefore they serve the very same interests," she said.

Germany's Economic Problems

Dr. Hans Simons, member of the graduate faculty of the new school for Social Research at New York and a former member of the German Social Democratic party, told the Institute that Germany may be forced into a war by her own economic situation.

Instead of developing Sudetenland's raw materials to store reserves and at the same time exploiting the weakness of the western powers, Fuehrer Hitler "turned against Prague first and then campaigned for Danzig," Dr. Simons said.

"By doing so he not only plunged the democracies into a fever of preparations but created internal resistance as well," he declared. "The German people began to realize that he was ready to lead them into war."

SOVIET SAILORS IN THE SWIM

If you think this stunt's easy, try it yourself some idle hour down at the beach. Remarkable feat was performed by landing party of Soviet sailors during celebration of Navy Day in Moscow. Fully equipped for fighting the landing party headed by an officer, swam 400 metres.

HIS MAJESTY JOURNEYS FROM SCOTLAND TO INSPECT RESERVE FLEET

Arriving at Weymouth Bay from Balmoral, Scotland, where the court is at present in residence, the King immediately embarked in the Royal Barge to inspect vessels of his reserve fleet. At first inspecting individual ships of the fleet, the King then inspected the lines of the massed fleet—entailing a sea trip of 14 miles. His Majesty is pictured TOP LEFT, taking the salute when he visited the cruiser Cardiff and the cruiser Effingham, RIGHT. Speeding through the lines of the massed fleet, he is shown taking the salute from the Royal Barge, BOTTOM.

Weddings

KENNEDY—CAREFOOT

Tall standards of pink and white gladioli and Boston fern, against a background of evergreen made a lovely setting for the marriage in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at three o'clock this afternoon of Margaret Mary, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Carefoot and Mr. Matthew James Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Kennedy. Rev. W. J. Walker officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in her gown of shell pink embroidered net over taffeta with finger tip veil of matching tulle caught with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried Briarcliffe roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Donalda Richardson of Stirling was bridesmaid, wearing delphinium blue chiffon with pink picture hat. Her bouquet was of Briarcliffe roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Mr. Reginald Peak, Toronto, was groomsman.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. Ruth M. Plumb of Ogdensburg and Mrs. George A. Tett of New York City, aunt of the groom, sang "O Promise Me" and "Because" during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 201 McDonald Avenue, guests attending from New York, Ogdensburg, Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto. Baskets of gladioli were used in the decoration of the rooms.

Mrs. Carefoot, mother of the bride, wore powder blue crepe with corsage of sweetpeas and Sweetheart roses and Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the groom, was attired in a navy blue silk redingote frock.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy left on a wedding trip to New York City, the bride travelling in a wool boucle suit in Suez shade with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside at 43 Holloway Street.

HUFF—NIXON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman J. Nixon, Sheldrake Boulevard, Toronto, was the setting for a pretty wedding this afternoon, when their daughter, Miss Mary Ethel Nixon, was married to Mr. Elmer Edward Huff of Picton, son of Mrs. J. W. Shier and the late Morris Huff of Bloomfield. Rev. J. W. Shier of Bloomfield officiated and Miss Madeleine Cornett played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a graceful gown of white mousseline, with finger-tip veil caught with a coronet of lily-of-the-valley. Miss Helen Hipple of Beamsville, her only attendant was frocked in turquoise marquisette, with rose jacket and heart-shaped hat to match. She carried Rapture roses. Mr. Gordon Overend was groomsman.

A reception was held in the garden, and Mrs. Nixon received in a gown of delft blue lace with corsage of Picardy gladioli. The bridegroom's mother wore navy blue sheer, with corsage of Joanna Hill roses. Later the bride and bridegroom left for Muskoka Lakes and will live in Picton on their return.

GOWSELL—POSTE

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Foxboro on Wednesday, when Miss Audrey Poste, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Poste, Belleville, was united in marriage to Everett C. Gowsell, R.C.A.F., Trenton, only son of Mr .and Mrs. John Gowsell, Foxboro. Rev. E. M. Cooke officiated.

The ceremony took place in the United Church amidst a beautiful setting of palms, ferns and gladiolis.

To the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Edna Reid of Stirling, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She was gowned in white sheer with matching hat and accessories, and carried a bouquet or roses, pink lace flower and baby's breath. Miss Marguerite McCrudden of Mimico, (cousin of the groom), was the bride's only attendant, gowned in green sheer, with matching hat and accessories, and carried a nosegay of mauve sweet peas, blue lace flowers and baby's breath. Kenneth Poste, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The ushers were Ray Poste of Belleville, and Bert Wannamaker, of Foxboro.

A reception was held afterwards for the immediate relatives at the Perfect Cafe, Belleville.

Mrs. R. Poste, mother of the bride, was gowned in navy and white sheer, with matching hat and corsage of roses.

The groom's mother, Mrs. J. Gowsell, wore a gown of teal blue sheer, with hat and accessories of British tan and corsage of roses.

Following the reception, the happy couple left by motor on a honeymoon to be spent in eastern Ontario and the United States.

For travelling the bride donned a green ensemble with tan accessories and wore the gift of the groom, a gold locket on chain. On the return from their honeymoon the happy couple will reside in Foxboro.

Shoes for Fall

By ALICE ALDEN

YOU'LL SEE as many brown shoes as black when Fall's on the pavement as well as in the air, and as many kid as suede models. The majority of styles look like real shoes, smart but supporting, with every variety of heel imaginable. There are fewer platform soles, while open heels and toes are mostly for evening. The brown kid shoes pictured are among models keyed to autumn dresses, coats and suits in brown or green, the two shades competing with black next season. Both shoes are trimmed in beige and both are designed high at the throat, a detail flattering to more feet than not.

WASHING Frequently is Real Economy; Helps Save FOUNDATIONS

By ELEANOR ROSS

ACCORDING to fashion news, the new frocks are to be fitted with a snug line, making for a well-defined bust, tiny waist and gently curving hips. All of which adds up to the right foundation. For the corset, girdle, foundation—call it what you will—certainly does a remarkable job of curve-confining, accentuation and flattening over strategic points—quite a task for a handful of net, elastic and brocade.

The age of straitjackets of steel and whalebone is gone. Modern styles and fabrics do an infinitely better job than did those dread materials of former days.

Frequent Change an Economy

A well-planned wardrobe should include two or more foundations or girdles and a whole stock of brassieres, if only for economy's sake. For only frequent changes with frequent, thorough washings can protect these essential garments against the destructive action of body wastes and soil. Being worn close to the skin, the fabrics soon lose their beauty, strength and elasticity if they are not cleaned thoroughly and often.

Several foundations garments worn in rotation and washed between wearings will far outlast the same number worn for long periods with no time out for the freshening up process. Everything needs a rest and a foundation garment, like other things, is all the better after time off and gives better service. Worn day after day, a garment is bound to get out of shape.

Light weight foundations can usually be put into the tub or washer and cleaned with a thick lather of suds and lukewarm water. Heavier boned garments are best laid on a flat surface, after dipping in lukewarm water, and scrubbed with a well-soaped brush.

Lukewarm water is essential for the rinsing, which should be thorough, with every vestige of soap and soap smell removed. The final step is to press out the excess water very carefully, without wringing, rolling or too much manipulation. Then pull the garment gently into shape, dry it at a moderate temperature with a good current of air, either on a flat surface or over a line but without pins.

In any case, follow the directions of the manufacturer if these come with the garment. You may be sure the corset firm has spent much money and time in order to devise the best rules for washing and caring for their product. Otherwise you won't be getting the best out your purchase.

Chili Sauce

Has Many and Varied Uses

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

FROM CHILI SAUCE comes not only a familiar appetizing relish, but all manner of piquant possibilities. The good cook is always experimenting, finding new and better ways to use various ingredients. For salad: Combine chili sauce with cottage cheese and grated onion. For sauce: Heat chili sauce and pour it hot over corned beef hash or meat loaf. For canapes: Beat together chili sauce and cream cheese and a little onion juice. For eggs: Chili sauce in your stuffed egg filling (chopped ripe olives too) lends it plenty of piquancy. For dressings: Vary French dressing with chili sauce. Good with crabmeat and tuna.

Mint, Cool and Tasty

We take a big jump now from the spicy chili to the cool, calm mint. A new recipe has just been minted in time for the shank end of summer. It's a two-fruit ice with a mint-bed tang. It is made with one cup sugar, one-half cup light corn syrup, one cup water, one-half cup fresh mint leaves or mint essence, one cup unsweetened pineapple juice, one-half cup orange juice and one egg white. Cook together sugar, syrup and water to 240 degrees F. or until it forms a soft ball when tried in cold water. Remove from stove, add crushed mint leaves. If mint essence is used instead of mint leaves, add next with fruit juices and pour into medium-size tray of automatic refrigerator. Freeze for 30 minutes and remove from refrigerator. Freeze for 30 minutes and remove from refrigerator. Beat well and add one stiffly beaten egg white. Return to refrigerator and freeze (setting control at coldest point) until firm, stirring well every half hour. Approximately four hours freezing time. Makes six servings.

Baked Ice Cream

For a real treat, try a delicious version of Baked Alaska—Brazilian Baked Alaska. It is a beauty of ice cream, cake and meringue that looks so pretty, tastes so good. It is made with one pint of ice cream, one sponge cake, three-fourths cup sliced Brazil nuts, three egg whites, salt, three tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon vanilla. Remove centre from top of cake, leaving a shell at least three-quarters of an inch in thickness. Fill with ice cream and sprinkle half a cup of sliced nuts over the ice cream. Cover with a meringue made by beating egg whites stiff adn adding salt, sugar and vanilla. Sprinkle remaining nuts over top. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) until light brown, which should not take longer than five minutes. Serve at once.

Fashion Flashes

WHEN THE TOWN FILLS up again, you'll see more silver fox coats than ever, judging by reports from the shops. In one coat the fur is manipulated to form a yoke which offsets the collarless neckline. Shoulders are extended and the bracelet sleeve swirled.

Still supreme is black and white. Subscribing to this color scheme is a small hat of black felt with huge white wings, posed in opposite directions.

It can't be touched for style, say women addicted to white silk jersey for evening. A long slim skirt and a sweater blouse worn with chunky gold jewelry is typical.

Practical for a cool day is a dress of deep wine red satin back crepe with matching jacket. The coat is snug shirred all over. With plain bands down the front.

New luxury marks fur-trimmed cloth coats this season. A fitted black wool coat has a wide collar of silver fox which extends in a full tuxedo front with pockets worked beneath the fur. The fur is attached to the waist in a spreading applique below the waist.

Spotted at several smart resorts are filmy, wide-skirted dance frocks of lace, tulle or chiffon topped by snug black taffeta or faille jackets. Very old world!

$8,500 COMPROMISE

Cut off without a penny in the $2,667,000 will of her father, Frank Vance Storrs theatrical magnate, Mrs. Anne Storrs Schuster took matter to court in New York. Compromise agreement gives her $8,500 annually, a like sum upon death of her mother, and $6,600 outright.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

What Impression Do You Make on People You Meet?

"Betty always knows exactly what to do and what to say. I wish I could meet people the way she does."

"Ted is so popular with everybody. Iwish I could be!"

Popularity. Charm of manner. Grace in meeting people. How we all long for these social assets!

Did I hear you say that these qualities are the "gifts of the gods"? Immediately I'll grant that a few fortunate cases they are. But, happily, the real truth is that popularity, charm of manner, graciousness, may be acquired by clear-eyed vision, keen will power, high-hearted persistence.

"The seeing eye, the hearing ear, the understanding heart" are what we need, what we must have, when we set out on our golden way to earn popularity. For it must be earned, as most desirable things must be earned.

Your personality—the sum of all the qualities that make you either liked or disliked by people—is never more revealed than when you are on your vacation. Generally you leave behind you your usual fortifications: your home-background, your family, your close friends. There you are, in new surroundings meeting new people, having new experiences.

What impression will you make? Give yourself a Social Intelligence Test. Do you, when you are introduced to people, say a brusque and incorrect "Pleased to meet you", when you should be saying a gracious and correct, "How do you do?" to establish in the other person's mind that you are a knowing and friendly person? Do you grumpily hug tight to you that ever willing excuse "I am so self-conscious", instead of gallantly going forth to meet the spirit of the other person, trying to find out and participate in his or her interests and enthusiasms?

Have you carefully checked on your good points, so as to make the most of them? Have you learned to "be yourself", to be natural, or do you try to imitate some type which for the moment, intrigues you?

Do you really try to please others or have you never out-grown the "spoiled child" pattern of life?

Is it our inclination to say kind things, appreciative things, graceful things? Or is your tongue an "unruly member", saying tactless, barbed things, eager to pass on malicious gossip, unkind, more than a little snobbish?

Do you charmingly "lean out your soul to listen", or do you "know all the answers", interested only in your own opinions or prejudices? Are you pleasant (and what an important word this is!) to everyone you meet, or do you turn on your charm only for members of the opposite sex?

In the things you do and say, in your manner and your manners, in the YOU that reveals itself in your expression and in your eyes, are you a generous-thoughted person, or a "gimme"?

On the credit side of these qualities and many, many others is the sum total of popularity. On the debit side . . . you know what.

"O wad some Power the Giftie gie us
To see oursels as ithers see us!"

She Must Write "(Miss)"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I wonder if you will give me some advice on this business of signing one's name so as not to be taken for something you're not.

I dislike always writing (Miss) by my signature on a note or letter, but otherwise I am always taken for a Mister. What's the rule?

My name, you will admit, could be taken for a man's name as a woman's name.

Reader

I'm afraid, dear girl, that you'll just have to go on writing "Miss" in parentheses at the left of your signature when you sign letters to people who must (like me for instance) be informed of your status.

When you write letters to people who know your signature, you of course won't need to write the (Miss) berfore your name. Otherwise, there is no alternative but to do this. And of course this is especially important and necessary in your case, since you have a name that is used by both women and men.

Courtesy Tip

Take a piece of bread from the breadplate with your fingers. Don't spear it with your fork.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Mistake When She Made Him Jealous

Dear Miss Fairfax

I think I've made a terrible mistake. The man I'm very deeply in love with seems to be fading out of sight. I have been going with him "steady" for the past ten months. We are not engaged, and my girl friends advised me to go out with other boys, and that this would bring him to time.

However, instead of that, it took him away, and when he saw me going out with other boys—who really bored me—he suddenly stopped making dates with me. I really want him back and will do anything to gain that end.

Betsy

You seem to have been playing with fire, my dear, I mean of course, the fire of jealousy. Usually it stimulates a man's love for a girl, or wakes him up to the fact that he wants to marry her. But this game has to be played more artfully than you seem to have played it. What you have done evidently, is to convince your boy friend that you are fickle and tired of him.

You must try to persuade him to come back as skillfully as you can. Do you know what he likes most? Does he like good music? Or a hike in the country? Or a good dinner? Tempt him with some irresistable invitation. Write him a nice note that express your sincere self. I'm sure he will come back to you after thinking it over carefully.

Went Back When His Girl Left Him

Dear Miss Fairfax

For three years or even longer, I've been in love with a girl, although we've never gone "steady". For a couple of months of that time I did see her quite regularly, and take her out, but always thought we'd better wait until we were older, before thinking of marriage.

I stopped going with my old "gang", at her suggestion, because they drank too much. This made her very happy at the time. But I didn't realize how much I cared until I saw her going out with other boys lately. And now I hear that she has a new "steady" and she doesn't even answer my letters. Because it looks so hopeless, I've gone back with the old "gang" and they're glad to have me, but if she would be willing to go with me, I'd give them up for good.

Doubtful

I'm afraid you're not a very strong character, my dear, or you would not have taken over the old "gang" as soon as a nice girl stopped going with you. Why don't you give up these associates and see what a good chance you'd have with other nice girls, even if this girl doesn't come back. Or, if you showed her that the "gang" held no further interest for you, she might be willing to take you back.

Afraid to Have Him Come to House

Dear Miss Fairfax

For the past three years I've been in love with a man who works in the same office with me, and at last he has told me he loves me too. I've been out with him only a few times, because I'm so afraid he'll find out how ignorant I am about things. I've been out to dinner with him, and was so afraid I'd do something wrong.

Now he wants to meet my folks, and has asked to come to the house. Indeed, he said I was real mean not to ask him to a meal. We're just simple people, and I'm afraid if he finds out how differently we live from the way he's used to, he will break off with me. Your advice has helped others please help me.

Janet

The first thing I'll say is get over that wretched feeling of inferiority. How you've managed to keep a man interested for three years, feeling that way, is beyond me. If your home is neat and clean please get over the feeling that it's not good enough. If it's all right for you, it should be all right for your friends. Besides, these days miracles can be worked with a pot of paint, and a few yards of chintz or cretonne. I've worked such miracles myself, not once, but a dozen times.

Get a good household magazine and study the interior decorating illustrations. Sunday night supper is a good meal to which to invite him. Don't stand shivering on the bank; plunge in and show the young man how capable you are.

WALLBRIDGE W.M.S.

The August meeting of Wallbridge W.M.S was held at the Town Hall on Wednesday, August 2, with a good atendance. The devotional exercises in charge of Mrs. Barton Hinchliffe opened with singing and prayer led by Mrs. John Hinchliffe. This being Grandmothers' Day the Scripture lesson found in Matt. 5 was taken by by Mrs C. F. Chisholm. Mrs. Hinchliffe gave a little talk on the value of a smile. More benefits are derived from a smile than many people think and it costs so little.

A discussion followed on the subject "Was the church of our grandmothers' time better than the church of today?" Several views were given but it was decided that there are people today as good as those of grandmothers' day?

The president, Mrs. L. J. Ketcheson took charge of the meeting. She thanked the ladies for a plant sent to her home during the illness of Mrs. Ketcheson Sr. and also thanked the ladies who had taken her place when she was unable to be present because of sickness in the home. The treasurer's report was givn by Mrs. G. A. Ketcheson and showed that a fair amount had been sent away. She then presented Mrs. William Sine with a life membership certificate in the W.M.S. Mrs. Sine thanked the ladies for their kindness.

Mrs. Frank Shorey and Mrs. Jas. Hinchliffe each gave very helpful temperance readings. Owing to the resignation of Mrs. William Wickson as press reporter, Mrs William Sine was appointed in her place. The meeting was closed with singing another hymn and prayer.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Care of Hernia Requires Faithful Carefulness

As I told you yesterday, you can cure about 99 per cent of ruptures in infants by careful manipulation and binding. Usually the best time to begin this strapping, particularly in a hernia around the umbilicus, is when the child is about a month old.

I say that most ruptures can be cured this way because for thirty years I treated them this way, and I can't remember that any baby I attended died of rupture. In most of the country where I was practising, hospitalization was just out of the question and operating for hernia was a little bit out of my line. Frankly I had no experience in such operations—very few country doctors have—so I had to depend to a great extent on manipulation and strapping. Sometimes I think it is a good thing to be in a position like that, for it is too easy often to say, "Let's operate", when something not quite so spectacular or drastic would do just as well.

One must be careful and faithful in this cure of a hernia. If you get careless or if you neglect the hernia you may be faced with a crisis that leaves you with no alternative but to operate. This is when a loop of the bowel which is protruding through the abdominal wall becomes caught and forms a bowel obstruction—bowel strangulation, they call it.

The symptoms of such a crisis would be sudden and somewhat frightening. The lump on the child's abdomen, which had hitherto been soft and easily pushed back into place, would suddenly become hard. No longer could you force it into place with your finger crampy abdominal pains would double the child up, bowel movement would cease, and vomiting would begin. Here is an emergency which demands surgery or the child will die in a few hours. I repeat, however, that this crisis can be avoided and the rupture cured by much gentler methods.

As an aid to keeping the bowel where it belongs, I occasionally would use a button inside the strapping. The button would supply a little extra pressure, to hold the bowel inside the abdominal wall. The danger in using the button is that it may irritate the flesh around the hernia.

Parents should have a doctor look at any suspicious bump or bulge on the abdominal wall, in the groin or cause the foundation for many a scrotal hernia is laid in babyhood. The child cries too hard, or strains himself in some way and weakens the wall of the abdomen. Later, when further stress is put on the abdominal muscles, they give way and there is the rupture.

Little boys often rupture themselves by attempting to lift weights that are beyond their strength. Parents should warn children of this danger, for a hernia is a nasty thing and can cause a great deal of trouble. I have known many, many boys who grew into manhood continually bothered by a rupture they had come by as children. The only hope these people had for cure and comfort was an operation, and most people avoid these unless an emergency forces them right to the operating table.

HUMAN SKIN DOES A LOT OF WORK

By HELEN FOLLETT

HUMAN SKIN has as many jobs as the mother of a large family. It performs as an eliminating organ, throwing off waste products. It pour out a soothing oil to keep the cutaneous surface smooth and fine-grained. It casts off old cells, grows keeping the body at normal temperature. It is a protective armour for sensitive flesh.

Woes of the Dry Skin

When there is not sufficient oil to keep the skin healthy, desquamation sets up; there is a dry condition to combat. Every woman thus afflicted hates her scaling face. Powder shows up, rouge won't rub in; there is always that horrid rough "feel".

It is surprising how quickly and eagerly a complexion of this kind will lap up oily cosmetics. They disappear in no time. They should be applied morning and night, after the face is washed; a light cream in the morning, a heavy one at night. Friction is helpful, it not only forces the fragrant emollients into the flesh but it works favorably upon the skin structure; stimulates it by making the blood streams hustle.

Change of Soap May Help

Sometimes a change of soap will prove beneficial. The powder used should have an oily base so it will adhere. Cream rouge is more acceptable than the compact.

More fat in the diet often produces more activity of the sebaceous glands.

The swirl hairdress is not new, we've had it with us for a number of years but there seems to be a popular revival of this cross-the-back arrangement.

LANA TURNER . . . takes meticulous care of a naturally fine skin.

A cut design is the banking of small curls over and around the right ear, a sweep of lock across the back of the head, ends done in flat pin curls from the left side in front way down to the nape line.

To keep this coiffure neat and trim is a daily battle with comb and hairpins; one needs plenty of leisure for the achievement. It is the sort of a coiffure that can't be combed out into fluffy ends.

Pitching Dominates Majors, Feller Loses Tough One 1-0

Gives But One Hit in 9 Innings But Wildness Cost Victory in Overtime Battle

RUFFING WINS 18th

Pirates Lose 10th Straight—Bees, Red Sox, Phillies and Cards Win

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Young Bob Feller has been standing on the threshold of baseball's hall of fame so long he might be mistaken for a monument.

But his chances of entering apparently depend on how soon he learns that pitching calls for control along with speed. Bob tangled in the big show's hottest hurling duel of the season last night as he and Cleveland Indians lost, 1-0, in 11 innings to lefty Ed Smith and Chicago White Sox.

Bob gave only one hit in nine innings, a single to Jack Hayes in the third, but kept himself in the fire with five bases on balls, an error and two wild pitches. Then, in the 11th, he walked Smith and was touched for a double by Hayes and a single by Mike Kreevich to lose the frame.

This performance was in contrast to methodical efforts of Smith, who spread seven hits and walked only two batters.

The abbreviated program in the Majors yesterday was packed with fine pitching performances. Big Red Ruffing of New York Yankees turned in one of the best, winning his 18th victory by shutting out Philadelphia Athletics, 5-0, on five hits. Home runs by Bill Dickey and George Selkirk, each with a man on base, gave him plenty of margin with which to work.

Fritz Ostermuller kept Boston Red Sox tagging at the Yanks' heels with a 6-2 victory over Washington Senators. He sprinkled nine hits at effective distances and was never in trouble.

Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Bees, who lost themselves in the season's longest game—a 23-inning tie—June 27, nearly lost the way again yesterday. But the Dodgers gave an unearned run in the 14th when Johnny Hudson erred twice on the same play and Al Simmons sacrificed a run home to give the Bees a 4-3 victory.

Walter Kirby Higbe, who beat New York Giants last week with a two-hitter, did it again on five hits as the Phillies opened their series with a 5-2 triumph.

Bob Bowman piloted St. Louis Cardinals to their 17th victory in 19 games with a seven-hit 3-0 shutout of the Pittsburgh Pirates—the latters' 10th straight loss.

BEARS, GIANTS PROMISE ACTION IN INT. PLAYOFFS

Newark Makes Powerful Bid for Playoff Position—Giants Lose Third Straight

(By The Associated Press)

If Newark Bears can extend their belated spurt a little longer, the rivalry between Newark and Jersey City may set the whole International League aflame before the season ends.

It's been years since they've had anything to scrap about beyond the feud between the two cities, what with the Bears running away with pennants and the Jerseys finishing at the bottom. But recent developments promise lively doings, if and when they meet in the playoffs, and possibly even before.

In a late but powerful bid to get out of the second division, the Bears have won nine of their last 11 games. They've climbed into a virtual tie with the fourth-place Buffalo Bisons and are only five games behind the laegue-leading Jersey Giants.

The Little Giants lost their third straight to Toronto's Maple Leafs last night, 7-6, but held their 2 1-2 game edge over the field when Newark knocked off Rochester, 6-0.

Buffalo completed the rout of the top trio and clung to its one-point margin over the Bears by blanking Syracuse, 5-0.

The cellar-dwelling Montreal Royals treated themselves to a batting orgy in last night's other contest and hammered home nine runs in the seventh inning to beat Baltimore, 11-7.

Tony Sabol, sensational Toronto rookie, provided the final blow that sent Jersey City down after Leafs wiped out a 6-3 deficit in the last inning. Toronto drove R. Stiles to cover in the ninth and continued against Frank Pearce. Sabol's single with the bases loaded, which drove in the winning run, was the sixth hit of the inning.

REPEATER

Only 28 years old, Dorothy Lee, shown with her dog "Sparky," has been wed four times and now is rumored contemplating a fifth marriage, this time to Roxy Rothafel, nephew of the late famed showman, Roxy. Miss Lee is a Hollywood actress.

SIDNEY SLUGGERS DEFEAT TWEED

Even Int. C.O.S.A. Series With Close 14-13 Win—Third Game at Tweed on Wednesday

Foxboro, Aug. 19 (Special)—After dropping the initial contest of their O.A.S.A. Intermediate C playdowns against Tweed and facing certain elimination in defeat, the Sidney "Slugegrs" jumped right back into the running when they eked out a close 14-13 decision over the northern lads in the second game of the series played at the Stirling Agricultural Grounds last night. With the series all tied up at one game each it will now be necessary for a third game between these two evenly matched teams before the issue is settled and, not agreeing to what neutral diamond the game should be played upon, the rival managers decided to toss a coin for choice of home grounds. The Tweed lads won the toss and the third and deciding tussle will be staged in the northern town next Wednesday evening.

Extra heavy clouting during the latter part of the game featured last night's playoff contest as the batters really went to town on the opping hurlers to pound out home runs and triples galore. Shortt started on the mound for the winners and pitched real good ball to hold the visitors to two runs up until the sixth when Tweed went to work on his delivery to score ten runs in the seventh and ninth to come within an ace of tying the ball game. Davidson served them up for the losers and pitched fair ball until the last of the seventh when the Sidney boys went five runs up on their rivals and S. Meraw took over the hurling chores to stop the homesters' hitting barrage.

L. Meraw and Wagar went well in the field for the losers, while the entire outfield came to Shortt's support to keep the Tweed lads in submission. Wright for the winners led all the hitters of the night, connecting for two home runs and a triple in five official trips to the plate, while Woods also connected for the circuit as did Orr and Wagar for the losers.

Errors were responsible for the first inning scores by each team but thereafter the boys tightened up and played good ball until the last part of the game when another batch of miscues accounted for a number of runs. Sidney made the count 4-2 in their half of the third as Wright and Woods got aboard to be scored by Jury's double and made it 5-2 in the fifth as Wright started out with a triple to score when Thrasher's hit went for an error.

Tweed were held off the score sheet from the first until the sixth when they scored once to cut into the Sidney boys' lead but the homesters tallied four times in their half as a couple of walks and home runs by Wright and Woods gave them a substantial lead. Tweed came right back at them however, and evened the count at nine all in the first half of the seventh when the visitors batted all the way around to score six runs on three walks and four safe hits including a homer by Orr. The homesters went right out in front again in their half when they got to Davidson for five runs to take a lead which the Tweed lads failed to match, although they came close by staging a determined four run finish in the ninth before Wray snared L. Meraw's lifter to right to end the game. S. Meraw replaced Davidson on the mound in the seventh and after allowing a couple of runs in that frame held the Sidney lads off during the balance of the pastime.

The lineups:

Tweed: Langevin lf; L. Meraw 3b; Edsbury ss; Wagar cf; Orr c; S. Meraw rf and p; Burrows 2b; Tummon 1b; Davidson p and rf.

Sidney: Wray rf; Brown 3b; Wright 2b; Woods ss; Thrasher c; Jury cf; Campbell and Radford lf; Peacock and Pyear 1b and Shortt p.

'Jug' McSpaden 'Hot' Golfer Has the 'Wiseacres' Guessing

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 19 (CP)—The air was filled with "ifs" and "buts" as the men woh should know but don't, figured the possibilities in the final two rounds of the Canadian open golf championship today.

Double-crossed once by the deceptive beauty of Riverside Golf and Country Club, the professionals themselves were agreed only that someone with 143 or better, and not necessarily Harold (Jug) McSpaden, the leader from Winchester, Mass., would win the $1,000 and the Seagram Gold Cup that accompanies the money and victory.

From McSpaden with his 67-69—136 the leaders fanned out, with Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N.J., second at 69-70—139; Stan Horne of Montreal and Arthur Hulbert of Toronto, tied in third place at 141, and Vic Vhezzi of Deal, N.J., and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., tied for fourth at 143.

The argument around the hotel lobby centred about who would score the lowest with the pressure on in the last 36 holes. The burly Guldahl, known as a man with icy nerves, and McSpaden, a quiet fellow who doesn't appear to be bothered easily, drew their supporters. Surprisingly it was Harrison, seven strokes off the pace who was mentioned most.

"Why, if the Dutchman gets going tomorrow he's liable as not to have two 67s and pick up everything," said John Thoren, Boston pro who was too far back at 155 to consider himself.

McSpaden's four-under 136, one of only two scores better than Riverside's par, gave him a good working margin. The Jug had cooled off a bit from his opening-day 67 as he bounded into a little trouble yesterday, but he showed he could get out of rough and sand as well as play them all through the centre. Once McSpaden blasted out a sand trap—and Riverside's sand isn't very chummy—to four feet from the pin and a par.

Pastor Won't 'Bicycle' This Time In Bout with the Champ

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 19 (AP)—Bob Pastor a stubborn young man, wants things his own way and he wants to be heavyweight champion and by getting the one, he figures he can't miss the other when he tangles with Joe Louis.

They meet for the second time over the 20-round route the night of Sept. 20 in Detroit.

"I'm not going to fight his fight" the former collegian insisted today. "He's going to fight my fight.

"I don't know what plan I'm going to use yet, but I won't be on a bicycle. That's what they said about be the last time I fought Joe. This time I'll keep moving raound, and I know he can't hit a moving target.

"At the same time, he can be tagged with a left hand. Ask Tony Galento about that one.

Pastor is a huskier young man than when he was outpointed by the Brown Bomber before. And he is more experienced. That time, he weighed 179 and it was his first 10-round fight.

"I weigh about 187 now," he said. "I've put on weight where it was needed'."

Par yielded only four times in the first round of the Canadian Open Golf championship, now being held on the Riverside course at St. John, N.B., as the Riverside course proved a hoodoo to many of the contestants who had underestimated the difficulties of the course. Harold "Jug" McSpaden, three-times Massachusetts open champion, took a two-stroke lead on the field of 82 by shooting a 67 to put him two strokes ahead of Ralph Guldahl, the leading favorite of the tournament. Arthur Hulbert, of Toronto, and Ted Bishop, of Boston, were the only other two members of the large field to break par 70. Hulbert, one of Canada's leading pros and Bishop, an unknown who startled the gallery with his fine round, both shot a 69. Phil Farley came up with a sparkling 70 to trail the four leaders.

OILERS TRIM ALL-STARS IN BENEFIT GAME

Players of League Paraded Before City Champions

SCORE IS 7-4

Even the choicest selection of players of the remaining softball clubs in the Belleville City Softball League couldn't take the measure of the Shell-Aajmaa "Oilers" in a benefit All-Star game played at Coleman Flats last evening when the local O.A.S.A. representatives proved their power by soundly trouncing a selected All-Star aggregation by a 7 to 4 count. The game was played as a benefit fixture in favour of league umpire Josh Maracle, who sustained a fractured ankle while on duty as an official and over $40.00 was realized in the venture.

In battling the league titlists the All-Stars trotted out various players from all other four clubs in the league, but Johnnie Bawden, ace hurler of the Shell "Oilers" again proved his mound prowess by hurling an eight hit game, as his teammates pounded three of the "Stars" hurlers for a total of 11 safeties. An error, singles by Sero and O'Neill and a home run by Bawden gave the "Oilers" a substantial four run lead in the initial frame, an advantage the All-Stars were never able to overcome, although they scored two in the first and two in the fifth to battle the "Oilers" to a 5-4 score until the ninth, when again Bawden proved his offensive ability by clouting a double with two on to cinch the piece despite the fact the All-Stars rushed pinch hitters into the fray in the final stanza.

Two Homers

Sero, with a home run and two singles led the hitters as O'Neill had three one base hits while Bawden helped his own cause with a home run and double, both hits counted runs. Green and Tuttle led the All-Stars with the willow with Genereaux and Whitehead getting two hits each and relief pitcher Connie Harris hitting for the circuit in the fifth.

Steve Hook, a junior pitcher, started the game for the All-Stars on the mound, with Harris and Jim Hunter following in order. Bawden hurled the complete game for the "Oilers" and struck out seven, while the All-Star hurlers whiffed six between them.

The score by innings:

		R	H	E
Shell-Aajmaa	401 000 002—	7	11	2
All-Stars	200 020 000—	4	9	4

Batteries: Shell-Aajmaa, Bawden and E. Green; "All-Stars": Hook, Harris, Hunter and M. Green and Tuttle.

Umpires: Thomas and Tuttle.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

With the usual pomp and ceremony of a military spectacle, the fifth annual R.C.A.F. field day and aerial demonstration attracted thousands of persons from around the district yesterday. All facilities for major setting of track and field sports was afforded the airmen-athletes and several air station records were shattered. Of course the chief attraction, insofar as the general public was concerned, was the aerial demonstration of formation and aerobatics, to say nothing of the parachute jumping. Also of much interest was the display of modern aeroplanes in a special zone where the public was afforded close views of these mammoth man-made birds of the air. Incidentally we learned yesterday that an up-to-date and modern athletic field is being planned for the Trenton Air Station next year. The recreation park will include a baseball diamond with bleachers and all the trimmings. Now that baseball has been firmly established at Trenton Air Base through the Bay of Quinte League, we expect to see the game flourish another year.

As the Flyers and Belleville launch into their O.B.A. play-off series, commencing in Belleville Tuesday evening, we find little difference in their year's standing, with the possible exception that the airmen seem to be the more improved team of late. Of the six games played between these two clubs the Flyers won three, Belleville two and the remaining game was played as a 1-1 draw. With the sole exception of Joe Kelleher's no run no hit game against the airmen of June 15th last, the remaining games have seen closely contested ball throughout. The Air Force have three tried and proven hurlers in "Spider" Webb, Harry Dole and Smith, while Bud Wilkins will pin his hopes on Joe Kelleher and Chuck Barriage, with Lefty Weeks being groomed for the relief slot, besides doing yeoman duty in the field and with the willow. However, the "Orfuns" are badly in need of a shortstop before they clash with the Flyers in this knock-out series.

Members of the noted House of David baseball team, that touring band of bewhiskered ballisters, had about everything they possessed, except their precious beards, shorn at St. Thomas recently. The bewhiskered gents were not given a shave and hair cut, but their personal valuables were whisked away during the game. First Claude Zachary, 22 year old House of David pitcher, had his leg broken sliding into third at St. Thomas. During the game thieves entered their dressing room and stole five pocketbooks, cash included a dozen new baseballs and a gold watch. "The original clip joint and we don't mean a barber shop," bewailed the bewhiskered ballisters after discovering their ill fate.

Do you remember when Albert (Scotty) Campbell, Canadian amateur golf champion in 1933, retained his crown five year sago today at Montreal. The young Seattle shotmaker downed Canada's first ranking amateur, Sandy Somerville of London, one up.

Last night's benefit softball game proved once again that the Shell Oilers are just about tops when it comes to the mushball business in this neck of the woods and judging from their play all season they will be tough to beat in the O. A. S. A. playdowns. We were elected as skipper of the "All Stars" and frankly speaking did a mighty poor job directing softball, as a good manager might have taken the measure of Johnnie Bawden and company with the select array of talent that was afforded us, but Bawden was a little too good, he scattered his hits well. However, the cause was a good one and the game should have been appreciated as a 7-4 score is always good softball. Now the next in line is the city play-off for the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy between the "Oilers" and Point Anne commencing Monday night at the Flats. The Point Anne players last night made a splendid showing and feel they are equal to the "Oilers" at any stage of softball.

'Ammering 'Enry Armstrong, the sepia-flash who renews his feud with Lou Ambers next week will hang up the leather for good within the next twelve months. Hank has punched his way to upwards of two hundred thousand berries and figures it's as good a time to quit now as ten years from now. He'll go to Rome this year to tangle leather with Aldo Spuno, a spic who is under the wing of Mister Mussolini's boy Bruno, meantime he is training faithfully for his go with Larruping Lou Ambers who the experts give a more than good chance to knock the stuffing from the chocolate soldier from Harlem.

SPORT CHIPS—"Jug" McSpayden, Winchester, Mass., golfer is still blazing a meteoric path across the Canadian open golf melange. He cracked old Man Oar for another jolt yesterday and is a hot favorite to win the title. . . . Rufus the Red Ruffing scored his eighteenth yesterday at the expense of the Mackmen. . . . Jack Medica, United States swim star is expected in Belleville today to spend a vacation among the bass haunts of the district. . . . Toronto's fading pill-pounders have apparently assumed the role of the "Giant-killer". Yesterday they bumped off the league-leading Jersey City "Jernts" for their third successive win. . . . And so to the north country where we expect to bring back the granddaddy of all the 'lunge.

Will Not Give up Hope

"We desired and we do not have the heart to give up the hope that feelings of moderation or equity will serve to avert the conflict which according to every indication would exceed the past one in destruction and in spiritual and material ruin.

"We do not cease trusting that the rulers of peoples, in the hour of decision, will turn away from taking such a serious responsibility as making appeal to force.

"But above all human hearts, resting in the wisdom of men and in the depths of goodness which is in them, our eyes are raised to the omnipotent father of mercy and God of every consolation who makes the nations curable.

"Of him, in whose hands are the hearts as well as the minds of the rulers, we wish to implore that in his infinite goodness and compassion for the human race would cause war to cease wherever it rages and benignly preserve all from new and more cruel conflicts.

"Grant, God: That on this world troubled as a sea in storm, that there appears and shines that peace, that calm, that active harmony among peoples and nations for which with redoubled fervor we do not cease to send up the fervent and incessant plea: DaPacem: Domini, Diebus Nostris." ("Lord: give us peace.")

ONTARIO AND B. C. HARVEST BUMPER PEACH CROP

A preliminary estimate by the Federal Department of Agriculture indicates that a bumper crop of peaches are being picked in Ontario and British Columbia this year. The estimate places the 1939 crop in Ontario at more than 650,000 bushels, an increase of 16 per cent over the 1938 crop, which was a good one, and in British Columbia at 143,000 bushels, 10 per cent. more than last year. Some indication of the bountiful crop may be gathered from these pictures of the peach crop in the Niagara peninsula.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Captain Fury"

With Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen and June Lang playing the top roles, Hal Roach's "Captain Fury" massive adventure story of Australia's Robin Hood, the "must see" picture of 1939, opens next at the McCarthy Theatre. "Captain Fury" is the true story of dauntless men and brave women who migrated to the barren brush country of Australia to hew a nation out of a strange wilderness.

Paul Lukas, John Carradine, George Zucco, Douglas Dumbrille and Virginia Field, featured in support of the starring trio, portray the strangely assorted characters who join in this march of progress in the pioneering days of the early 19th Century. "Captain Fury" is another release from United Artists who have made possible the showing at the McCarthy Theatre of some of the very best productions ever made, including "Stella Dallas," "Goldwyn Follies," "Wuthering Heights," "Stagecoach," "Prison Without Bars" and others which are to follow like "Four Feathers," "The Man In The Iron Mask" and "They Shall Have Music." The program in addition to the feature "Captain Fury" will consist of three splendid featurette subjects namely, "Dangerous Dan McFoo," an amusing technicolor Merrie Melody cartoon, Floyd Gibbon's True Adventure story entitled "Toils of the Law" and "Gadeteers," a screen novelty loaded with laughs.

"Good Girls Go To Paris"

Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell, Walter Connolly and Joan Perry, head the gay cast of "Good Girls Go To Paris" the uproarious comedy feature presentation, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and if you want a good evening's screen program, hurry to see this World's Fair of fun," Lone Star Pioneers" and "The Early Bird" two more attractions of real entertainment are also presented in addition to "Good Girls Go To Paris" at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Tarzan Finds a Son"

Thrills, drama and tender romance, told amid the jungles of Africa, are enthralling audiences at the Belle Theatre where "Tarzan Finds a Son" reuniting Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan is now playing. A new character comes to the screen in the fourth of the stories based on the Edgar Rice Burrough characters in a "Tarzan, Junior", played by John Sheffield, amazing five-year-old athlete who played the boy in "On Borrowed Time" on the New York stage.

The new story deals with the finding of a baby, only survivor of a plane wreck in the jungle. Tarzan and his mate raise the boy. A safari arrives searching for plane survivors because of a legacy in England, and the boy becomes the centre of a plot to conceal his claim. Tarzan refuses to surrender the boy in any event, and Jane tricks him, feeling that the boy should return for his birthright. This leads to capture of the party by savages. A wild ride of a chimpanzee cavalry mounted on elephants with Weissmuller at the head, routs the savages in a dramatic climax.

The cavalry charge, rescue of the baby from a charging rhinoceros, amazing under-water swimming by Weissmuller and young Sheffield, and dramatic sequences in the jungle tree house are high points in the adventure romance. Star animal actors include Cheeta, the famous Tarzan chimpanzee, Queenie, Tarzan's elephant friend, and Baby Bee, smallest baby elephant in the United States.

The players include Ian Hunter, Henry Stephenson, Frieda Inescort, Henry Wilcoxon, Laraine Day and Morton Lowry. Hundreds of "natives" appear in bizarre ceremonies and the sequence in the great torture hall into which the herd of elephants crashes. Authentic native chants in Swahili lend a bizarre charm to the fantastic rites of the voodoo worshippers.

Famed funmakers and stars of radio are featured in the multiple-reel musical comedy "Men of Steel" to be presented on the same program with the popular Belle newsreel and a clever comicolor cartoon "Goldilocks and the Three Bears".

INTERLUDE

ROBERT McLAUGHLIN

Eddie saw them when he turned the corner and quick anger bubbled inside of him.

Betty was leaning back against a lamp post, her slim hands behind her. Leaning over her, braced with one hand aganist the post was Sid Wise, his street-gamin face white and pasty in the light.

Betty was the first to notice Eddie's angry approach. She ducked beneath Sid's braced arm. "Hello, Eddie," she said doubtfully.

Sid Wise came around more slowly.

"Lo, Ed," he offered.

Eddie went up to him. His finger jabbed Sid beneath the collar bone. "Scram!"

The word came out harshly and Sid went back on his heels a trifle from the prodding. "What's a matter?" he asked.

"You know d— well what's the matter," Eddie told him. "Now move."

"Now Eddie . . ." said Betty.

Sid Wise shrugged as a man does when faced with complete unreason. He flashed a smile at Betty and turned abruptly away.

"Gee, Eddie," said Betty. "We were only talkin'. What's wrong with that? I was waitin' for you, Eddie, and Sid just happened to come along."

"Come on," said Eddie roughly.

"I don't know what's the matter with you," she said. "I'm old enough to take care of myself. What harm can Sid Wise do talking to me on a public street?"

"I don't want that weasel near you," snapped Eddie. "I've said it before and I'll say it now."

"I get kind of sick of this Eddie," she said slowly. "It's no fun for me to work all day and then wait till ten o'clock before you're through school. I don't mind waiting—" she went on hurriedly—"but you ought to let me talk to somebody."

"You can talk to people," he said in exasperation. "But why does it have to be Sid Wise?"

She shrugged. "You acted the same way about Tony Herro and Buck Civak."

He stopped, took her arm. "Listen, Betty. You know what I want. I want to get us both out of this neighborhood. I'm graduating this year and can get a decent job. We'll get married and move up north. Until then you can at least stay clear of Sid and Buck and the rest of those hoods. That's all I ask."

She flared back at him: "What do you want me to do? Talk to a bunch of grannies? The girls all go with those fellows. They're none the worse for it. They're—"

Eddie released her arm as though burned. "If that's what you think, you'd better stick down here. It's where you belong. I'm going to make something of myself, not be a cheap hood all my life. You can do what you d—n please."

She sighed and continued on her way. She and Eddie had been fighting a lot lately. Of course it wasn't easy for Eddie, handling freight all day and going to school at night. But it wasn't any fun for her either. She'd give anything for one night of music and laughter!

"Hello, beautiful," said Sid Wise.

She stopped and he stepped from the car at the curb. Buck Civak was at the wheel.

"Where's Eddie?" asked Sid.

"He's gone home."

"Well, well. These students! Buck and me are going to the Dreamland; want to come along?"

"No. I'm tired," said Betty.

"Come on, if you're goin'," called Buck.

Sid was lighting another cigarette. "Well?" he said.

Betty shrugged. "All right. I'm leaving early though."

She sat between Buck and Sid in the front seat and Sid's arm was carelessly crooked over her shoulder. "We'll have some fun, eh baby?" he said.

Betty didn't answer. She was thinking of Eddie hunched at his desk; she could almost picture his bent, earnest face. He had told her that he slept fitfully while his head whirled formulas and a scarlet light shone behind his closed lids. Betty sudenly felt very small and a little mean.

"Come on, baby," said Sid. "Look alive. We're out for some fun."

"How about stopping for a drink?" asked Buck.

"Good idea. That'll wake Betty up."

"No, wait a minute," said Betty. "I've got a better idea. There's a new girl working at the store. She's cute. Let's get her for Buck."

"Sounds good to me," said Buck. "I can always use a new filly."

"Where she lived?" answered Sid. Betty gave the address. Sid is right, she told herself. I should wake up.

When the car pulled to the curb, Betty got out. "Be with you in a second," she told them. "We won't be long."

Sid was on his third cigarette when he said: "Cripes! what's keeping those dolls. Honk the horn, Buck."

Buck's hand hesitated over the knob. He peered with sudden intensity at the house. "Say . . ." he said slowly. "Ain't this the place where Eddie lives?"

Sid stared in turn. He flung away his cigarette. "Start the motor," he barked. "And if there's one crack outa you I'll bust your head."

Good Type Hogs In August

Again we are reminded that it is only a short time until Belleville Fair, which is the first of several fairs that are held each year in the Belleville district.

The fair has a two-fold purpose for the exhibitor of live stock. In the first place he hopes to win the prizes offered and in the second place he hopes to sell breeding stock.

To the farmer who may be considering the purchase of breeding stock in the near future the fair offers an excellent opportunity of comparing what the different breeders have to offer. Time and money wisely spent in purchasing breding stock usually pays good dividends in the future.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of August 18, 1939, are as follows:

Trading Dull on Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 19.—Butter prices took another fractional downturn on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs closed the week on a firmer note, while cheese displayed an easier tendency in stagnant trading, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The butter market was quiet and draggy, and brokers reported that buyers displayed very little interest in offerings. Trading was almost too limited to establish actual selling prices, as only odd lots were sold to fill immediate requirements. First grade Ontario creamery solids eased to 21 cents a pound, while a few sales of western butter were made at 21¼ cents.

Higher prices on the Montreal egg market were reflected at Toronto as the local market developed a firmer undertone, and grade B eggs gained a cent in two sections of trading. Demand was improved and supplies were light. Prices were generally steady. A medium eggs and B grades continued to receive the best inquiry.

Montreal Eggs Improve.

Montreal, Aug. 19 (CP) — Egg prices were firmer on produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Quebec No. 1 potatoes were again unchanged, while Quebec No. 2 added 5 cents. The price to creamery of Quebec-pasteurized butter delivered in Montreal or current make dipped ¼ cent, while the price of cheese to factory delivered in Montreal for current make held steady.

Job price of first grade creamery butter prints was 22¼-22¾, and of first grade solids 21¾-22¼. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Price to creamery of Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter delivered in Montreal for current make was 20¾, and Quebec No. 2 pasteurized butter price was 19¾. Receipts: 515 boxes.

Price to factory of Ontario white cheese delivered in Montreal for current make was 10 7-16 to 10 11-16, and colored 10¾ to 10 11-16. Quebec white was quoted at 10 and colored at 10¼. Receipts: 1,594 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 28 cents a dozen for A-large, 26 for A-medium, 21 for A-pullets, 20 for B-large 15 for C. Receipts: 619 cases.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 19—(CP)—A generally easier tone marked the week's final session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Western oils, foods, miscellaneous groups and mines displayed a definite lower trend and utilities were irregularly lower. Sales for the two hours were approximately 190,000 shares.

Higher-priced industrials generally sold off fractions but Canada Packers dipped 3 points. Goodyear dropped 1 1-2 points.

Hollinger, Dome and Lake Shore held up well against the lower tendency in high-priced golds. Sigma dropped 25 cents, Macassa lost 15 and losses of 5 to 10 cents were boarded by O'Brien, Pamour, Pickle Crow and Sylvanite.

Falconbridge featured the basemetal section with a 20-cent advance. Consolidated Smelters fell more than a point. Noranda was up 1-4 and International Nickel was down 1 1-4. Eldorado fell to 90 cents, a new low. Ventures was off 15.

Canadian Car lost 1 point and Dominion Steel 1-8 in the steel group.

Western oils showed losses ranging up to 8 cents.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Stock market traders, while still "war conscious" apparently took a little calmer view of the European rumble today and selling contracted noticeably during the brief session.

Although few issues were able to negotiate any real recovery from Friday's sharp relapse, further declines were limited to fractions in most cases. Here and there setbacks of around a point appeared on small turnovers. Transfers were about 250,000 shares.

Under water the greater part of the day were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, International Nickel, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, U. S. Rubber and General Electric. Some of these revived at the finish.

Resistant were U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Western Union, Standard Oil of N.J., Third Avenue Railway, N.Y. Central and Allied Chemical.

C.P.R. and McIntyre Porcupine slipped a trifle in the Canadian group while most others coasted along evenly. In the bond market Dominion 4's gained a minor fraction.

HEAVY OFFERINGS OF PRODUCE SEEN ON CITY MARKET

Variable Display Attracts Large Crowd of Shoppers —Prices Generally Firm

The city market was a riot of natural color today when one of the heaviest, most variable offerings of produce was displayed by a large crowd of city and district vendors. Farm and garden truck headlined the produce with chicken showing noticeable falling off from the quantity offered last week.

Price tones were generally firm, with little or no change noted from last week's quotations.

Eggs maintained their former high level with "A" selects of good quality selling at 27c and 28c the dozen. Mediums were quoted at 24c and 25c, with some ungraded stocks offered at 26c the dozen.

Young weighty broiler chickens were scarce with the small quantity offered ranging in price between 75c and 95c the pair. Spring birds were offered at from 75c to as high as $1 each, with a small amount of fowl moving slowly at from 50c each.

The outside market was filled to near-capacity with farm and garden produce. Home grown tomatoes, of splendid quality were plentiful and sold at 30c the large basket. Bushel-lots were quoted in places at $1. each. Potatoes were steady with bushels selling at $1. and peck lots at 25c and 30c.

Corn Plentiful

Sweet corn, by fare the best qual-
Sweet corn, by far the best qual-
Yellow Bantam offered at 15c and 20c the dozen ears. This vegetable was plentiful and did a brisk business during the early hours.

New onions, beets, carrots, and radishes were offered in bunch lots at 5c each and generally at three bunches for 10c. Good quality new cabbage and cauliflower sold from 5c per head. Cucumbers sold at 10c the dozen.

Imported peaches and plums formed a bulky part of the fruit offering today with a lot of vendors displaying stocks for sale. Peaches sold at 35c and 40c the basket, with plums and cherries at 45c and 50c the six-quart lot.

Raspberries, scarcer than usual, held steady at two boxes for 25c. Canteloupe also imported, could be had for as low at 5c the melon.

"Yellow Harvester" apples headed this variety of fruit, selling at 20c the basket, with "Red Asthrachans" varying in prices from 20c to 30c the half peck, according to quality. A few "Duchess" were offered at 20c the basket.

Huckleberries sold at 10c the box, as did Missouri currants and those of the red and white variety.

Whitefish and lake trout at 17c and 20c the pound respectively headed the fish display.

Flopped in Vaudeville Ten Lions to be Shot

Winter Haven, Fla., Aug. 19 (AP) —Because they flopped in vaudeville ten trained lions were to face a firing squad today.

Their manager, Humphrey Seymour, said funds for the lions' car would run out today and he saw no alternative but the firing squad. He said it cost $30 a week to feed them.

The lions were schooled here last winter for an act. Last night they were brought back from a tour—an unsuccessful one—of Georgia cities.

DIFFERENCES ARISE IN STAFF TALKS HELD IN MOSCOW

But 'Disaccordances' Bear No Relation Whatever to Far East

POLISH REPORTS DENIED

Soviet Official News Agency Issues Statement Explaining Differences

Moscow, Aug. 19—(AP)—Various differences apparently have arisen in staff talks among British, French and Russian military leaders, it was disclosed today.

The disclosure came about circuitously in Moscow morning papers in the form of a communique by Tass, the Soviet official news agency. It denied Polish reports that differences had arisen over an alleged Soviet demand for Anglo-French military assistance in case of war in the far east.

These Polish reports, the communique said, were "complete fantasies from beginning to end."

It then added: "The real disaccordance actually existing concern a quite different question having no relation whatever to the far east."

Exactly where the trouble lies the communique did not explain.

FRENCH

oric grounds in East Prussia.

(In Paris, official sources expressed concern over reports of German troop concentrations in East Prussia.)

Slovakia in Grip

Bratislava, Slovakia, Aug. 19—(AP)—The German army tightened its "protective" grip on Slovakia today with measures described by a Bratislava broadcast announcement last night as "military possession."

German troops were deployed along the Polish-Slovak frontiers for at least 100 miles—a far greater zone than that fixed by treaty last March when Germany guaranteed "Slovakia's independence for 25 years.

(In Berlin, it could not be confirmed that Germany had taken "military possession" of Slovakia but quarters close to the foreign office indicated there had been no change in German recognition of Slovak sovereignty.)

Back Door to Poland

Soldiers of the Reich were reported moving in large numbers through the high Tatras, the mountainous stronghold of northeast Slovakia which is regarded by military strategists as the back door to Poland.

Tens of thousands of German troops were observed in the vicinity of Zilina near the northwest termination of the Polish frontier.

Bratislava, the capital at the southwest tip of Slovakia, apparently remained under formal Slovak authority, but the rich Vag Valley and the northern border-land admittedly were controlled by the German military command.

Slovak radio listeners were stunned last night when an English speaking voice, with reassuring tones announced from the Bratislava station:

"Owing to the existing situation, Germany has taken military possession of Slovakia."

This action was taken for Slovakia's "protection," the announcer added.

Disquieting Reports

Bratislava was swamped with disquieting reports. Townsfolk anxiously sought to learn if the German garrison would be transferred across the Danube and military rule inaugurated.

Travellers from the north told of Arava being turned into a virtual German encampment and of Silina citizens prepared to evacuate their homes at the first hint of war.

It was learned authoritatively that General Ferdinand Csatlos offered to resign as Slovakian Minister of War last week-end rather than comply with a German suggestion that he send two divisions of his army of 30,000 to the Polish frontier. Other members of the national council, however, persuaded him to keep his post.

Slovakia Dominated by Germany

A "defence agreement" which was ratified yesterday between Slovakia and Germany was described in reliable quarters as placing this little republic's armed forces under outright German domination.

Incidentally, today's German minority newspaper proclaimed Bratislava's "Jewish problem is more than ripe."

Squads of police were sent to Bratislava's ancient Ghetto which the German minority has invaded three times this month to beat Jews and destroy property.

The German minority newspaper Grenzbote said in a front-page editorial: "It is only right that the Jews be quickly and thoroughly punished this time for their evil provocations."

The last census listed 70,000 Jews in Bratislava.

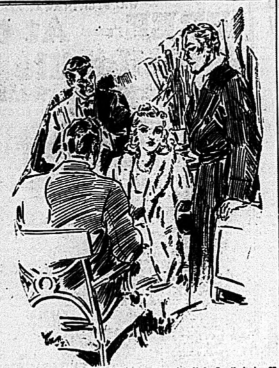
The GLASS SLIPPER

by MIGNON G. EBERHART



"But at eleven o'clock that night Mrs. Hatterick died. Is that true?" queried Detective Miller.

CHAPTER SEVEN

They reached the Hatterick house. The door opened, and Gross, the butler, stood in the doorway with an expression of painfully withheld but painfully curious disapproval. He did not wait for Andy's departure. He said as Rue entered:

"Two persons are waiting to see Madam. They insisted on waiting. I told them Madam was at the opera——"

Rue's heart gave a heavy throb in her throat. She turned slowly toward the butler.

"Who?"

She was aware that Andy had come into the hall too. Gross closed the door, shutting off escape.

"They say they are from police headquarters, madam."

"This is preposterous," said Andy. "Mrs. Hatterick can't possibly see them tonight, Gross. Tell them—"

They were all aware of the man who stood suddenly in the doorway opposite them.

"Mrs. Hatterick," he said. "We are waiting for you. I am Oliver Miller of the police. Will you be so good as to give me a few moments? The district attorney sent me here."

Andy said: "By what authority——"

"Good evening, Doctor Crittenden. By the authority of police headquarters, as you know. It's only a short interview; if you wish anyone else to be present, Mrs. Hatterick, it's quite all right."

Rue turned swiftly to Gross: "Has Doctor Hatterick returned?"

"No, madam."

"Rue, there's no need for you to see them now. We'll get Guy——"

Guy—that was Guy Cole, their next-door neighbor and one of the best criminal lawyers in Chicago. Something stiffened and tightened about Rue's throat.

Miller said easily: "Only a few questions, Mrs. Hatterick. It won't take long. I assure you we'll not distress you. You can be present, Doctor Crittenden, if Mrs. Hatterick wishes it. It isn't important."

Not important!

Rue nodded dismissal to Gross. She walked into her own drawing room, followed by Miller and Andy. Another man was waiting there; his name was Funk, said Oliver Miller in the most polite way, like an introduction. She found herself acknowledging the mousy, thin, gray little man.

She sat down, trying to appear self-possessed and calm. Andy, still in his black overcoat and white scarf, took up a position near her.

"What do you want to ask me?" she said.

"I expect Doctor Crittenden has told you why we are here," said Miller, while the little Funk watched with frightened, nervous eyes under thick black eyebrows that had a worried-looking slant. Miller waited for her answer.

Andy said: "I told her something of it, yes. That you had got the idea from a series of mischievous letters saying that the former Mrs. Hatterick's death ought to be investigated."

"Yes. Now if you'll be good enough to answer my questions yourself, Mrs. Hatterick. You are Doctor Hatterick's second wife?"

"Yes."

"You were married two months ago."

"Yes."

"Before your marriage you were a nurse?"

"Yes," said Rue again and named the hospital. Her hands were shaking. She stripped off her gloves slowly, trying to control her trembling fingers.

"Exactly. In fact, you were the nurse who took care of the first Mrs. Hatterick at the time of her fatal illness?"

"Yes. That is, I was the night nurse; there was also a day nurse."

"Miss Juliet Garder. Yes. We've already talked to her."

Talked to Julie. What had they said. What had Julie said? What had Julie thought?

"She says on the night Mrs. Hatterick died she left the house at seven. She went off duty, then, she said, and you arrived at that time."

"That is right."

"She says that at that time Mrs. Hatterick seemed much better; she had been improving for some days and was definitely better. But at eleven o'clock that night, Mrs. Hatterick died. Is that true, Mrs. Hatterick?"

"Yes, that's true. She fell into a coma shortly after I came on duty; I thought it was a natural sleep until I went to her about ten, I think it must have been, to take her pulse."

"Why did you do that?"

"Take her pulse, you mean? I took it several times each night and made the entry on my chart; as a rule I did it, if she was asleep, without waking her."

"Chart. Do you have those charts?"

Rue thought back.

"I don't know. In the hospital your charts are kept on file, but when on private duty I've never made it a custom to keep my charts. Someone may have kept them; I don't know."

"You mean someone in the household? A maid?"

"Perhaps. Perhaps Doctor Hatterick has them."

"Dr. Crittenden was the attending physician. Do you happen to have the charts, Doctor Crittenden?"

"No. I looked at them every day when I came to see—to see my patient."

"Were you very much surprised when the first Mrs. Hatterick died?" Miller asked Rue.

Steady, thought Rue. Andy was as still as a graven image.

"I hadn't expected it. But unpredictable things like that do happen sometimes; a nurse and doctor can do their very best with a patient and still lose the patient."

CHAPTER EIGHT

"Did your husband—that is Doctor Hatterick himself—attend his wife when she was ill?

"No. A doctor never attends members of his own family."

"But I expect the attending physician enjoys the complete confidence of the, say, physician in the family. In other words, did Doctor Crittenden ever consult Doctor Hatterick about Mrs. Hatterick's illness?"

"I'll answer that for you," said Andy. "Yes, certainly. He knew and approved of my treatment and diagnosis."

"Did he suggest any part of that diagnosis?"

After a second Andy said: "No, it was my case."

"I see. Mrs. Hatterick, was the first Mrs. Hatterick altogether happy in her family relations?"

"I can't possibly answer that question," said Rue. "I was her nurse, not her confidante. There was no reason to suppose she was not happy."

"Your marriage to your patient's husband took place not more than ten months after Mrs. Hatterick's death? Now I don't want you to misunderstand me; you must realize that when so short a period elapses between the death of a man's first wife and his remarriage, people are bound to ask questions."

"There were reasons; my husand will tell you what they were. Is there anything else you wish to know?" Rue was suddenly, furiously angry; but she was frightened too.

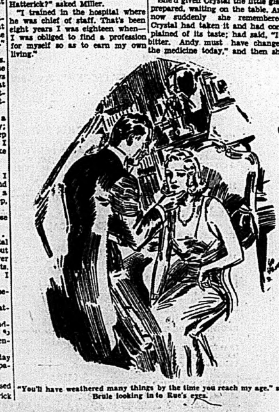
The little man, Funk discovered a bronze figure on the table near him, touched it with an exploring hand and said in a morose and scared voice: "Home. Daughter...."

"Exactly," said Miller. "Quite comprehensible, I'm sure."

"....How long," finished the little Funk, and shrank behind the table and wouldn't look at anyone.

"How long have you known Dr. Hatterick?" asked Miller.

"I trained in the hospital where he was chief of staff. That's been eight years I was eighteen when—I was obliged to find a profession for myself so as to earn my own living."



"You'll have weathered many things by the time you reach my age," said Brule looking into Rue's eyes.

"Eight years ago; you've known him for eight years then?"

"Certainly."

"Knew him well, I expect."

"That's enough of that line, Miller," said Andy. "Have you any real evidence that Mrs. Hatterick—Crystal Hatterick, that is—was murdered?"

"We've put the cards on the table, Dr. You know exactly what our position is."

"Mrs. Hatterick has answered everything you've asked her. She'll be right here in case you have any further inquiries——"

"Going," murmured a small voice at the door, and Funk scuttled out of sight into the hall.

Miller, unperturbed said: "All right, Doctor Crittenden. The body's to be exhumed as soon as we get Doctor Hatterick's consent. Then there'll be an autopsy. But if we had some notion of what to look for it'd be a quicker and easier job for the chemists. You don't happen to know, do you, Mrs. Hatterick, whether or not the first Mrs. Hatterick took any kind of drugs—I mean, medicinally or otherwise? It's a help, you know, to know what to eliminate when you're searching for an unknown drug."

"Naturally she was given medicines," said Rue. "Nothing else."

"Medicines. Did you give her medicine the night she died?"

"She doesn't need to answer that," said Andy quickly. "You're exceeding your duty, Miller."

"She will answer though," said Miller.

Medicine. Yes, she had. She remembered it so clearly; the small glass with the prescribed medicinne, diluted with water, already prepared. Julie had prepared and left it on the little table by the screen. Rue herself gave it to Crystal at eight. Crystal had taken it and....

The marquetry floor with its soft rugs wavered and rocked under Rue's silver slippers; the lights trembled and blurred; the whole world as she knew it spun around and changed its color. For they were right. Crystal had been murdered.

And she, Rue, had murdered her.

Not intentionally; but actually, physically it had been Rue's hand that finally accomplished Crystal's death.

She'd given Crystal the little glass prepared, waiting on the table. And now suddenly she remembered; Crystal had taken it and had complained of its taste; had said, "It's bitter. Andy must have changed the medicine today," and then she drank it.

Andy's voice was speaking, sharply, with a warning note in it. He was saying: "Certainly she gave her medicine and I prescribed it. Why not? Anything else would be most unusual."

After the police had gone Andy said, "You weathered that. Rue, what was it you remembered? I knew by your look there was something."

"The medicine. I gave it to her; Julie had prepared it and left it in a glass on the table where we kept her medicines and water. I gave it to Crystal, and I remember that she tasted it and looked at me and said it tasted bitter; she laughed a little and said, 'Andy must have changed my medicine today,' and then she drank it, while I stood there watching her."

Andy's face was drawn and gray-looking, older suddenly and stern, as he asked: "You say Julie had prepared it? Before she went off duty?"

"Yes."

He rubbed his hands through his hair.

"If it was in the medicine anybody could have put it there. Who was in the house— But it doesn't matter. There's no use in our asking questions, inquiring, trying to run the thing down now. The thing is to admit nothing. Tell them nothing—and hope that nothing will show up in the autopsy. After a year——"

"It's been a year," she said slowly. "If she was poisoned, would it be traced? Could it be traced? Oh, I know arsenic would remain, but it wasn't arsenic, Andy. There were no symptoms of that."

"Any organic poison can be traced—or almost any organic poison. The symptoms—coma and all that—suggest morphine, opium, possibly luminal in sufficient quantity. If I'd thought of murder...."
